ON THE TEXT OF BEOWULF

THE editors of Beowulf have, with rare exceptions, concentrated their attention upon the problem of fixing and interpreting the text, and have avoided discussing the literary history of the poem. Theories as to the origin and structure of Beowulf have been developed, not in editions, but in monographs such as those of ten Brink, Müllenhoff, and Boer.

This practice is probably sound: and in accordance with it I have made no pretence here to deal with questions of the "higher criticism." I hope to attempt this in an Introduction to the Study of Beowulf, which is to be issued separately. But an editor ought to give an account of the principles upon which he has worked, and the relation of his text to the MS. This duty is particularly incumbent upon him, when he is revising a standard text.

THE MANUSCRIPT

The Beowulf has been preserved in one manuscript only, written about the year 1000: a feature which it shares with most extant Old English poetry. As to the history of this manuscript we have no information, till we find it in the collection formed by Sir Robert Cotton, which is now in the British Museum. From its position in the book-cases of this collection the MS. containing Beowulf received the name and number (Cotton Vitellius A. 15) by which it is still known. Our first record of it dates from 1705, when Wanley in his Catalogue of Anglo-Saxon Manuscripts described our poem as telling of the wars which a Dane, Beowulf, waged against the Kings of Sweden. ms

Twenty-six years later occurred the disastrous fire in which so many of the Cottonian MSS. were either destroyed or, like the Beowulf MS., damaged.

It was not till the eighteenth century was drawing to a close that any serious attempt was made to master the poem. Thorkelin, an Icelander by birth, inspired by that revival of historical studies which marked the close of the eighteenth century in Denmark, and doubtless led by Wanley's misdescription of the MS., came to England, made a transcript of the MS., and caused a second transcript to be made. After twenty years of labour his edition was nearing completion, when in 1807 "the Englishman came, the damned thief¹," bombarded Copenhagen, and incidentally destroyed Thorkelin's translation and notes. The much more valuable transcripts of the MS. fortunately escaped. But the work had all to be done again, and it was not till 1815 that the first edition of the Beowulf appeared, under the title of De Danorum rebus gestis...poema Danicum, dialecto Anglo-saxonica.

Thorkelin's ignorance has been harshly censured by later students, who have often forgotten that, by his two transcripts, made more than forty years before any Englishman cared to study the poem, the Scandinavian scholar had done a service, the value of which cannot be exaggerated. For after Thorkelin's time the MS. continued to deteriorate steadily, by the dropping away of its charred edges². Thorkelin's mis-translations simply do not matter to us. What does matter is that he recorded what was to be read in the MS. at the time he saw it. He, and, to a greater extent, the transcriber whom he employed, made many mistakes: but the two transcripts correct each other: and the mistakes are of a type easily detected and explained. Indeed Thorkelin's ignorance of Anglo-Saxon, and the ignorance of his scribe, add immensely to the value of their transcripts. Had they known more, they would have been tempted to fill in from conjecture such gaps as they did find, and this would have deprived their testimony of its value.

Thorkelin's transcripts are generally referred to as A (the copy made by Thorkelin's order) and B (the copy which he made personally). Both belong to the year 1787: they are preserved in the Royal Library at Copenhagen.

In 1830 the MS. was again copied by Thorpe, who however did not publish till a quarter of a century later. In 1833 (and more correctly in a second edition, in 1835) Kemble published the results of his inspection. In 1861 N. F. S. Grundtvig published a text based upon an examination both of the MS. and of Thorkelin's transcripts. In 1876 Kölbing published collations in Herrigs Archiv (LVI.), and both Wülker (1881) and Holder (1881: from his notes made in 1876) prefixed to their texts a transcription of the MS., letter by letter.

Finally, in 1882, a facsimile of the MS. was published by the Early English Text Society, with a transcription by Prof. Zupitza (quoted in the notes below as "Zupitza"). This transcription embodies more than Zupitza's personal reading of the MS.; for he endeavoured "to give the text as far as possible in that condition in which it stood in the MS. a century ago." He weighed the evidence of all the scholars, enumerated above, who had examined the MS. before him, and he had the advantage of comparing the MS. itself with Thorkelin's two transcripts, which were sent to the British Museum for the purpose.

The MS. having thus been collated and recollated by eight scholars, each in his day peculiarly competent, it might well seem that nothing further remained to be done. And in fact most recent students have been content to take the facsimile, and Zupitza's transliteration, as final. But in the study of a MS. which has suffered as the Beowulf MS. has, finality is indeed hardly to be reached; and Dr Sedgefield has shown in his recent edition what good results may yet be produced by an editor who will look at the MS. for himself. Cotton Vitellius A. 15 is still a field in which a student, particularly if armed with much patience and a strong lens, may have, "on the whole, not a bad day's sport."

The facsimile is indeed an excellent one: but when it is remembered that the MS. has often to be turned many ways, and examined under many lights, before the stroke of a letter can be distinguished from some accidental crease, it is clear that no facsimile can be an adequate substitute for examination of the MS. itself. One example of this will suffice. An American scholar observed from the facsimile that the word heado in an admittedly defective passage (ll. 62-3) was apparently written over an erasure. Since the necessity for an erasure pointed to some kind of confusion in the mind of the scribe, he concluded that consequently it was here, and not, as generally supposed, at an earlier point, that the corruption had crept into the text, and that therefore the generally accepted emendations must be given up, and an attempt made to solve the crux by starting from the point where the "erasure" occurs.

Having made up his mind from the autotype that there was an erasure, he subsequently examined the MS. at the British Museum, and whilst thinking that the erasure was not as manifest in the MS. as in some copies of the autotype, he adhered to his position. The appearance of an erasure is indeed so strong in the facsimile that no one has disputed it: and I was therefore greatly surprised, when consulting the MS. itself, to find that it showed no trace of that roughening of the surface which was to be expected. On the parchment being held up to the light, all the dim marks, which in the facsimile (and at first sight in the MS. also) look like fragments of an erased word, turned out to be nothing more than strokes of the word on the other side of the leaf, which (as so often in the Beowulf MS.) shine through the parchment. Yet over the reading of these "erased letters" there has been considerable, and heated, controversy: and the discussion of the "erased word" and of the theories built upon it has been the subject of seven contributions to a philological periodical¹, consisting altogether of about ten thousand printed words. It is painful to think that the time of skilled compositors should have been thus wasted.

A facsimile is given of two pages of the MS., and of the pages in Thorkelin's transcripts A and B corresponding to the second of these.

The facsimiles of the MS. should be compared with the corresponding passage in the text. Such a comparison will show the student what are the main difficulties which beset the editor, and how he is helped by Thorkelin's transcripts. Several things will at once be obvious:

(1) The lines of the MS. do not correspond to the verse lines of the poem. This does not, however, cause any serious trouble, for so uniform is Old English metre that cases where there can be any real doubt as to the division of the lines very seldom occur. Holthausen would put geaf at the end of l. 2430: Schücking at the beginning of l. 2431.

(2) The punctuation of the MS. is meagre and unreliable. The full stop is, indeed, sometimes used as we should use it: e.g. after the word cyning in l. 11 of p. 1; but it is often placed in the middle of a sentence, as after aldorl̥ease, three lines below.

(3) Though the first word after a full stop is not infrequently written with a capital, proper names are not written with capital letters. Hence, for instance, the dispute whether hondsciō (l. 2076) is, or is not, a personal name.

(4) Vowel length is only rarely marked. Hence difficulties like that of determining whether gæst stands for gæst 'stranger' or gæst, 'spirit'.

(5) One word is sometimes written as two or even three words, and two words are often written as one. Hyphens are unknown to the scribes. Hence eofor l̥ic scionon (l. 303) has been read both as eofor-l̥ic scionon and eofor l̥ic-scionon. And in addition to the difficulty of interpreting such gaps as the scribe did undoubtedly leave, we have the further difficulty of deciding when he did, and when he did not, intend the vague and indeterminate space which he left between letters to be regarded as a gap separating two words.

(6) Though there are no glaring examples on the pages reproduced, it appears that the scribes worked mechanically, sometimes altering the entire meaning of a sentence by omitting little words, like ne, 'not.' The painfully slow care with which the Old English letters were traced would tend to make the scribe lose the general drift of what he was writing.

(7) The spelling is inconsistent: moncynn appears as mancynne (dat.) in l. 110, as moncynnes (gen.) in l. 196, and as mon cynnes (gen.) in l. 1955. Yet, compared with that of many a Middle English MS. or Tudor printed book, the spelling might almost be called uniform.

(8) It will be seen that both pages of the MS., but more particularly the second, are badly damaged at the edges and corners. With the facsimile of the second page should be compared the facsimile of the corresponding passage from Thorkelin's transcripts. When these transcripts were made the damage cannot have extended beyond the margins, and the written page must have been, like the transcript, complete¹. At the present day, out of 108 words, 26 are either quite gone or damaged. This will give some measure of the value of Thorkelin's transcripts. Of course even without them we should still be able to get much information from the texts of Kemble and Thorpe as to what the MS. was like in its less damaged state: but, as it is, we depend mainly upon Thorkelin. As explained above, the mechanical nature of these transcripts is their greatest merit. It is quite clear that the transcriber of A had no knowledge whatsoever of Old English. This is proved by spellings like relite for rehte, riga for wiga, criðan for cwiðan. How slight Thorkelin's own knowledge must have been at the time he made his transcript is shown by similar misspellings, e.g. gloguðe for geoguðe.

begins with mōste in l. 1939. Judith, which follows Beowulf in the composite MS. Cotton Vitellius A. 15, is asserted on good authority to be also in this second hand. This is important, for with the second hand many variations in spelling are introduced into Beowulf. Our first instinct would be to attribute these altered spellings to the new copyist: but since they do not occur in the Judith, this can hardly be the correct explanation, if he also transcribed that poem. In that case it would seem rather that the second scribe copied his original more exactly, and therefore retained features which the first scribe was prone to obliterate. The peculiarities of spelling which meet us in the later portion of Beowulf seem, then, to be derived from the MS. from which our existing copy was transcribed¹.

Judith

The abbreviations used by the scribes are neither numerous nor difficult. Instead of ond, which occurs only three times (ll. 600, 1148, 2040), the symbol 7 is almost invariably used. For þæt, ƿ is similarly found. It has been disputed whether ƿ can also stand for þā (see note to l. 15): if it cannot there are certainly instances in Beowulf where ƿ and þā have been confused by a natural scribal blunder. Sense is much improved by reading ƿ as þā in ll. 15, 1833, 3134 (cf. 2701) and þā as ƿ in l. 2629.

To signify m, especially final m, the scribe drew a heavy hooked line over the preceding vowel.

From the times of the earliest O.E. glosses this symbol is also used occasionally to signify n. The Beowulf scribe, like the scribe of the almost contemporary Exeter Book, does not normally use the mark for *n*². But the older MS. which he was copying perhaps did so, and this would account for such a blunder as hrūsam for hrūsan (2279) and for the frequent omission of an n in our manuscript³.

TEXTUAL EMENDATION

It is most important that the student should study the two facsimile pages of the Beowulf MS. sufficiently to familiarize himself with the forms of the Anglo-Saxon script, for it is only by this means that he will be able to weigh the value of the different conjectural emendations. A conjecture which seems a very violent one when expressed in modern type may yet appear very reasonable when we picture the form of the Old English letters. From this point of view it is a pity that we have abandoned the custom, so generally followed at the beginning of Old English studies, of printing Old English texts in type which was a conventionalized facsimile of the Old English hand. The letters are picturesque, and can be learnt in five minutes.

Much work was done in the emendation and elucidation of the text by Grundtvig, Kemble, Thorpe and Ettmüller. The constant occurrence of the name of Grundtvig in the textual notes bears witness to the frequency with which he cleared up some desperate place in the MS. But these emendations only represent a portion of Grundtvig's achievement. Working from Thorkelin's inaccurate text, he made many conjectures which, on a more careful examination, were found to be actually the readings of the MS. Such success naturally aroused confidence in his conjectural restorations.

Grundtvig a
6 The great bulk of Grundtvig's emendations were appended to the translation which he published in 1820. Other emendations were made in his edition, published in 1861. These two books have not been sufficiently distinguished by editors of Beowulf. Yet in discussing the priority of an emendation it is obviously important to know in which of two books, separated by more than forty years, a scholar may have made his conjectures. In this edition, therefore, the word 'Grundtvig,' followed by the number of a page, refers invariably to the translation of 1820; references to the edition of 1861 are specified as such.

Grundtvig had contributed a large number of these emendations to a Copenhagen paper during the year 1815¹. The perfect editor would no doubt go through these articles, and note exactly where each emendation first appeared. But life is short and there is much to do: I have therefore only referred to these periodical articles of Grundtvig where it appeared that there was some useful purpose to be gained by so doing. Generally speaking I have taken Grundtvig's publication of 1820 as summing up the results of his early work, and have not striven to go behind it.

The student must not be surprised if he finds the same emendation attributed by different scholars sometimes to Kemble and sometimes to Thorpe, since frequently Kemble's emendations were only suggested in the notes of his second volume, but were first given in the text by Thorpe; and there was so much intercommunication between the two scholars that it is not easy to say to whom belongs the credit of some particular emendations.

Much confusion has also resulted from the differences between the first edition of Kemble's Beowulf (1833: limited to 100 copies) and the second revised edition of 1835. For instance, Zupitza—than whom no one knew more of the history of Beowulf criticism, and whose premature death was a loss to Beowulf scholarship from which we are still suffering—charged other editors with inaccuracy in their quotations of Kemble²: the explanation is that they were using the one edition, and he was using the other, and that the two editions differ very widely. I have therefore thought it better to differentiate. 'Kemble ⁽¹⁾' refers to the edition of 1833; 'Kemble ⁽²⁾' to that of 1835; 'Kemble ⁽³⁾' to the list of emendations which Kemble appended to his translation in 1837. 'Thorpe' refers, of course, to Thorpe's edition of 1855.

The labours of Ettmüller covered a period little shorter than those of Grundtvig. In my notes, 'Ettmüller ⁽¹⁾' refers to the translation of 1840: 'Ettmüller ⁽²⁾' to the abbreviated Beowulf which appeared in the book of extracts entitled

Grein
A new era begins with the publication of Grein's complete corpus of Anglo-Saxon poetry, between 1857 and 1864 (4 vols.). Grein's actual text of Beowulf, both in the first volume of this Bibliothek, and in his subsequent separate edition, is not without its faults: but the great lexicon given in the last two volumes of the Bibliothek brought to bear upon the interpretation of Beowulf the whole store of knowledge of Old English poetic speech. The student who has made some progress, and hopes to make more, will still find his best course to be the looking up in Grein's Sprachschatz of parallels for the usage of any words puzzling him. In quoting I differentiate 'Grein ⁽¹⁾' (1857); 'Grein ⁽²⁾' (1867); 'Grein ⁽³⁾' (Grein's hand-copy, corrected, as used by Wülker).

Heyne
Holder
Since Grein's day the edition of Heyne (1863, etc.), constantly revised, has continued to hold its own (English translation, Harrison and Sharp, 1882, etc.), rivalled for two decades by that of Holder (1881, etc.: last edit., 1899). Kluge added valuable conjectures to Holder's edition: to these 'Kluge' if quoted in my notes, without details, refers¹. Wülker's revision of Grein's Bibliothek (1883, etc.) by giving scrupulously accurate texts, with full collations, remedied the one fault of Grein's great work. In recent years four editions have been published: (1) Trautmann's (1904), distinguished by bold alterations of the text; (2) Holthausen's (third edit. 1912-13), invaluable for its closely packed references and bibliographies: Holthausen's treatment of the text represents a middle course between the violent alterations of Trautmann and the conservative text of (3) Schücking, whose revision of Heyne (nominally the eighth edit., 1908: tenth, 1913: but amounting in fact almost to a new work) has restored its place of honour to that classic text; whilst (4) Dr Sedgefield's text (second edit., 1913) has gone far to remove from English scholarship the reproach of neglect of the earliest monuments of our literature.

AIM OF THE PRESENT EDITION

Text. In revising the text I have made it my aim to retain that conservatism which characterised Mr Wyatt's edition. In fifty places I have, however, felt compelled, mainly on metrical grounds, to desert the MS., where Mr Wyatt adhered to it. But this is balanced by the fact that in fifty-one places I undertake the defence of the MS., even where Mr Wyatt had abandoned it.

When Mr Wyatt's edition was first issued in 1894 it was necessary for him to protest against wanton alterations of the MS. such as fāmigheals for fāmiheals. Such alterations are now no longer tolerated: and even to argue against them would be an anachronism: Mr Wyatt has the greatest reward that can befall a controversialist, that of finding his protest so generally accepted as to be out of date.

But with the increased knowledge of Old English metre which we owe to the genius of Sievers, a new reason for deserting the MS. has been approved, to some extent at least, by most recent editors. In places where the metre shows that the original poet must have used a form different from that in our extant MS., it is now usual to put that form back: to write e.g. frēga for frēa, gāan for gān, dōið for dōð.

To the present editor there seems to be no middle course between, on the one hand, leaving the language of the poem in the form given to it by its last transcribers, and, on the other hand, attempting to rewrite the whole poem in the language of the eighth century. The rule "to emend the text where the metre shows the form given in the MS. to be wrong" sounds simple, but is, in practice, not possible. For the suspected form may occur in a line which is absolutely unmetrical, in one which is merely hard to parallel, or in one which is of a type usually avoided, but undoubtedly to be found. Are we to alter in all three cases, or only in the first? And having altered a form in a place where it is unmetrical, what are we to do when we meet the identical form in a place where it is possible?

Unless we make changes right through, we merely produce a text which is an inconsistent mixture of eighth and tenth century forms.

But, it may be said, the MS. itself is not consistent, for the last transcribers here and there retained earlier forms. They did, and these forms may be of the greatest value in enabling us to trace the history of the poem. For that very reason the issues should not be confused by inserting into the text a number of ancient forms which are not in the MS. If we scatter these over the page, the student is led to believe that he has come across forms like frēga, gāan, dōið in his reading of Beowulf. All the typographical devices of italics and brackets cannot prevent this: in a poem of over three thousand lines no student can be expected to remember for very long exactly what letters are printed in italic, and exactly what in roman type.

Besides, though we may be certain, on metrical grounds, that the word gān in hāt in gān (l. 386) represents an earlier word of two syllables, we cannot be certain whether that word was gāan or gangan.

The difficulty that monosyllables in the text have to do duty as disyllables can be met quite simply. Where the metre shows that a long vowel or diphthong, such as gān, frēa was originally disyllabic, I write it with the circumflex: gān, frēa; in other cases the makron is used: hū, ðā. This method suffices to draw the student's attention to the metrical fact: at the same time he is not misled by seeing in the text a form for which there is no MS. authority, and which the original author may, after all, not have used.

To attempt to reinsert these earlier forms is indeed to carry into text editing the mistake of the architects of half a century ago, who, finding a fourteenth century church which showed traces of having been remodelled out of a twelfth century one, proceeded to knock out the Decorated tracery in order to insert their conjectural restoration of the original Norman lights. By so doing they merely falsified the history of the building, and left us with windows which are neither 'Decorated' nor 'Norman' but architectural lies.

Experience has now taught our church restorers that, however much we may regret the work of the fourteenth century remodeller, we cannot escape from it. And the same is true of the text-restoration of Beowulf. To put back into the text a few sporadic ancient forms is merely to increase confusion. To put back the whole poem into the language of about the year 700 is impossible¹. How impossible can best be shown by means of a comparison. In the case of Piers Plowman (A text) we have fifteen MSS., some belonging to a period but little later than the author's lifetime. Most of these MSS. are excellent ones, and by a comparison of them it is possible to reconstruct a text immensely better than even the best of these MSS. Yet, whilst the wording of this text can be fixed with considerable certainty, it is impossible to reconstruct the exact dialectical colouring in a form which would command any measure of general consent. How can we hope to do so, then, in the case of a text extant in one MS., transcribed nearly three centuries after the poem was first composed?

It does not follow that we need print the text exactly as it stands, relegating all attempts at emendation to the notes. It seems possible to distinguish between those changes in spelling and grammatical form which the scribes deliberately made with fair consistency, and those rarer cases where they have, generally owing to carelessness or misunderstanding, altered the wording of a passage. If the critic thinks he can emend such passages, he has every right to do so. To correct blunders which the scribes made inadvertently, and which they themselves corrected when they noticed them, is quite a different thing from putting back the language which the scribes deliberately adopted into that which they deliberately rejected.

The degree of faithfulness at which the scribe aimed of course varied greatly with individual cases. It may be admitted that some ancient scribes had almost as little respect for the MS. before them as some modern editors. But an accurate scribe did not as a rule depart from the wording of his original except as a result of oversight. On the other hand, even an accurate scribe did not hesitate to alter the spelling and form of words.

Accordingly, whilst it is often possible from MS. evidence to aim at reconstructing the exact words of a text, it is an immeasurably more difficult task, unless we have some external help, to aim at reconstructing the original dialect.

The rule which I have followed is therefore this. Where there is reason to think that the spelling or the dialectal form has been tampered with, I do not try to restore the original, such a task being at once too uncertain and too far-reaching. But where there is reason to think that the scribe has departed from the wording and grammatical construction of his original, and that this can be restored with tolerable certainty, I do so.

And here again the study of metre is of the greatest help. There can be no possible doubt that a half-line like secg betsta (l. 947) is unmetrical: that the half-line originally ran secga betsta. No device of circumflex accents can help us here, and it appears to me that the editor has no choice but to write the words as they originally stood. Yet caution is advisable: where there is even a sporting chance of the MS. reading being correct I retain it: in some instances I retain the MS. reading, though firmly believing that it is wrong; because none of the emendations suggested is satisfactory.

"I have indulged but sparingly," Mr Wyatt wrote, "in the luxury of personal emendations, because they are obviously the greatest disqualification for discharging duly the functions of an editor." This view was strongly disputed at the time, notably by Zupitza, who urged, quite truly, that it is the duty of an editor to bring all his powers to bear upon the construction of a correct text; that, for instance, one of the greatest merits of Lachmann as an editor lay precisely in his personal emendations. Yet here discrimination is desirable. We do not all possess the genius of Lachmann, and if we did, we have not the advantage he had in being early in the field. On the contrary, we find the study of Beowulf littered with hundreds of conjectural emendations. All these the unfortunate editor must judge, admitting some few to a place in his text, according more a cursory reference in his notes, but of necessity dismissing the majority without mention. It will be easier for the magistrate, if he has to sit in judgment upon none of his own offspring. True, there are editors, inflexible as Lucius Junius Brutus, who have filled many pages of periodicals with conjectural emendations, but who yet, when they accept the responsibility of editorship, admit that few or none of their own conjectures are worthy of serious consideration. But such integrity is rare; and where an editor has to judge between the emendations of so many capable scholars, he may do well for his own part to adopt a self-denying ordinance. Especially is this desirable when he is editing a text on strictly conservative lines: it would be impertinent for me, whilst excluding from the text a number of the really brilliant conjectures of recent students, to allow a place to my own very inferior efforts. I have therefore followed, and indeed bettered, Mr Wyatt's example: he made few personal emendations: I have made none.

For, indeed, conjectural emendation has been allowed to run riot. Advocates of a conservative text are often taunted with credulous belief in the letter of the manuscript—"Buchstaben-glauben." But, in fact, the charge of superstitious credulity might more justly be brought against those who believe that, with the miserably inadequate means at our disposal, we can exactly restore the original text. Prof. Trautmann assures us that the extant manuscript is grossly faulty, and on the strength of this belief puts forth an edition full of the most drastic and daring alterations. But, if we grant (for the sake of argument) that the manuscript is as grossly erroneous as Prof. Trautmann's emendations postulate, then it follows that it is too bad to afford a sound basis for conjectural emendation at all. If Prof. Trautmann's premises were correct, the only course open to the editor would be to remove merely those obvious and surface blemishes of the manuscript as to which there can be little or no doubt, and then to say: "This is the best that can be done with a text so peculiarly corrupt. I therefore leave it at that, and if I must work at text-criticism, I will choose some other text, where there is better material at my disposal, and where I can consequently proceed by critical methods rather than by guess-work."

And, without going as far as this, we may reasonably regret that much of the scholarship and acumen squandered on the conjectural emendation of Beowulf has not been devoted to certain Middle English texts. There the evidence is often abundant, and of a kind which, if properly investigated and utilized, would enable us to make indisputable corrections of important texts in hundreds of places.

Type. The chief innovation, and one which will, I expect, be generally disapproved, is the introduction into the text of the Old Eng. symbol $\mathfrak{z}$. Against this $\mathfrak{z}$ most teachers seem to cherish an unreasoning antipathy. Now, in itself, it surely matters little whether we reproduce an Old Eng. consonant by the Mod. Eng. form, or by a facsimile of the Old Eng. form. By general consent þ and ð are used: yet it would not matter if we were to write th instead. But it does matter if the symbol misleads the student. Now, whilst most consonants have much the same value in Old as in Mod. Eng., Mod. Eng. g fulfils one only of the three functions of Old Eng. $\mathfrak{z}$. To the elementary student it is really helpful to have a constant reminder of this fact. He should not be misled by the spellings hi $\mathfrak{z}$ or wi $\mathfrak{z}$ ge, as he is only too likely to be by the spellings hig or wigge.

Besides, as has been pointed out by Sievers, with the end of the Anglo-Saxon period both $\mathfrak{z}$ and g came into use: $\mathfrak{z}$ to signify the spirant, g the stop. To write g in Anglo-Saxon texts conveys the idea that the symbol $\mathfrak{z}$ was added in Middle English to signify the spirant; when in reality it was the $\mathfrak{z}$ which was used all along and the g which was added later to denote the stopped sound.

In the text I have therefore followed the Old English usage, and have written the $\mathfrak{z}$ wherever it occurs in the MS.

But where the scribe actually used G, as a capital, I have retained it. In the Introduction, Notes and Glossary I write g, as a matter of convenience.

Hyphens and Punctuation. As to the use of hyphens and the general principles of punctuation there is no change from the practice advocated by Mr Wyatt in the first edition :

It will have been seen that the MS. gives no help in one of the most difficult problems that beset the editor of O. E. poems, the question of the use of hyphens. Grein and Sweet discard them altogether. I cannot but question whether this is not to shirk one's duty. At least it is a method that I have not been able at present to bring myself to adopt, tempting as it is. The difficulty of course is as to "where to draw the line"—where to use a hyphen or to write as one word, where to use a hyphen or write as two words. The former is the chief difficulty, and here as elsewhere I have endeavoured to find the path "of least resistance." Prepositional prefixes in my text are not marked off by a hyphen from the following word ; on the other hand, adverbial prefixes, such as ūp in ūp-lang, ūt in ūt-weard, are so marked off. This then is where I have, not without misgivings, "drawn the line." Where the two parts of a compound seem to preserve their full notional force I have used a hyphen ; where the force of one part seems to be quite subordinate to that of the other, I have written them as one word. It is the familiar distinction of compounds and derivatives over again, but at a stage of the language when some compounds were in course of becoming derivatives. Doubtless there are mistakes and inconsistencies. I need hardly say I shall be glad to have them pointed out.

The punctuation of Beowulf has hitherto been largely traditional, as it were, and largely German, and German punctuation of course differs in some respects from English. Some editors have shown daring originality in the substitution of colons for the semi-colons, and marks of exclamation for the full-stops, of previous editors. Periods have usually been held too sacred to question. I may say at once that, although I have been extremely conservative in my handling of the text, I have felt and have shown scant courtesy for much of the traditional punctuation. Let me state here the principles, right or wrong, upon which I have acted. First, I have made the punctuation as simple as possible. I have therefore done away with the somewhat fine distinction between the colon and the semicolon, and have restricted the use of the former to marking the opening of an oratio recta, and to a very few similar loci, such as ll. 801, 1392, 1476. In the same way, I have, wherever possible, done away with parentheses, and with our modern meretricious marks of exclamation. If the reader's sense or emotions do not tell him where he ought to feel exclamatory, he must suffer the consequences. Secondly, I have attempted to make the punctuation logical, especially by the use of pairs of commas wherever the sequence of a sentence is interrupted by parallelisms. This may be made clearer by a reference to ll. 1235-7, 1283-4, 3051-2. But, on the other hand, I have as far as possible avoided breaking up the metrical unit of the half line with a comma.

Emendations

Notes. The chief difference between this edition and its predecessor will be found in the greater diffuseness of the notes, which have been almost entirely rewritten. "The infelicity of our times" has compelled me, as revising editor, to depart from Mr Wyatt's practice of quoting but sparsely the emendations which he did not accept. In the last eighteen years the number of emendations and interpretations has multiplied enormously, and many of these it is impossible to neglect.

To discuss at length the pros and cons of these disputed points is impossible in a text-book: such task must be left to the lecturer: but if no information on the subject is given in the text-book, the task both of lecturer and student is made unnecessarily heavy. Authorities are therefore quoted rather freely: and in the manner of quoting them a difficulty arose. To quote arguments at any length would have been to swell this book unduly; but to quote the name of the scholar who has originated any conjecture without further particulars, is to encourage the student in the pestilent superstition that he is expected to know which scholar holds which particular view: whereas in reality all that concerns him is the ground upon which a particular view is held.

Sievers

The student who reads the seventeen pages in which Sievers defends the reading egsode eorlas (l. 6) will have had a lesson which should be of permanent value to him: a lesson in Old English metre, in Old English syntax, in critical methods, and above all in the truth that a man should do with his might that which his hand findeth to do, even though it be nothing better than the emending of a doubtful line. The student who understands, if only in broadest outline, the grounds upon which Kock defends the MS. reading eorl, and Sievers declares eorl impossible, has acquired a piece of grammatical and metrical knowledge which should be of constant use to him, as he works through his Beowulf. The student who, hoping to get marks in an examination, commits to memory the fact that Kock supports eorl, Sievers eorlas, has done nothing save degrade his intelligence to the level of that of a dog, learning tricks for a lump of sugar.

For this reason, in quoting the names of the proposers or defenders of emendations or interpretations, I have indicated (as briefly as possible) the place where further particulars can be found. Not that I wish to add to the already heavy yoke of the student by expecting him to look up all, or indeed any great proportion, of such references. Even if he looks up none, a constant reminder that these are references, not formulae to be learnt by heart, is worth giving. For even the most exacting teacher will hardly demand that the student should commit to memory the year, periodical and page in which each emendation appeared. All such references are placed between square brackets, and elementary students should skip these portions of the notes.

To the advanced student it is hoped that the references may be useful: and in small classes where the lecturer uses the "Seminar" method, and expects each member of the class in turn to study specially some section or aspect of the poem, they may be worked profitably. If a student is led by these references to turn only to Klaeber's articles in Modern Philology, or Sievers' monographs in the Beiträge, they will not have been given in vain.

Glossary. Here I have tried to depart as little as possible from the plan laid down by Mr Wyatt. The glossary makes no attempt at being a complete verbal and grammatical index to the poem. It is desirable that such an index should exist: that there should be a place where a scholar who wishes to know exactly in what places even the commonest word is used in Beowulf, should be able to find the information he seeks. Such an index is supplied in Holder's edition, where all the instances in which even ond occurs will be found recorded: it is also supplied, on a slightly different plan, in the editions of Holthausen, Heyne-Schücking, and Sedgefield. Finally Mr A. S. Cook has produced a Concordance to Beowulf (Halle, 1911). The work having been done so often and so well, it would have been useless to attempt to convert the glossary to this edition into yet another complete index to the poem; and the space saved can be utilized in explaining matters more necessary perhaps to the elementary student. Indeed, as Mr Wyatt remarked, a too elaborate glossary may "rob the work of much of its educative value": it is better to "furnish the requisite amount of help and no more."

Of. vs mod. meanings

One of the chief difficulties which beset English students of Anglo-Saxon is that of preventing their knowledge of modern English from leading them astray. When we meet with the word æfter, we must remember that 'after' only gives one specialized meaning of the O.E. word: fær would seldom be correctly translated by 'fear.' Another difficulty is the wide range of meanings possessed by the O.E. poetic vocabulary, and the ease with which a highly abstract passes into a very concrete idea. Thus dugub signifies doughtiness, excellence: again, it signifies that body of tried veterans from whom the quality of dugub is particularly to be expected. But we can hardly translate dugub simply as 'warriors': for the abstract meaning reacts upon the concrete: they must be doughty warriors. A very close parallel is supplied by the English word 'chivalry,' though here the original sense is concrete. Starting with the signification of a body of horsemen, the word comes to signify the quality which should distinguish a knight. Then the abstract meaning reflects upon the concrete. When Milton speaks of 'paynim chivalry,' or Byron of the 'chivalry' gathered in Brussels before the field of Waterloo, the word means more than merely 'warriors.' So with dugub. I have elsewhere suggested translating it by 'chivalry,' to which, in both its meanings, it closely approximates: cūþe hē duguðe þēaw "he knew the rule of chivalry¹."

To avoid dogmatism, and steadily to compare one passage with another, is the only way of safety. It is by the comparative method that Klaeber has been able to throw so much light upon many dark places in the text. Many alterations have been made in the glossary in view of the arguments produced by Klaeber: but in the main the glossary remains Mr Wyatt's work, though of course I take full responsibility for it in its present form.

The MS. has been carefully examined for the purposes of this edition. Whenever Zupitza's opinion as to the reading of the MS. is quoted, it may be taken, unless the contrary is indicated, that I read the MS. in the same way, though Zupitza is quoted for authority. With regard to Thorkelin's transcripts, however, although I have examined these at Copenhagen, I have trusted mainly to Zupitza, since they are too clear to leave much room for dispute.

I have to thank many scholars for their generous co-operation.

The proofs of the Introduction, Text and Notes have been read by my former teacher Prof. W. P. Ker, and by my colleague, Mr J. H. G. Grattan. To both of them, for performing this friendly office amid great pressure of work, my most grateful thanks are due. I am indebted to them for a large number of corrections and suggestions.

Mr Wyatt most kindly placed in my hands all the material he had collected for a new edition, including a copy of Heyne's edition of 1879, with copious MS. notes by Dr T. Miller, the editor of the O.E. Bede. These MS. notes would well repay a careful investigation, and to publish gleanings from them would be an act of piety to the memory of a good scholar. I regret that through lack of time I have not been able to make as much use of them for this edition as I had hoped. Mr Wyatt has further read the proofs throughout, with scrupulous care, and I am deeply indebted to him in many ways.

in war may be grown up, and may on occasion even be warriors, but they are not dugup.

If the text should be found to be typographically accurate, thanks are largely due to two old pupils of mine, Miss E. V. Hitchcock and Mr E. Emson, and also to the Cambridge Press reader. Prof. Sedgefield kindly placed at my disposal a set of the proofs of his second edition, which has enabled me to bring up to date my references to his most valuable work.

Like every student of Beowulf, I have been particularly indebted to the bibliographical notes of Holthausen, the Heyne-Schücking glossary, the metrical researches of Sievers, and the syntactical studies of Klaeber. The footnotes give the names of the originators of emendations adopted in the text: and I have tried to give fairly exhaustive information of all readings adopted in any recent standard edition: for a student ought so to study Beowulf as to be able to translate not one particular text, but any.

Lastly, I regret that I have not been in a position to take the excellent advice recently given by one editor of Beowulf to another: that he should let his edition mature for the nine years recommended by Horace. Had I been permitted to spend so long in revising my proofs, the result would, I hope, have been a better edition: the printer's bill for corrections would certainly have been enormous. But it is well to stop weighing pros and cons, as Mosca de' Lamberti said, since "a thing done hath an end."

For giving which evil counsel, Dante saw the mutilated form of Mosca in the ninth pit of the eighth circle of Hell. If I have closed any discussion by a too hasty application of the principle 'cosa fatta capo ha' I hope my punishment may be more lenient. And so, in the pious words of an editor of four centuries ago, "If any faute be, I remyt the correctyon thereof to them that discretly shall fynde any reasonable defeaute; and in their so doynge I shall pray god to sende them the blysse of heven."

NOTE

út-, 33; án, 100; -wát, 123; wóp, 128; -wát, 210; bát, 211; bád, 264; hál, 300; bád, 301; ár, 336; -hár, 357; hát, gán, 386; mót, 442; án-, 449; sá, 507; gár-, 537; sá(-), 544, 564, 579; mót, 603; gád, 660; nát, 681; sá-, 690; -stód, 759; ábeag, 775; bán-, 780; wíc, 821; sá-, 895; -fón, 911; sár, 975; fáh, 1038; dón, 1116; sá-, 1149; mód, 1167; brúc, 1177; ár, 1187; ráð, 1201; sá, 1223; wín, 1233; -wát, 1274; -wíc, 1275; háð, 1297; hár, 1307; bád, 1313; rún-, 1325; wát, 1331; ár, 1371, 1388; áris, 1390; gá, 1394; hám, 1407; bán-, 1445; dóm, 1491, 1528; brún-, 1546; gód, 1562; ár, 1587; -bád, 1720; lác, 1863; gód, 1870; sá-, 1882; rád, 1883; scír-, 1895; sá-, 1896, 1924; gár-, 1962; scán, 1965; fús, 1966; -hwíl, 2002; líc, 2080; róf, 2084; síð, 2086; -dón, 2090; cóm, 2103; sarlíc, 2109; dóm, 2147; Hroðgár, 2155; -stól, 2196; án, 2210 (see note); fár, 2230 (see note); -pád, -bád, 2258; án, 2280; -wóc, 2287; -bád, 2302; fór, 2308; -gód, 2342; wíd-, 2346; -dóm, 2376; sár, 2468; mán-, 2514; hárne stán, 2553; -swát, 2558; -swáf, 2559; bád, 2568; -wác, 2577; -swác, 2584; -gód, 2586; wíc-, 2607; Wigláf, 2631; gár-, 2641; fáno, 2655; -réc, 2661; stód, 2679; fýr-, 2689, 2701; wís-, 2716; bád, 2736; líf, 2743, 2751; stód, 2769; dóm, 2820, 2858; -ráð, 2898; (-)cóm, 2944, 2992; áð-, 3010; fús, 3025; -róf, 3063; Wigláf, 3076; -bád, 3116; fús, 3119; áð, 3138; -réc, 3144; bán-, 3147.

The following are probably to be included, but there is some doubt:

bát, 742; bán-, 1116; blód, 1121; gán, 1163; ár-, 1168; sá-, 1652; sá-, 1850 (now either gone or covered by the paper); wát, 1863; gár-, 2043; hrán, 2270; gár-, 2674; -swác, 2681; -hróf, 3123; -hús, 3147.

On the other hand, the supposed mark over the following is possibly quite accidental: the scribes scattered little dots of ink not infrequently over the page:

brim-, 222; fus-, 232; me, 472; win, 1162; woc, 1960; dom, 2666, 2964.

With even more certainty the following supposed cases of marking may be dismissed :

we, 270 ; ancre, 303 ; hat, 897 ; al-walda, 955 ; ænig, 1099 ; þa, 1151 ; feonda, 1152 (the supposed mark is that of ár-, 1168, shining through the page) ; ac, 2477 ; he, 2704.

Schücking adds to the list of vowels marked long till, 2721 and un(riht), 2739. But the mark over these vowels is quite unlike the mark of length : it occurs again over up, 2893.

The latest and most careful scrutiny of the MS. is that of Dr Sedgefield, and I have collated my results with his.

Of the vowels which I have classed as undoubtedly marked long, Sedgefield regards many as doubtful, and others as too uncertain to be mentioned at all.

(a) Marked doubtful by Sedgefield : fáh, 1038 ; dón, 1116 ; hár, 1307 ; áer, 1371 ; án, 2280 ; -bád, 2302 ; dóm, 2376 ; wís-, 2716.

(b) Entirely omitted by Sedgefield : án, 100 ; mót, 442 ; sáe-, 544 ; -fón, 911 ; dóm, 1528 ; gár-, 1962 ; síd, 2086 ; dóm, 2147 ; -stól, 2196 ; -pád, 2258 ; -wóc, 2287 ; -réc, 2661.

After careful and repeated scrutiny under a strong lens, I have no doubt as to the vowels in both these classes (a) and (b) being in every case marked long. Many of them appear to me even more clearly so marked than do some of those which Sedgefield agrees to be certainly marked long, such as sár, 975 ; stód, 2679 ; bán, 3147.

Of the vowels which I have classed as probable, bát, 742 ; bán-, 1116 ; blód, 1121 ; ár-, 1168 ; -swác, 2681 are classed as doubtful by Sedgefield : but gán, 1163 ; sáe-, 1652, 1850 ; wát, 1863 ; gár-, 2043 ; hrán, 2270 ; gár-, 2674 ; -hróf, 3123 ; -hús, 3147, are regarded by him as too doubtful to be recorded at all.

The mark of length consists of a heavy dot, with a stroke sloping from it over the vowel. This stroke is very faint, and has often faded : in which case the mark of length can only be distinguished from an accidental blot by noting the position and shape of the dot, or by a microscopic search for traces of the stroke.

Complete certainty cannot be arrived at, since a stroke is sometimes perceptible only in certain lights. For example, after repeated scrutiny I had classed gár- (l. 2674) as one of the supposed cases of marking which might be dismissed. On a final examination I had to alter this, as I could make out the stroke fairly clearly.

Letters supplied in the text, but found neither in the MS. nor in Thorkelin's transcripts, are printed within square brackets. When it is clear that the absence of these letters from the manuscript is not due to the damage which the MS. has sustained, and that the letters can never have stood there, both square brackets and italics are used. Other deviations from the MS. are indicated in the text by italics alone, and the reading of the MS. is given in a footnote. The term 'MS. reading' must not however be taken to imply that the letters can all be read in the MS. in its present condition; but only that there is satisfactory evidence that they once stood there.

Certain letters and words which, though found in the MS., were presumably not in the original, but were added by the scribes, have been placed between brackets thus: (þara).

Long syllables which can be proved on metrical grounds to represent an earlier disyllable are marked by the circumflex: gān representing an older gān or perhaps having been substituted for the cognate gangan.

2. The original text presumably had gefrugnon, the combination of consonants making the syllable long, as, in conformity with metrical law, it should be. For a short account of O.E. metre see Introduction to Beowulf.

5. Two distinct verbs seem to be confused in oftēon: (1) oftihan*, 'to deny' (cf. Goth. teihan) construed with gen. of thing and dat. of person, as here; (2) oftēohan*, 'to tug, draw away' (cf. Goth. tiuhan) taking an acc. of the thing, as in l. 2489. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 306.]

Whether oftēah mean 'denied' or 'drew away' the mead-benches, it equally indicates a reduction to servitude. Cf. l. 11 below, and the statement of Saxo Grammaticus concerning Scioldus that 'he subdued the whole race of the Allemanni and compelled them to pay tribute.' [Ed. Holder, p. 12.]

6. eorl[as], Kemble₁: MS. eorl. This correction seems desirable (1) metrically, because the type $\text{—} \text{ } \text{ } \times \text{ } \text{—}$, though found in the second half-line (cf. ll. 463, 623, etc.), is not elsewhere found in the first; and (2) syntactically, because egsian is elsewhere transitive, and to take eorl here as = 'many an earl' seems rather forced: l. 795 is not quite parallel [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 560-576]. Yet eorl may be defensible [cf. Kock in Anglia xxvii. 219, etc.; xxviii. 140, etc.; Klaeber²⁴⁹].

7. fēa-sceaft, 'as a helpless child.' See Index of Persons: Scyld; and cf. umbor-wesende below.

þæs frōfre, 'consolation for that,' i.e. for his helplessness.

9. þāra is presumably the addition of a scribe, being opposed to the usage of Beowulf both (1), metrically, since ymb-sittendra makes a complete half-line, and the preceding þāra is not only otiose, but irregular [see Sievers in P.B.B. x. 256]; and (2), syntactically, since sē, sēo, þæt is in Beowulf a demonstrative, and is very seldom used as a mere article. [See Introduction to Beowulf.]

15. þæt: MS. þ, which is normally used as an abbreviation for þæt. Since the antecedent fyren-ðearf is fem., some would take þ here as an abbreviation for þā: 'the dire need which they had suffered.' Zupitza supports this interpretation of þ, although dubiously.

aldor-[lē]ase. MS. defective; but there is no reason to doubt that the missing letters were le. Holthausen, to avoid the syntactical difficulty of þæt (see above), reads aldor-[lē]as[t]e, and takes þæt as a conjunction: 'He [God] knew their cruel need: how that, before, they long had suffered want of a lord.' But we can take þæt as a conj. without this change: 'that, being without a lord, they had before experienced a long time of sorrow': for drugon lange hwile cf. l. 87, þrāge gebolode.

For the explanation of aldor-lēase see Index of Persons: Heremod.

16. Him, pl.; þæs, 'in compensation for that,' i.e. the evil days.
fræa. The metre demands a disyllabic form, such as frēga [Sievers]; and most recent editors insert this form in the text.

18. Beowulf. Not the hero of the poem.

18, 19. eafera is in apposition with Beowulf. Trautmann, Heyne-Schücking and Holthausen follow the emendation of Kemble, Scyldes eafera[n] Scede-landum in.

Bēowulf wæs brēme, blæd wide sprang

= 'the glory of the son of Scyld spread far and wide.' The alteration is not necessary [cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 428].

20. MS. defective. Grein's reading adopted in text.

21. MS. defective at corner. The respective merits of the restorations attempted by the earlier editors have been zealously canvassed ever since. These restorations are:

feorme, 'while yet in his father's support' [Kemble,]; þæt hine on ylde eft gewunigen ?

wil-gesipas, þonne wiȝ cume,

l 29? lēode zelūsten; lof-dædum sceal

25 in mægþa gehwære man gepæon.

Him ðā Scyld gewāt tō zescæp-hwile fela-hrōr fēran on Frēan wære;

hi hyne þā ætbæron tō brines faroðe, swæse zesipas, swā hē selfa bæd,

30 þenden wordum wēold wine Scyldinga;

lēof land-fruma lange āhte.

bearme, 'bosom' [Bouterwek, Thorpe: so Holthausen_{2,3}]; wine, 'to his father's friends' [Grundtvig, 1861, p. 1];

ærne, 'in his father's house' [Grein₁: so Sedgfield, Schücking];

leofne, 'sustenance' [Trautmann].

We are dealing here, not with conjectural emendation, but with attempts to decipher a MS. reading which has been partially lost. The data which can still be ascertained are:

First a space ($\frac{1}{2}$ in.) for two or three letters;

Then a fragment of a letter involving a long down stroke (i.e. either f, r, s, þ, or w; this letter was seen fully only by the five earliest transcribers or collators, who unanimously describe it as r; the fact that Thorkelin in his edition chose to read þina, and altered the r of his transcript to þ in conformity with his theory, in no way invalidates this evidence);

Then something which can now be read either as m, in, or blank space followed by n (the earliest transcribers support only the readings m or in);

Then e.

Wine and ærne are, then, opposed to the evidence of the earliest transcribers, and cannot be read into the MS. even in its present condition, for they fail to make the line come up to the margin, which the scribe (with only the rarest exceptions, e.g. l. 1753) keeps precisely.

leofne fills the space, but is syntactically faulty [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 306] and the f is inconsistent with the early transcriptions.

feorme gives unsatisfactory sense and is metrically impossible as involving double alliteration in the second half-line;

bearme fits exactly (the bea, for instance, of l. 40 just fills the necessary $\frac{1}{2}$ in.), and gives satisfactory sense, especially if, with Klaeber [J.E.G.Ph. vi. 190], we render 'in his father's possession': the young prince gives treasures from his father's store—which, as Klaeber (following Sievers) remarks, would agree excellently with Saxo's description of Scioldus: 'proceres... domesticis stipendiis colebat...'

25. Here and elsewhere, as Sievers points out [P.B.B. x. 485], metre demands, instead of the fem. gehwære, the form gehwām, which in the older language is used with feminines as well as with masculines and neuters. Cf. Sievers₃ § 341, N. 4.

31. āhte needs an object, expressed or understood. We may either supply mentally swæse gesipas or hi [Klaeber⁴⁰] or we may insert hi in the text: lange hi āhte, 'long he ruled them' [Holthausen]. Many emendations have been suggested in order to supply an object to āhte: lif in place of lēof, 'the chief long possessed his life' [Rieger³²]; lāndagas āhte, 'possessed these transitory days' [Kluge¹³⁸]; lān [or lān] geāhte 'possessed the grant, the land lent by God' [Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 223]. For many other emendations and interpretations see Cosijn¹; Bright in M.L.N. x. 43 (geweald for wēold); Child in M.L.N. xxi. 175; Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 308].

33. isig, 'covered with ice' [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 422].

38. gegyrwan. In modern English the passive inf. would be used.

44. þon[ne]. Thorkelin's emendation: MS. þon.

46. umbor-wesende. Uninflected. Cf. Sievers, § 305, N. 1. Cf. l. 372.

47. MS. defective at corner; missing letters supplied by Kemble.

48-9. Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxviii. 271.

51. sele-rædende, Kemble, following l. 1346: MS. sele rædenne.

52. The nearest parallel to the burial of Scyld is that of Baldr in the Prose Edda (chap. 48): 'But the gods took the body of Baldr, and carried it to the seashore. Baldr's ship was named Hringhorni: it was the greatest of all ships, and the gods sought to launch it, and to build the pyre of Baldr on it...Then was the body of Baldr borne out onto the ship...Odin laid on the pyre the gold ring named Draupnir...and Baldr's horse with all his trappings was placed on the pyre.'

In historic times the chiefs were still burnt or buried in ships.

For the voyage of the dead, cf. the stories of Sinfjötill (O.E. Fitela), whose body is wafted away by a mysterious ferryman (see Index of Persons); of Elaine (the lady of Shalott); and of Arthur himself, who, like Scyld, goes "from the great deep to the great deep."

53. Bēowulf. Still the prince of l. 18: to be distinguished from the hero of the poem.

57-8. hēah and gamol are both conventional epithets for Healfdene, found also in O.N. (Halfdan gamle—Skáldskaparmál, 73: Halfdan hástr Skjöldunga—Hyndluljóð, 14).

gūð-rēow shows the w on the way to becoming a vowel and causing the triphthong ēou [cf. Zupitza in Z.f.d.A. xxi. 10].

glæde may be an adverb 'gladly,' but is more probably an adjective agreeing with Scyldingas, 'the gracious, lordly Scyldings' [cf. Klaeber in Anglia, xxix. 378-9].

60. rīeswa[n], Kemble₂: MS. rīeswa. Kemble's emendation has been widely accepted. The change is exceedingly slight, cf. note to l. 1176. Indeed in the Anglian original of Beowulf the final n of the oblique cases of weak nouns may already have been lost, and the scribe who put the poem into W.S. would not in that case recognize the form as a plural [Cosijn²³]. Cf. note to l. 1543.

62. ...[On]elan, Grundtvig [Brage, iv. 500]; Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 43] supported this and supplied wæs: the name of the lady and part of that of her consort were omitted by the scribe, who wrote hȳrde ic þ elan cwēn, without anything to indicate at what point in the sentence the omission may have occurred.

As the husband is a Swede (Heaðoscilfing, cf. l. 2205) the coincidence between elan and the name of the Swedish king Onela is too remarkable to be overlooked, especially as it relieves us from having to postulate a Germanic princess with the extraordinary name of Elan. The reading of the text, which leaves the lady's name unknown, is therefore preferable to the theory [of Grein₂, Ettmüller₂, Sedgefield₁, etc.] which makes Elan the name of the queen, and supplies Ongentheow, father of Onela, as the husband:

There is no external evidence for either alliance: chronologically either is possible.

Kluge [Engl. Stud. xxii. 144], following the Saga of Rolf Kraki, where Halfdan has a daughter Signy, who weds earl Saevil, suggested:

hȳrde ic þæt [Sigenēow wæs Sēw]elan cwēn.

So Sedgefield₂ and Schücking. But Saevil was not a king of Sweden. [For a full discussion of the passage see Trautmann in Anglia, Beiblatt, x. 259.]

63. For gen. sg. in as, cf. ll. 2453, 2921; Sievers₂, § 237, N. 1. For gebedda, masc. in form, but here fem. in meaning (as foregenga, applied to Judith's female attendant, Judith, 127), cf. Sievers₂, § 278, N. 4.

67. be-arn from be-ierman, q.v.

68. Rask [Angelsaksisk Sproglære, 1817] and Kemble, followed by most of the older editors, read þæt [hē] heal-reced. But hē need not be expressed: it is understood from him in the preceding line.

70. þon[n]e is an emendation of Grein, and Grundtvig (1861, p. 3). If in other respects we retain the MS. reading, 'greater' must be understood from micel in the preceding line. Parallels have often been adduced for this usage of the positive where we should expect the comparative. But Bright has shown [M.L.N. xxvii. 181-3] that the clearest of these parallels [Psalms, 117, 8-9: Ps. 118 in our reckoning] is due simply to a literal translation of a biblical idiom, and that in other cases [e.g. Elene, 647] the text is very probably corrupt. Bright would alter the text here to medo-ærn micle mære gewyrcean þonne... 'a hall much greater than'.... See also Cosijn¹.

yldo bearn, 'the children of men.' Such gen. pls. in o are rare, but undoubtedly. See Sievers, § 237, N. 4. [For a collection of instances, cf. Klaeber in M.L.N. xvi. 17-18.]

73. Cf. Tacitus [Germ. vii.]: 'The kings have not despotic or unlimited power.'

77. ædre mid yldum, 'presently amid men.' Earle's rendering 'with a quickness surprising to men' is forced.

78. Heorot is probably so named from the horns on the gable, cf. horn-ȝeap, l. 82. But possibly horn simply means 'corner,' 'gable,' and horn-ȝeap 'wide-gabled' [cf. Miller in Anglia, xii. 396].

83. Two interpretations of lenge are offered:

(1) 'the time was not yet at hand that....' lenge being an adj. meaning 'pertaining to'; ȝelenge in this sense is not uncommon, but there is no certain instance of lenge, and to take 'pertaining to' in the sense of 'at hand' is forced. However this interpretation [Rieger³⁸²] has been followed widely, and recently by Schücking, Sedgfield and Holthausen³.

Or (2) lenge may be another form of the comparative adv. leng (Grein). The comparative here (where Mod. Eng. would use a positive) would be paralleled by ll. 134, 2555. The meaning would then be 'the time was not very distant.' [So Klaeber²⁴⁶.]

84. ecg-hete, Grein; MS. secghete. Cf. l. 1738, and Seafarer, 70.
āþum-swerian: āþum = 'son-in-law,' swēor = 'father-in-law.' It is clear that we have to do with a compound, meaning 'son- and father-in-law,' comparable to suhtergefæderan (l. 1164), suhtorfædran (Widsith, 46), 'nephew and uncle.' All recent editors follow Trautmann in altering āþum-swerian to āþum-swēorum; and it may well be that this was the original reading, and that the scribe misunderstood āþum as 'oaths' and so came to miswrite swēorum as swerian 'to swear.' Yet swerian may perhaps be defended as = swerigum from sweriga* 'father-in-law,' a form not elsewhere recorded, but standing to swēor much as suhtiga to suhtor, both meaning 'nephew' (cf. Genesis, 1775, his suhtrian wif). [Bugge, Tidaskr. viii. 45-6 defended swerian, comparing Goth. brūprahans and Icel. feðgar.]

The reference is to the contest between Hrothgar and his son-in-law Ingeld (cf. ll. 2020-69). Possibly the hall was burnt in this contest, which took place, as we know from Widsith, 'æt Heorote.' But more probably l. 82 refers to the later struggle among the kin of Hrothgar, when the hall was burnt over Hrothulf's head. See Index of Persons: Hrothulf.

86. ellen-gæst. Grein; and Rieger²⁸⁵ emend to the more usual ellor-gæst, which is also adopted by Earle and Sedgfield; cf. ll. 807, 1617, etc. See note to l. 102.

87. þrāge, 'a hard time' (Klaeber²⁸⁴, comparing Juliana, 464, is þeos þrāg ful strong). See also Beowulf, l. 2883 [cf. *Cosijn*⁶].

92. worh[te], Kemble; MS. defective at corner.

93. swā, relative; see Glossary.

101. frem[m]an, Kemble; MS. defective at edge.

Earle adopts the emendation [of Bugge²⁸⁶], healle for helle, because it is 'so simple, and gives so much relief.' On the other hand, in l. 142 he adopts hel-ſegnes for heal-ſegnes [as suggested tentatively by Ettmüller, but not adopted by him]. Both changes are needless.

fēond on helle is simply 'hell-fiend' [Cosijn³]. Cf. helle hæfton, l. 788.

102. gæst. This ambiguous word may stand for gāst 'spirit,' or giest, gist, gyst, 'stranger'; giest is, of course, akin to the Latin hostis, and sometimes acquires the sense of 'hostile stranger,' 'foe' (e.g. ll. 1441, 1522, 1545 sele-gyst, 2560 gryre-giest).

In ll. 1800, 1893 there can be no doubt that gæst stands for giest, 'stranger.' In l. 2073 and in inwit-gæst (2670) the word is connected with nēos[i]an 'to visit,' which makes it highly probable that it means giest and is used with grim irony. In the last instance we have confirmation from the fact that gryre-giest is applied to the dragon in l. 2560; and I should be inclined also to take gæst (2312), nīð-gæst (2699) as = giest, nīð-giest. The dragon is not regarded as a spirit of hell, but as a strange phenomenon. Grendel and his mother, on the contrary, are regarded as diabolic spirits (cf. 1266); and when applied to them I take gæst = gāst 'spirit' (102: wæl-gæst, 1331, 1995: ellor-gæst, 1349, 1617). This is confirmed by the fact that ll. 807, 1621 give (ellor)-gāst, which can only mean 'spirit.'

In l. 1123 gæsta = gāsta.

104. Moor and fen were the appropriate dwelling-places of misbegotten beings. Jordanes, recording Gothic traditions, mentions the offspring of witches and evil spirits: a race 'which was of old amid the fens.' Cf. note to l. 426.

106-8. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 137]:

...forscrifen hæfde

'Had proscribed him amid the race of Cain (the eternal Lord avenged that death) for that he slew Abel.'

109. hē...hē hine = Cain...God, Cain.

112. orcnēas. The meaning 'sea-monster' is often attributed to this word (e.g. by Heyne and Schücking), on the theory that it is a compound, the first element connected with Icel. ørkn 'a kind of seal' [cf. Lat. orca 'a kind of whale'], and the second with O.E. eoh, 'horse.' [Kluge in P.B.B. ix. 188, in part following Heyne.]

But the context seems to demand 'evil spirit,' rather than 'sea-horse.' From the Lat. Orcus 'Hell, Death' was derived the O.E. orc 'giant' or 'devil,' as is proved by the gloss 'orcus : orc, þȳrs oððe hel-deofol.' Orc-nēas may be a compound of orc with nē 'corpse' (cf. nē-fugol, 'carion-bird,' Gen. 2158; dryht-nēum, 'host of corpses,' Exod. 163; and Goth. nāus, 'a corpse'). [See Bugge⁸⁰⁻⁸² and in Z.f.d.Ph., iv. 193; and cf. ten Brink¹⁰; Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 428.]

115. nēosian. Sievers reads nēosan, for metrical reasons. Cf. l. 125. See Introduction to Beowulf: Metre.

116. hēan. The weak adj. without definite art. is a feature of early O.E. poetry. See Introduction to Beowulf.

120. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 137] reads wera[s], 'the men knew not sorrow.' Some edd. put the stop after unhælo, 'they knew not sorrow, aught of evil.' But with this punctuation Grim ond ȝrædig makes a very abrupt beginning of the next sentence; and I see no reason to doubt that wiht unhælo can mean 'the creature of evil, Grendel'; cf. hælo-bearn, 'Saviour-child' in Crist, 586, 754. [See also Klaeber, Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 252.]

128. æfter wiste, 'after their weal,' or 'after their feasting,' followed lamentation. This seems a more likely interpretation than that there was lamentation concerning Grendel's feasting upon the thirty thanes. [Cf. Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 223.]

131. ðrȳð-swȳð. Earle takes this as a noun, 'mighty pain,' 'majestic rage,' comparing Icel. sviði, 'a smart from burning.' Surely this is seeking trouble, for there is no evidence for any O.E. noun swȳð, 'pain, smart,' whilst the adj. swȳð, 'strong,' is common. It seems, then, natural to take ðrȳð-swȳð as an adj., 'strong in might,' parallel to earn-swið, mōð-swið, which are indisputably adjs., meaning 'strong in arm,' 'strong in mind,' not nouns meaning 'arm-pain,' 'mind-pain.' Context too supports the adjectival rendering 'strong in might'; for it is at least as satisfactory here as 'mighty pain,' and more so in l. 736, the only other passage where þrȳð-swȳð occurs. If we thus make þrȳð-swȳð an adj., we have to take þolian as intransitive. But there is no difficulty about this: cf. l. 2499, and Maldon, 307. [Earle quotes Grein in support of his interpretation: yet Grein, renders 'stark an Kraft.']

133. It is not easy to be certain whether wergan, here and in l. 1747, is the weak form of wērig, 'weary,' or is to be read short, werga, 'accursed.' The latter seems to be the more probable. Cf. wergan, wyrgan, 'to curse' [and see Hart in M.L.N. xxii. 220, etc.; and Earle, 168].

136. māre 'further,' 'additional' murder—does not of course imply that the second attack was more murderous than the first. [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁴⁹.]
morð-beala for morð-bealu. Some edd. alter, but see note to l. 1914. [Cf. Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 194 and Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 312.]

138. The typical understatement of O.E. verse: 'It was easy to find one who sought rest outside the hall,' amounts to saying that all deserted it.

139. [sōhte] Grein; no gap in MS.

140. æfter būrum. The bowers lie outside the hall, as in the 'Cynewulf and Cyneheard' episode in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. The retainers, who would normally sleep in the hall, prefer a bed by the bowers, which are free from Grendel's attack.

xxix. 313], for þām sūcnūm: cf. l. 1777. Klaeber, following Sievers' suggestion, substitutes forðan, the form usual in Beowulf.

154-5. sibbe and feorh-bealo feorran are possibly parallel, 'he wished not for peace, or to remove the life-bale,' the verbal phrase explaining the noun more fully, as in ll. 185-6, frōfre...wihthe gewendan [cf. Bugge⁸²; Klaeber²³⁸]. We can, however, construe sibbe as an instrumental, in which case there should be no comma after Deniga: 'he would not out of compassion to any man remove the life-bale.' [Cf. Grein; Sievers, P.B.B. xxix. 317.]

156. fēa. Kemble₂ normalized to fēo, and has been followed by all the editors. Yet ēa for ēo is a common Anglian (especially Northumbrian) peculiarity. See Sievers₃ § 150. 3.

157-8. wēnan tō, 'to expect from.' See Glossary: wēnan, and cf. l. 1396.

158. beorhtre is, of course, not comparative, as taken by many editors and translators, but gen. fem., agreeing with bōte, after wēnan.

banan, Kemble₂: miswritten in MS. banū. The error possibly arose through the influence of folmū (cf. l. 2961); or possibly banā (= banan) in an older MS. was written with an open a and this, as so often, was wrongly transcribed as u (cf. ll. 581, 2821, 2961).

159. MS. defective. [Atol] Thorpe; [ac sē], without a period, Rieger³⁸⁴.

163. hel-rūnan. The fem. hel-rūne, 'witch,' occurs in several glosses: the Gothic equivalent is recorded by Jordanes: Filimer, King of the Goths, found among his people certain witches, 'quas patrio sermone Haliurunnas is ipse cognominat' [Getica, cap. xxiv.]. It is not clear whether in this passage in Beowulf we have the fem., or a corresponding masc., hel-rūna, not elsewhere recorded.

167-9. for Metode is generally taken 'on account of the Lord': cf. l. 706, þā Metod nolde. Holtzmann [Germania, viii. 489] makes hē refer to Hrothgar: 'he could not touch his throne, his treasure, by reason of God's prohibition, nor have joy in it.' But this seems very difficult, since Grendel has been the subject for the last fifteen lines. Most probably, then, hē refers to Grendel, who 'was not suffered to outrage Hrothgar's throne by reason of God's prohibition: he knew not His mind' (i.e. the fate in store for him).

But the phrase may mean simply that Grendel is a fiend rejected by God, and hence cannot approach God's throne or receive a gift in the presence of his Creator. In this case, it is suggested by Klaeber [J.E.G.Ph. viii. 254] that ne his myne wisse means 'nor did He (God) take thought of him (Grendel).' [Parallels for this are given by Klaeber, Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 254, e.g. Exeter Gnostic Verses, 162, wærleas mon ond wonhȝdig þæs ne ȝymeð God.] Anyway the contrast is between the loyal thane who approaches the throne to do homage and receive gifts, and such a 'hall-thane' (cf. l. 142) as Grendel.

[Cf. also Cosijn⁸; Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 225; Pogatscher in P.B.B. xix. 544, who suggests formetode as a verb from formetian*: 'he despised the giving of treasure'; Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 319. Kölbing in Engl. Stud. iii. 92.]

✓ 175. hærg: MS. hrærg: Kemble, corrected to hearg: Grundtvig (1861, p. 6) kept nearer to the MS. by retaining the spelling hærg. This heathen term had perhaps become less intelligible when our MS. was transcribed, whence the scribe's error.

It has often been objected that these lines are not consistent with the Christian sentiments uttered by leading characters elsewhere in the poem: that Hrothgar, for instance, does not talk like a pagan (cf. e.g. ll. 1724, seq.). Attempts have been made to harmonize the discrepancy by supposing that the Danes are regarded as Christians, but as having in time of stress relapsed, like the East Angles in the seventh century. [Klaeber, Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 134: Bright in Routh's Ballad Theory, 1905, 54, footnote.] But this supposition is unnecessary, for such Christian sentiments as Hrothgar or Beowulf do utter are vague and undogmatic, not unlike the godly expressions that Chaucer puts into the mouth of his pious heathen. [See Introduction to Beowulf.]

✓ 189. mæl-ceare, 'the sorrow of this time' (i.e. the time spoken of above):

mōd-ceare, the emendation of Trautmann¹⁵⁷, is unnecessary (cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 321); mæl-ceare is probably acc. after sēað, 'brooded over the care'; but might be instrumental, 'seethed with care' [Earle].

194. fram hām: 'from' indicates that Beowulf's home is different from the scene of Grendel's deeds: Earle rightly renders 'in his distant home.' Cf. l. 410.

197. þæm can bear the alliteration because emphatic.

203. This, by the customary understatement (cf. ll. 2738, 3029), means that they heartily approved of his enterprise, as is shown by l. 415. [Cf. Klaeber in M.L.N. xvii. 323, and Cosijn².]

204. [r]ōfne is the conjecture of Rask [Grundtvig²⁷⁰] and is certain. -V The MS. is defective: only the lower part of the first letter is left, and this may have been r, þ, f, s, or w. The letter must have been only half legible even in Thorkelin's time; transcript A has þofne, B forne.

hæl scēawedon, 'watched the omens.' Tacitus notes the attention paid to auspices and the methods of divination by the ancient Germans. [Germ. x.: Auspicia sortesque, ut qui maxime, observant.]

The conjecture of Sedgefield²⁸⁶ hæl geāwedon, 'gave him a farewell greeting,' seems unnecessary. [Cf. Klaeber, Engl. Stud. xlv. 123.]

207. fiŋtēna: MS. xv̄. 'With fourteen companions.' Cf. l. 3123.

209. laȳu-cræftiȳ mon. This is often taken to refer to a pilot, but more probably it relates to Beowulf himself. Seamanship is a characteristic of the perfect hero, as of Sifrit in the Nibelungen Lied.

wisade...land-ȳemyrcu has been rendered 'pointed out the land-marks' [Earle, Clark-Hall]; but the travellers do not appear to be as yet afloat.

(Sund-wudu sōhte, l. 208, means 'he proceeded to the ship,' not necessarily 'went on board.') We must therefore either translate 'led them to the land-boundary' (the shore) [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 322; Klaeber⁴⁵¹], or we must [as has been suggested to me by Mr Grattan] take the phrase wisade land-gemyrcu quite generally: Beowulf 'was their pilot on this expedition.'

Cf. l. 2409.

210. Fyrst forð gewāt, 'the time' between the arrival at the shore, and the embarkation 'had passed': or, quite generally, 'time passed on.'

216. bundenne, 'well-braced.'

218. fāmi-heals. See Sievers₃ § 214, 5.

219. an-tið: MS. an tið. Grein, ān-tið f. = hora prima, 'erste Stunde,' comparing 'nōn-tið' hora nona. Cosijn [P.B.B. viii. 568, following Ettmüller] contends for an-tið = and-tið or ond-tið, 'corresponding time,' 'the same time,' so that the phrase would mean 'about the same hour of the second day.'

Sievers [P.B.B. xxix. 322, etc.] regards āntið as 'due time,' comparing O.N. eindagi, 'agreed time, term,' and points out that ymb, when used to mark time, means rather 'after' than 'about'; hence: 'after the lapse of due time, on the next day.' Earle arrives at the same rendering, though on different grounds, which to me are not clear.

224. eoletes. The word occurs here only. The sense seems to demand 'sea'; 'then was the sound traversed at the far side of the sea.' Yet this passive use of liden is difficult—a difficulty which Thorpe sought to avoid by reading sund-lida ēa-lāde æt ende, 'the sea-sailer (i.e. boat) at the end of its watery way.' Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 47] interpreted 'stormy sea' (O.N. él, 'storm'). But the first element, eo, in eolet may, by the Anglian confusion of ēo and ēa, be the same as ēa, 'river' (Lat. aqua, Goth. ahwa). Others suppose the word to mean 'labour' (cognate with Greek ἐλαύνω), or else to be a mere 'ghost-word,' the result of a scribe's blunder. [Sedgfield²⁸⁶.]

*hider ofer holmas? [Hwile ic on weal]le

MS. hider ofer holmas le wæs, etc., without any gap. Thorkelin read the le as lc, Kemble as lc, but there can be no doubt that it is le, and this makes Wülker's conjecture unlikely:

*hider ofer holmas [hringed-stefnan]!

The same applies to that of Ettmüller₂:

hider ofer holmas [helmas biēron]!

hwile, 'a long time.'

244. cuman is possibly a noun (cf. l. 1806). 'Never have strangers, warriors, made themselves more at home.' [Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 290.] For this use of onginnan, = 'behave,' Klaeber [Anglia, xxviii. 439] compares ēaðmōðlice onginnað, Cura Pastoralis, 421, 26; and advocates the old reading gelēafnes-word for ȝē lēafnes-word, taking wisson (l. 246) as 3rd pers.

245-6. ne...ne. Note that in O.E. syntax two negatives do not make an affirmative.

249-50. 'Yon weapon-decked man is no mere retainer.' Seld-guma, 'hall-man,' i.e. house-carl, retainer. Other suggestions are that it means

'one who remains within the seld,' 'stay-at-home,' 'carpet-knight,' or that it indicates a peasant, one who possesses only a seld. But the seld was a hall or palace, occupied by warriors and owned by kings, so that these explanations are less satisfactory. [Cf. Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 290-1.]

250. næfne, Kemble₂: MS. næfre.

253. lēas-scēaweras, the MS. reading, meaning 'evil spies,' has been emended to lēase scēaweras [Ettmüller₂, Thorpe, followed by all the older editors]. But this gives a type of line (Expanded D*) which, unless with double alliteration, is unparalleled. It seems therefore better to keep the MS. reading.

So abusive a word is surprising in the middle of an otherwise courteous conversation. But, perhaps, the drift is, as Sievers suggests: 'It is my duty to (ic sceal) enquire: tell me, rather than (ær), by going further, bring yourselves under suspicion of being false spies.' [P.B.B. xxix. 329: cf. also Klaeber in Anglia, xxix. 379-80.]

255. mīn[n]e, Kemble₂: MS. mine.

258. yldesta, 'chief'; cf. l. 363.

262. Holthausen₂ reads Wæs mīn [frōd] fæder: Holthausen₃, Wæs mīn fæder folcum [feor] gecȳþed. This improves the alliteration. From the point of view of scansion alteration is not essential, since a personal pronoun can take the stress: cf. ll. 345, 346, 353, 1934, 1984, 2160. This is not a mere licence, but usually corresponds to a fine shade of meaning.

269. lārena ȝōd, 'good to us in guidance.'

274. sceaðona, in Thorkelin's transcript A only: now only scea left.

275. dāed-hata. Grein hesitated whether to regard this word as dāed-hāta, 'one who hates or persecutes by deeds' [so Grein₂] or dāed-hāta, 'one who promises deeds.' Earle adopts the latter reading, and translates 'author of deeds.' The former is, however, the more probable: hatian means not merely 'to hate' but 'to pursue with hatred, persecute'; cf. l. 2466 [see Klaeber²⁰⁰].

276. þurh egsan, 'in dread wise': for þurh marking attendant circumstances, cf. l. 1335, and perhaps l. 184. [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁵¹ and in Archiv, cxv. 178.] Above, l. 267, and below, l. 278, þurh retains more clearly its meaning of cause or instrument. And þurh egsan may mean 'by reason of the awe he inspires.' Cf. Seafarer, 103 [and see Cosijn⁷].

280. edwenden MS. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 291] suggested the noun edwenden, in which case we must take bisigu as gen. dependent upon it: 'a change of his trouble.' [So Holthausen and Sedgefield: already in 1861 Grundtvig (p. 117) took the passage in this way, though retaining the spelling edwenden, which he interpreted as a noun = edwenden.] The emendation edwenden is exceedingly probable, since the verb edwenden occurs nowhere else: for in l. 1774, where the MS. gives edwenden, it is necessary to read this as edwenden; him edwenden...bealuwa bisigum has been suggested: cf. l. 318, sīða gesunde, and l. 2170, nīða heardum.

286. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 137], followed by Holthausen and Sedgefield, would supply [hē] after þær. But this seems unnecessary: cf. l. 1923. [See Pogatscher, in Anglia, xxiii. 265.]

297-9. lēofne mannan and swylcum may refer to the whole band, 'to whomsoever it shall be granted' [Kemble, Thorpe]. For a full defence of this rendering see Klaeber²⁹⁰: lēofne mannan would be a singular used collectively: cf. eorl (l. 795), æþelinge (l. 1244). Most recent translators make of ll. 299, 300, an assertion relating to Beowulf: 'to such a valiant man it will be granted...' It has been objected that this is to attribute to the coast-guard a statement which is absurd—a view refuted 'by all the brave men who have ever fallen in battle' [Rieger³⁸⁵]. Yet he may reasonably say 'Valiant men like your captain are destined to win.'

299. gōd-fremmendra. Grundtvig's emendation gūð-fremmendra [1861, p. 10] is needless.

300. Here, too, Sievers, followed by Sedgefield, would supply [hæ] after þæt.

302. sǣle, Ettmüller₂; cf. ll. 226, 1906, and 1917, and modern 'riding on a hawser.' It has been suggested that the MS. reading sole is not impossible, and that it might be interpreted as from sol, mod. Kent. sole, 'a muddy pool.' But surely this is a libel upon the Cattegat.

303, etc. scionon=scinon, 'they shone,' by u-umlaut, just as riodan (l. 3169)=ridon, 'they rode' (Sievers₃ § 376): there seems no sufficient reason to reject this explanation, and, with Grein, to invent a verb scānan, scēon, or with Sedgefield to take scionon as an adj. (= scienan, 'bright'), agreeing with eofor-lic.

hlēor-ber[ǣ]an, 'cheek-guards,' Ettmüller₃, Gering [Z.f.d.Ph. xii. 123: he compares cimberg, Exod. 175]: MS. hleor beran. If we retain the MS. reading we must either take beran=bæron, 'they bore over their faces,' or else, with Grein, assume a noun hlēor-bera, 'visor'; Sedgefield₂ reads ofer hleoþu bēran, 'they bore, over the hill-sides...'

The latter part of l. 305 has been widely read ferh wearde hēold, 'the pig' (ferh for fearh, parallel to eofor-lic) 'held guard': but the expression ferh, 'pig' for eofor, 'boar' is strange [Cosijn⁷]. The reading of the text ferhwearde hēold (ferh for feorh) involves a rapid change from pl. to sg.: but in O.E. poetry this is no insuperable difficulty. Translate 'the gleaming and tempered [helm] held guard of life over the valiant man (ȝūþmōdȝum men).'

The MS. reading, ȝūþmōd grummon, hardly admits of interpretation. If a verb, grummon must be from grimman, 'to rage, roar,' which gives no satisfactory sense; the meaning 'hasten' is generally applied to it here, but this is forced; why should 'to roar' mean 'to hasten'? And ȝūþmōd as subject (= ȝūþmōd(i)ge 'the valiant ones') is almost equally unsatisfactory, even if we follow Kemble₂ and alter to ȝūþ-mōd[e].

Sedgefield suggests grimmon (Dat. pl.), 'over the fierce ones': Bright

[M.L.N. x. 43] had made the same emendation, but with adverbial meaning, 'grimly.'

Tacitus notes these boar-helmets: but as a characteristic, not of the Germans proper, but of the Æstii [Germ. XLV. : Insigne superstitionis formas aprorum gestant].

The straightening out of this passage, so far as it admits of explanation, is mainly due to Bugge⁸³ [and in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 195, etc.], who proposed:

eofor lic-scionon
 ofer hlōorberan gehroden golde fāh ond fȳrheard ferh-wearde hēold gūþ-mōdgum men.

'The boar, over the visor, adorned with gold, gleaming and tempered, held guard of life over the valiant man, fair of body (lic-scionon).' Bugge's interpretation, at least of ll. 305, 306, seems likely, and has been adopted by Schücking and Holthausen²; cf. Klaeber⁸¹.

326. regn-hearde. Regn (Goth. ragin, 'counsel,' raginōn, 'to rale') comes in O.N. (regin) to be a synonym for the gods. Here it is used simply to intensify. Cf. the proper name Beginhart (Reynard), appropriately applied to that 'thoroughly hardened sinner,' the fox.

338. Wēn. Some editors write this wēn' (= wēne). Cf. ll. 442 and 525.

viii. 71; Trautmann: adopted by Holthausen] is simple and final. A similar bad spelling occurs in the Dream of the Rood, 117: the MS. has unforht, which is nonsense, and has been emended to anforht 'timid.' Such scribal mistakes were easily made at a period when, the top of the a being left open, it was hardly distinguishable from u: another example is wudu for wadu, below (l. 581). For anhar, cf. ansund (l. 1000).

367. glædman, indisputably the MS. reading: Thorkelin's transcript B reads glædnian [cf. Rieger³⁸⁶].

Bugge³⁴ defends glædman, quoting the gloss 'Hilaris: glædman.' The best interpretation of the word seems, then, to be 'cheerful.' Other suggestions have been that it is the oblique case of a noun glædma, 'gladness,' or that it should be read as two words, glæd man. Glæd, 'gracious,' is a stock epithet of princes. Grundtvig's emendation [1861, p. 13] glæd-mōd is followed by Holthausen^{1,2} and Sedgefield.

368. wig-ġetāwum. Note the spelling here, and in ll. 395, 2636: the editors generally alter into the more usual form wig-ġeatwum, etc., and this emendation is supported here by metrical considerations. ġeatwē is generally supposed to be a corruption (Siewers³ § 43, N. 4) of ġetāwē. It would seem, then, that the more primitive form, ġetāwum, has been, by a scribal error, inserted here, although the metre shows that the form actually used was the corrupt ġeatwē. Yet it has been maintained that the two words, ġeatwē and ġetāwē, are from distinct roots (ġeatwē cognate with frætwe; ġetāwē with tāwian, 'to prepare'). If so, they were certainly confused and interchanged by the scribes. [Cf. von Grienberger in Z.f.ö.G. 1905, 753.]

372. cniht-wesende, uninflected; see note to l. 46, above.

373. eald fæder: MS. ealdfæder. This compound, meaning 'grandfather, ancestor,' occurs in the forms ealdfæder, ealdefæder; but its use here is a strain to the meaning of the passage, and we may safely assume that the scribe has run two words into one, as in numerous other instances. Eald fæder makes excellent sense.

375. eafora, Grundtvig³⁷², Kemble¹: MS. eaforan.

378-9. Thorpe, Gēatum, adopted by Bugge⁸⁵ and Earle. The change is not necessary, because the genitive can be objective: 'presents for the Geatas.' [So Klaeber⁴⁶².]

þyder. Cosijn⁷ would alter to hyder, and make the Danes the recipients of the treasure: but this weakens the alliteration. We need not assume that either nation was tributary to the other. Tacitus records similar interchange of gifts between neighbouring tribes: Gaudent praecipue finitimarum gentium donis, quae non modo a singulis sed publice mittuntur, electi equi, magna arma, phaleræ torquesque. [Germ. xv.] Cf. too l. 472, below.

379. þritiges: MS. 'xxx' tiges.

386-7. The demands of the metre show that gān stands for some disyllabic form, gāan or gangan.

sibbe-ȝedriht may refer to Beowulf's men, 'bid this company come into my presence' (cf. l. 729), but this compels us to give a forced rendering to sēon: more probably therefore sibbe-ȝedriht refers to the Danes, and is the object of sēon, 'bid them come in and see our company.' We must supply hi mentally after in gān.

Bright [M.L.N. x. 44] suggests hāt [þæt] in gā sēo sibbegedriht 'bid that company (Beowulf's) to go in.' This emendation is supported by Exodus, 214, but is not necessary.

389-90. [þā...ēode], Grein₁; no gap in MS., though the lack of alliteration seems conclusive as to a defect in the text.
inne, 'speaking from inside.'

395. ȝūð-ȝeatawum. See note to l. 368 and Sievers, § 260, Notes 1, 2. The emendation of Ettmüller, ȝūð-ȝeatawum has the advantage of avoiding the abnormal double alliteration in the second half line: for ge- of course does not alliterate.

397. onbīdan. The scribe seems to have written onbidman, and to have erased the m very carelessly, so that one stroke, resembling an i, remains. Some editors read onbidian.

402. þā is metrically excessive [Sievers in P.B.B. x. 256], the only parallel being (þāra)ymsittendra, where we can be certain that þāra was not original (see note to l. 9). Holthausen omits þā here also.

403. [hyge-rōf ēode], Grein₁: no gap in MS.

404. hēoðe. The emendation heo(r)ðe [Kemble₂, suggested by Thorpe] is adopted by Holthausen and Sedgefield₂. Holtzmann [Germ. viii. 490] showed, by a parallel passage from the Egils saga, how the hearth was in front of the high seat in a Germanic hall. Beowulf, before the throne of Hrothgar, would then be on or near the hearth.

On hēoðe has been taken to mean 'in the interior' (cf. hel-hēoðo), or 'on the dais' (from hēah). This last interpretation is difficult to demonstrate.

407. Wæs; w for e: cf. spræc (l. 1171). See Sievers₂ § 427, N. 10; Bülbring § 92. 1. ✓

411. Most editors have followed Thorkelin and Kemble₂ in normalizing to þes. But þæs is a possible Northern form of the nom. masc. [Sievers₂ § 338, N. 4]. ✓

As in the Hildebrand Lay, news is brought by seafaring folk (sēolidante).

414. hador. If we retain the MS. reading we must take hador as either (1) 'brightness,' which is unprecedented (hādor being elsewhere an adj.) and does not give good sense, or (2) 'vault of heaven,' connecting with a word twice recorded in the Riddles, which seems to mean 'receptacle' or 'confinement' (lxv. [lxvi.] 3, on headre; xx. [xxi.] 13, on heapore; cf. Goth. hēþjō, 'chamber': some editors emend to hador here in Beowulf). Cf. ll. 860, 1773, under svegles begong. 7

Sedgefield₁ transposes the words and reads hādor under heofene, translating 'after the bright evening light is hidden under the sky.' [But cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xlv. 124.] Sedgfield₂ under heofene hādor.

418. min[n]e, Grein₁; MS. mine. Cf. l. 255.

420. þær ic fife geband. The emendation þæra for þær [Rieger³⁶⁹] is unnecessary: þær can mean 'when'; Klaeber⁴³² compares ll. 513, 550.

Unless 'eotens' and 'nicers' are different beasts, there is a discrepancy, since later Beowulf claims to have slain nine nickers (l. 575). It seems possible that fife is either a form (as Grein thought), or, more probably, a corruption, of fifel, 'sea-monster.' There are several conjectures based upon this, the oldest of which is Bugge's þær ic on fifel-geban. Bugge³⁶⁷ supposes this to have been the reading of a very early MS., which was later misunderstood and corrupted: geban would be the older form of geofon, and the phrase would be parallel to ofer fifel-wæg (Elene, 237), etc.

422. niceras. The word seems to have been used by the different Germanic peoples for any strange water-being they might meet, from a mermaid to a hippopotamus.

423. Cf. note to l. 1206.

426. þyrse. Cf. the Cottonian Gnostic Verses, l. 42:

"þyrs sceal on fenne gewunian

431-2. āna [ond]...þes: MS. ana mīnra eorla ȝedryht 7 þes, etc. Kemble₃ transposed the 7 (= ond).

434. Cf. ll. 681, etc., 801, etc.

should be monosyllabic, sometimes disyllabic: the spelling is no guide.)
 Here it is monosyllabic; the verse is of the B type, with resolution of first accented syllable ($\times \times \smile \times | \times \smile$). For cases where sie is disyllabic, see ll. 1831, 2649 [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 477].

Hygelac is brought in because, as Beowulf's chief, he shares the credit of his achievements. [Cf. Tacitus, Germ. xv., and note to l. 1968, below.]

440-1. gelyfan... Dryhtnes dōme. Earle renders 'resign himself to':
 for similar sentiment, cf. ll. 685, etc.

þe hine, 'whom.'

443. Gēotena. Many editors alter to the normal form Gēata. But
 (1) the dialectal confusion of ġo and ġa [Sievers, § 150. 3] is peculiarly apt to survive in proper names, and (2) weak and strong forms of proper names alternate; Bēow compared with Bēowa exemplifies both changes. Gēotena is, then, a conceivable form, and the MS. reading should be retained.

Those who hold that the Geatas are Jutes have seen in this form a confirmation of their theory; and (though I do not share that view) this is an additional reason for not tampering with the MS. reading.

445. To avoid the difficulty of the alliteration falling on the second element in the compound, Schücking reads mægen-hrēð-manna, 'the pride of men.'

Hrēðas is an ancient epic title of the Goths: it became Hrēðas by false analogy with hrēð, 'glory'; but the term Hrēð-menn here cannot signify 'Goths.' It may possibly refer to the Geatas, whose king is Hrēðel, in which case a comma must be inserted after dyde. But I rather take it to mean the Danes, part of whose kingdom is in Icelandic called Reið-Gotaland; this gives a more satisfactory sense: 'he thinks to treat the Geatas as he did the Danes.' Cf. l. 601.

446. hafalan hȳdan, referring to the rites of burial. It does not necessarily follow, as has been argued, that there is any reference to the custom, once prevalent, at any rate in Scandinavian countries, of covering with a cloth the face of the dead [Konrath in Archiv, xcix. 417].

That Beowulf is declining a guard of honour (hēafod-weard), as Schücking supposes, seems very improbable.

447. d[r]ēore, Grundtvig⁷²: MS. deore.

454. Hræddan. There is no need to alter Hræddan into Hrēðles. For æd alternating with ēð, cf. note to l. 445 above. The alternation of weak and strong forms (Hors and Horsa) is common, especially in the names of ancestral heroes. See note to l. 443 above.

457. F[or gewyr]htum: MS. fere fyhtum. Grundtvig (1861) suggested F[or w]ere-fyhtum, ‘for defensive fighting.’ More than a dozen emendations have been proposed: that in the text is by Trautmann [in his edition: otherwise Trautmann¹⁶²], and we must render, with Klaeber [J.E.G.Ph. vi. 191], ‘because of deeds done,’ i.e. owing to the ancestral ties mentioned below. [Cf. also Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 401; Klaeber⁴⁶³]. Thorpe, followed by Schücking, reads fore fyhtum, and emended wine to frēond, so as to alliterate. But the error obviously lies in fere fyhtum, which should be, and is not, parallel to ond for ār-stafum [Sievers, P.B.B. ix. 138].

459. Holthausen, followed by recent editors, reads for metrical reasons, þin fæder ȝeslōh.

Klaeber²⁶² translates ‘thy father brought about by fight the greatest of feuds.’ Schücking, following Klaeber, similarly renders ȝeslōh, ‘durch Schlagen verursachen.’ But (1) ȝeslōh conveys an idea of finality, and means ‘to achieve’ rather than ‘to cause’ by blows; and (2) since Ecgtheow escapes safely, and the Wylfingas have to be content with a money payment from a third party, such ineffective vengeance could not be described as ‘the greatest of feuds’; for the honours go to the side which last slays its man. I take the fæhð to be a blood-feud preceding and culminating in the slaying of Heatholaf, by which slaying Ecgtheow ‘achieves’ the feud: cf. Widsith, 38, Offa ȝeslōg cynerica mæst, ‘won, achieved by blows, the greatest of kingdoms.’ [For ȝeslōh cf. Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 226–7.]

461. Wedera, Grundtvig (1861, p. 16): MS. gara: see ll. 225, 423, etc.

462. for here-brōzan, ‘because of the terror of war.’

465. Deniga, Kemble₂: MS. deninga: see ll. 155, 271, etc.

466. ȝinne rice, ‘my ample kingdom,’ and ȝumena rice have been proposed.

467. Heregār. Heorogār is of course meant. Many editors alter the name accordingly. When names are confused, it is frequently found, as here, that the first (alliterating) letter, and the second element, are kept intact. Cf. Sigeferð and Sæferð, Ordlāf and Öslāf, etc.

470. fēo instrumental. The ic of l. 471 is to be understood also with þingode [cf. Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 227].

473. The metre demands tō secgan [so Holthausen, Schücking, and Sedgfield]; similarly in ll. 1724, 1941, 2093, 2562. The uninflected form is preserved in ll. 316, 2556.

479. -sceaðan: MS. sc'aðan, the e in a different hand.

488. þē...fornam, 'since death had taken them away.' [Klaeber⁴⁵², comparing Riddles, ix. [x.] 11.]

489-90. onsēl...secgum: MS. on sēl meoto sige hreð secgū. The MS. reading has in the past been very generally defended [e.g. by Leo, Heyne, Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 292, Grein₂, Dietrich, Wülker, Kluge¹⁸⁸], and is retained by Trautmann¹⁸⁴: onsēl has been taken as the imperative of the verb, and meoto as fem. sg. (Grein, Sprachschatz) or neut. pl. (Grein₂, Bugge) of some word not elsewhere recorded, meaning either 'measure,' 'thought,' or 'speech': so onsēl meoto = 'relax the ties of etiquette' or 'unknit thy thoughts.' The difficulty is that a verb, unless emphatic, should not take the alliteration. Those who retain the MS. reading generally take sige-hrēð as an adj. = sige-hrēðig, 'victory famed' (so Heyne, Trautmann: but it is surely a noun), or make sige-hrēðsecgum one word. ✓ secgum..., weota being from witian: ‘in happiness ordain to these victorious men as thy soul bids thee.’

The reading on sæl meota sige-hrēð secga [Klaeber in J.E.G. Ph. vi. 192] is an improvement upon Holthausen’s, being much nearer to the MS., and giving better sense: ‘in joyful time think upon victory of men.’ This has since been adopted by Holthausen₂. The verb metian* is not elsewhere recorded, but may be inferred from the Goth. mitōn, ‘consider.’

Sedgefield₁ suggests on sæl mota sigehrēð[ig] secgum: ‘when time suits speak, victorious one, to the men’: Sedgefield₂ on sælum tēo (award) sighrēð secgum.

Cosijn¹⁰ would read Sighrēðsecgum = Hrēðmonnum = ‘unto the Danes.’

499. Unferð: always written with an h in the MS., although alliterating with vowels.

505. ȝehēdde. This is usually interpreted ‘obtain’ or ‘achieve,’ and is explained either as a compound of hȳðan, ‘to hide’ (Bosworth-Toller; cf. ll. 2235, 3059), or of hēðan, ‘to heed’ (so Sedgefield). But it may be, as Holthausen (who reads ȝehēȝde) and Schücking suppose [cf. Sievers, P.B.B. ix. 293], from ȝehēȝan (l. 425), ‘to carry out,’ in which case mærdða = ‘deeds of glory.’ Grein adopted all three interpretations in turn.

507. sund flite. The older editors took this as one word, ‘swimming contest.’ It is better, however, to render ‘didst strive in swimming.’ [Cf. Bugge in Tidsskr. viii. 48.]

512. rēon. The metre demands a disyllable, here and in l. 539.

- þær ȝit ēaȝor-strēam earmum þehton,

516. wylm[e], Thorpe: MS. wylm. The alteration is demanded by the metre, and betters the sense; wylm[um] or [burh] wintrys wylm have also been suggested.

For the gen. sg. wintrys see Sievers, § 44, N. 2: winter properly belongs to the u-declension, Sievers, § 273.

517. Tacitus [Germ. xi.] notes this reckoning by nights instead of days: Nec dierum numerum, ut nos, sed noctium computant. Cf. 'a sennight, fortnight.'

519. Heafo-Rāmas, Grein₁: MS. heaforāmes. The most correct form of the name, Heafo-Rēamas, occurs in Widsith (l. 63) and some editors would substitute it here.

520. ēðel: MS. ǣ. The O.E. name of this runic character ǣ was ēðel; hence the character is used here and in l. 913 for the word ēðel.

525. Either we must take wyrsan as gen. pl. for wyrsena, a form which would be extraordinary, but not quite unprecedented (cf. flotan and sceotta, Brunanburh, 32), or we must alter ȝepingea into ȝepinges [Rieger³⁰⁰].

The meaning is 'I expect from thee a worse issue.' Cf. l. 1396 [and see Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 224].

528. nēan: a disyllable. Note the characteristic syntax, 'to await from near at hand.' So Beowulf hears of Grendel's deeds, not æt hām, but from hām; see l. 194.

530. Unferð: see note to l. 499.

534. earfeþo, 'stress,' is not a good parallel to mere-strenȝo, so that many editors have altered to earfeþo, 'strength.'

✓ 543. him can take the alliteration because emphatic. Cf. l. 197.

548. ondhwearf: MS. ȝhwearf; for the use of this symbol with compound verbs, cf. ȝswarode, l. 258. Grein takes hwearf to be an adj., which he glosses 'versatilis, volubilis,' and compares Icel. hverfr, 'shifty.'

565. Some grammarians have seen in mēcum (l. 565), sweordum (l. 567), māȝum (l. 2353), perhaps māȝum (l. 2614), hēafdum (Rood, 63), etc., a survival of an old instrumental singular. This, however, is exceedingly doubtful [cf. Osthoff, I.F. xx. 163-218].

l. 1074, beornum ond brōðrum. Similarly here the plural has become almost an epic formula, which is used, although logically inaccurate, since Breca's sword had no share in this slaughter. [Cf. Cosijn¹¹. This seems better than to suppose with Heinzel that Breca and Beowulf together slaughter the monsters, and that the apparent inconsistency with the preceding lines, 544, etc., where the separation of Beowulf and Breca is told, is due to that O.E. 'harking back,' which he justly emphasizes. See A.f.d.A. x. 220.]

567. sweo[r]dum, Kemble; MS. defective at corner, having only swe and part of o. Thorkelin's transcript A has sweodum.

568. brontne. Similarly Icel. brattir is used of 'lofty' waves. No alteration of the text is necessary.

572-3. 'Fate often saves a man if he is not doomed, and if his courage holds.' The paradox is a favourite one in Germanic literature. Cf. ll. 670, 1056, 1552, where Beowulf is saved by God and his mail; Laxdæla saga, xv., where two fugitives, crossing a swollen river in winter, are saved 'because they were brave and because longer life was granted to them.' [Cf. Klæber in Archiv, cxv. 179.] Cook [M.L.N. viii. 118] quotes many parallels for the dogma that 'hap helpeth hardy man,' including Andreas, 459, etc. (which may be imitated from this passage).

574. Hwæpere. Some critics [e.g. Bugge in Tidsskr. viii. 48] have objected that there is no need for any contrast here. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 138] justifies the text, comparing the Mod. Eng. use of 'however,' resuming after a digression, without, necessarily, any idea of contrast.

577. mannon for mannan, cf. ll. 788, 849.

578. hwæpere, Thorpe; MS. hwæpere.

580. Finna land may be Lapland; but at this date there were still 'Finns' in the South, and localities in Southern Sweden have been suggested which harmonize better with Heafo-Rēmas than Lapland does.

581. wadu, Grundtvig²⁷ and Kemble; MS. wudu. See l. 546.

586. [ȝeflites] Kluge: Grein₁ suggested [fela]. Heyne assumed the loss of two half lines after sweordum, with the unpleasant consequence that the numbers of his lines were one too many throughout the rest of the poem. This has been corrected in the latest revision of Heyne: but students must be prepared to find most references to Beowulf in monographs following Heyne's old numbering.

587. The same taunt is hurled by Gothmund against Sinfjötli (Fitela): Helga kviða Hundingsbana, i. 38. There it is an instance of "flying," mere irresponsible abuse. That it is not to be so taken here appears from ll. 1167, etc. It is quoted by Beowulf with serious and bitter irony as Unferth's greatest achievement. [Cf. Cosijn¹².]

591. Gre[n]del, Thorkelin's emendation: MS. gre del.

596. If we retain ēower, we must take it as gen. of gē 'ye' dependent upon lēode. Trautmann, Holthausen_{1,2} and Sedgefield alter to ēowre.

599. Kemble₃ suggested hē [on] lust wiȝeð, 'he warreth as it pleaseth him,' which is supported by l. 618, hē on lust ȝeþeah. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 49] would read þiȝeð here likewise, 'he helps himself at will.'

But the MS. can be defended: 'Grendel feels pleasure': wiȝeð is then from wegan, 'to bear'; cf. ll. 1777, 1931, 2464.

600. sendeþ is the MS. reading, but the meaning is not clear. Leo translated 'feasteth': but though sand often means 'a course,' 'mess,' or 'dish,' there is no authority for sendan = 'to feast.' Schücking [in his edition: also in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 103: so Holthausen₃] renders sendeþ 'sends to destruction' = forsendeþ (cf. l. 904), but this is not satisfactory.

Yet the emendations proposed are equally inconclusive: Bosworth-Toller, scendeþ, 'puts to shame,' which fails to alliterate; Trautmann¹⁵⁸, swelȝeþ, 'swallows'; Holthausen_{1,2}, swenceþ, 'torments'; Sedgefield, serveþ, 'lies in wait' (sierwan), cf. l. 161.

secce, a dialectal form; see Sievers, § 151: Thorkelin and Thorpe normalized to sæcce, followed by older editors.

601. Thorpe and Heyne₂ etc. suppress ic. Thorpe (followed by Earle) then makes Gēata (weak form) the subject, and eafod ond ellen the object. Heyne takes eafod ond ellen Gēata as subject, gūðe as object, and gives as his reason for suppressing ic, that we can hardly construe ic Gēata as 'I of the Geatas,' or 'I among the Geatas.' This is true, but, as a previous editor has remarked, it 'is what Coleridge calls the "wilful ingenuity of blundering." What is to prevent ic being taken as the subject, and eafod ond ellen Gēata as the object?' ?

603. gūpe may be parallel to eafod ond ellen, or may mean 'in battle.'

644. Semninga must not be taken, as it is by several translators, to imply a hurried retreat. Precisely as in Mod. Eng. 'presently' (which indeed well renders semninga), the strict force of 'immediately' must not be pressed, either here or in ll. 1640 and 1767.

648. [ne], Thorpe's simple emendation, now generally adopted. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 57] proposed, in addition, to regard oþðe (l. 649) as equivalent to ond, as in l. 2475, and the suggestion was adopted by Heyne: 'and the darkness of night ["was" understood, Bugge⁸⁹] over all.' This is more satisfactory than Earle's defence of the usual meaning 'or': 'There is something of alternative between twilight and the dead of night.' Trautmann¹⁰⁰ and Holthausen regard gesēon [ne] meahton as metrically incorrect. It is unusual, but not quite without precedent. [Cf. Sievers, P.B.B. x. 234, and l. 1504.] Holthausen₂ emends sēon [ne] meahton; Holthausen₃ gesēon [ne] magon.

651. wan has changed its meaning from 'dark' to 'pale.' The modern meaning is inappropriate here. In other phrases, such as 'waters wan,' the appropriateness of the adjective has been rather increased by the change in meaning.

652. [ge]grētte. The half line is metrically defective, and the addition of ge [Grundtvig²⁷⁶] is the simplest and now the generally accepted remedy (cf. l. 2516). Grein₃ supplied [glædmōð], Heyne₂, etc. [gidðum].

one of the arguments of Müllenhoff¹¹⁶ against unity of authorship. The discrepancy is only apparent. The Danish hall had never before been entrusted by its king to a stranger. [For the explanation of this, and similar 'inconsistencies,' cf. Jellinek and Krans in Z.f.d.A. xlv. 265, etc.]

665. MS. kyning, at end of line: there is room for an a, but no trace of one. Most editors, however, follow Kemble, and read kyning[a] wuldor. Bugge⁶⁶⁸, Klaeber⁶⁶⁴, and Schücking argue for the MS. reading. In any case we must follow Müllenhoff¹¹⁷ in interpreting Kyning-wuldor, etc., as 'God': see Elene, 5; Judith, 155. [Cf. Holthausen, Anglia, Beiblatt, xiii. 204.]

668. Thorpe eoton (acc.) weard (nom.) ābēad; Heyne eoton (dat.) weard (acc.) ābēad. The difficulty of the uninflected acc., eoton-weard, seems less than the difficulties presented by these readings. The e of weard[e] is elided before the vowel: cf. l. 1932. [See Klaeber⁶⁶⁴.]

Beowulf is the subject of behēold, ābēad.

Sedgefield reads ābād and takes eoton-weard as referring to Beowulf: 'the watcher against the monster stayed behind.') ✓ 669. trūwode. The metre demands trēowde instead of the Southern form trūwode, here and in ll. 1533, 1993, 2322, 2370, 2540, 2953. In l. 1166 trēowde has been retained by the scribe. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 233.]) ?

670. mōdȝan may refer to God, or to Beowulf, or may agree with mægnes.

673. irena. Metre demands that the second syllable should be long [cf. note to l. 6]; hence here and in l. 1697 Sievers corrects to irennā (cf. l. 802, 2259) [P.B.B. x. 308; xxix. 568]. ✓

The text has been doubted, but its syntax is confirmed by a parallel quoted by Klaeber⁴⁵⁵ from Ælfric, who, after referring to the Redemption, continues ‘þæt folc ne cūpe þæra ȝōða, þæt hī cwædon þæt hē God wære.’

707. s[c]yn-scaþa, Grein: MS. synscaþa. If we keep the MS. reading, the parallel of mǣn-scaða (l. 712) favours the derivation of the first element from synn, 'crime,' rather than (as in sin-here, syn-snēd) from sin, 'incessant.' But the alliteration is incorrect [cf. Schröder in Z.f.d.A. xliii. 365-6]. The second element in a compound noun is the less important, and therefore should not take the alliteration when the first does not, and accordingly Grein, followed by Holthausen, Trautmann¹⁶⁴, Schücking, emended to scinscaþa, or scyn-scaþa, 'spectral foe.'

708. hē, Beowulf.

719. heardran hǣle we may render 'with worse omen' [Holthausen in Anglia, xiv. 267], or 'with sterner greeting.' If we read heardran hǣle, 'braver men,' we have an exceptional type of line [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 275]. Holthausen₂, after numerous earlier attempts, finally (ii. 170) reads heardran hǣle[scipes], 'more doughty valour,' Schücking heardran hǣle[bas], 'more doughty champions.' [For other conjectures cf. Bugge³⁰⁶, Trantmann¹⁶⁵.]

722. MS. defective at edge. Zupitza's transliteration of the MS. has [gehr]an; hr can be made out, though with much difficulty and some uncertainty. The preceding letters have been lost, but as there must have been two preceding letters we can hardly, with Schücking and Sedgfield, read hrān.

The contention that the simple form is preferable, because whilst hrinan usually governs the dat., gehrinan more commonly takes the acc., can be met by reading [æthr]ān (æthrinan takes the gen. and would therefore suit the context). This excellent suggestion was made by Grundtvig²⁷⁷ in 1820, but has been generally overlooked.

723. MS. faded. ðā hē gebolgen wæs was conjectured by Grundtvig²⁷⁷ in 1820 and is adopted by recent edd. Kemble and the older edd. read ðā hē ābolgen wæs. Zupitza says: 'Now bolgen is still distinct, and before it I think I see traces of two letters of which the first seems to have been g' [I can see nothing of this]: 'but what preceded this is entirely faded.'

But, as Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 430] points out, we have here the emphatic nē, 'nor,' which, in Old as in Mod. Eng., is not necessarily preceded by a negative sentence. Cf. ll. 510, 1071.741. slæpendne rinc = Hondscioh: see ll. 2076, etc.742. 'feet, hands, and all.' Cf. l. 2080. [See Cosijn¹⁴.]747. tōȝēanes, Sievers: MS. ongean. The change is metrically essential, and has been adopted by all recent editors.748. fēond is nom. and refers to Grendel, Beowulf is never so called: hē must then refer to Beowulf, not to Grendel, since the situation of ll. 750-754 would be impossible if Beowulf up to that had remained passive.748-9. onfēnȝ...inwit-þancum. (Beowulf) received him (Grendel) with hostile intent,' i.e. he did not flinch or try to avoid the attack but came to grips with Grendel whilst still lying down. This is the best rendering of onfēng, and is the situation implied in ll. 750 ff. Against this it is objected (Schücking) that inwit has a signification of malice and treachery which makes it unsuitable to Beowulf, and that we should render: 'Beowulf took, perceived, his (Grendel's) treacherous hostility.' Cosijn¹⁴ conjectures inwit-þanculum (dat. of adj. inwit-þancol, 'hostile in intent,' referring to Grendel). Grein took inwit-þanc as an adj. agreeing with 'Grendel' understood: but in the five other passages where the word occurs in O.E. poetry it is a substantive.

749. wið earm gesæt has been taken to mean (1) that Beowulf settled upon Grendel's arm [so, e.g., Clark-Hall]; (2) that he propped himself on his own arm [so, e.g., Grein, Gummere]. The second meaning is supported by The Harrowing of Hell, 67 (Christ and Satan, 432). Mr Grattan writes to me: 'Have you never tried to throw off a bigger man than yourself who has got you down? Beowulf is at a disadvantage, having been attacked while supine. He, with great difficulty, of course, gets one shoulder up, supported on one arm; and later, when his grip has alarmed the aggressor and caused him to pull away, he succeeds in getting on to his legs (l. 759). When once he has done this, Grendel's chance is up. Beowulf gets a clean grip on him (l. 760). All this is the language of wrestling, which is employed again later in the struggle with Grendel's mother.'

752. scēatta. Many editors normalise to scēata. But see Sievers, § 230.

756. gedræg, 'tumult': the word can be used both in an abstract and in a concrete sense, 'noisy bearing' or 'a noisy assembly.'

758. mōd[ȝ]a, Rieger: MS. goda. The emendation is necessary for the sake of the alliteration, and is followed by recent editors: Holthausen, Schücking, Sedgefield.

762. mæra, 'notorious': cf. l. 103. For other instances see Bosworth-Toller.

þær. MS. defective at corner: only the lower part of the r is now left: but Thorkelin's transcripts agree upon the last two letters, ær. As to the preceding letters, A has a blank, B records hw, but with another ink, and crossed out in pencil. With evidence so confused, the parallel of l. 797 tells in favour of þær, which is read by most editors.

765. þæt wæs, Grein₁: MS. þæt he wæs. The emendation is generally accepted.

765-6. Since sið is masc., ātēah is probably intransitive, and the second þæt a conj., not a pronoun, as in l. 717, etc. Translate 'that was a hard journey, when the ravager betook himself to Heorot.'

769. ealu-scerwen. A similar word, meodu-scerwen, occurs in the Andreas (1526). The meaning apparently is 'terror as at the loss of ale,' 'mortal panic.' Confusion has ensued because (through an early and remarkably long-lived error) the word in the Andreas has been read meodu-scerpen. On the theory that this was the right spelling, a derivation from scearp, with the meaning of 'sharpening, ferment, bitterness,' has been advocated [by Sedgefield; von Grienberger in P.B.B. xxxvi. 84; and Baskervill in his Andreas]. Wülker's facsimile of the Vercelli Book shows clearly that the right reading in the Andreas (as in Beowulf) is scerwen [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 410; Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xlv. 125].

Apparently we must connect the word with bescerwan=bescerian, 'to deprive,' a 'deprivation of mead' being synonymous with the greatest distress. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 294-5] connects with scirian, 'to dispense' (taken ironically, 'they were given to drink of a deadly wine').

770. ren-weardas. This has usually been read rēn (=regn) weardas, 'mighty guardians': cf. regn-heard in l. 326. Holthausen and Klaeber [J.E.G.Ph. vi. 193] have independently suggested that ren=ern=ærn, 'house,' by the common metathesis of r (Sievers, § 179, 1); rendegn [ren-begn]=aedis minister occurs in the Erfurt Glossary. 'The guardians of the house' gives the more satisfactory sense.

779. mid gemete. Klaeber⁴⁵⁵ argues for the meaning 'in any wise,' rather than 'with strength,' comparing Bede, 86. 8, ealle gemete=omni-modo, etc.

780. betlic, Grundtvig²⁷⁸: MS. hetlic. Cf. l. 1925.

781. Cf. ll. 82-5, and the note there.

782. swapule. Form and meaning seem alike to connect this word with swicolode (l. 1115) and swicðole (MS. swicðole, l. 3145). Context demands the meaning 'flame' and this is supported by the forms swolod [see Bosworth-Toller] and swofel [Anglia, viii. 452], both of which are given in glosses as equivalent to cauma ['burning'] vel aestus. The meaning 'smoke' often attributed to these words (Dietrich Z.f.d.A. v. 216) is possibly due to an attempt to connect the word with swefol, 'band, swaddling cloth,' through the meaning of 'enveloping smoke.' But context and the evidence of the glosses seems conclusive in favour of 'flame': cf. O.E. swelan, swēlan 'burn'; O.H.G. swilizo, 'ardor, cauma.'

788. Zupitza and others helle-hæfton; but nothing is gained by making the words a compound. For -an of the weak declension -on is not uncommon (cf. l. 849). Holthausen, following a parallel passage in the Andreas (1342), reads helle hæftling.

Almost all editors insert [tō] before fæste; and indeed the word may once have stood at the end of the line in the MS., though there is now no trace of it, and neither of Thorkelin's transcripts records it.

801. sāwle sēcan. Gering and Klaeber [Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 465] point out that this looks like a learned phrase: a translation of the biblical animam quaerere; yet it may have been a native idiom also (cf. l. 2422).

þæt understood before þone; cf. l. 199.

804. forsworen, not that Grendel had 'for sworn,' 'renounced' the use of swords, but that he had 'laid a spell' on the swords of his foes. If we translate forsworen as 'for sworn' then hē must be Beowulf: others tried to slay Grendel with the sword, but he, knowing better, had forsworn weapons [and trusted to his grip]. This is quite a possible rendering, for although below (l. 805) his must again refer to Grendel, such rapid transitions can easily be paralleled in O.E. syntax.

For the blunting of swords by the glance, see Saxo, Bk. vi. (ed. Holder, p. 187).

810. Holthausen would connect myrðe with mierran (Goth. marzjan), and interpret 'destructiveness,' but it is unnecessary to assume this word, since 'light-heartedly' gives satisfactory sense.

811. Kemble first inserted wæs after hē, and was followed by almost all editors except Wülker. This appears to be a distinct enfeeblement of the MS. reading. Fāz comes at the beginning of a line in the MS., and Heyne says it cannot be settled whether or no wæs stood before it. But the facsimile shows 'there was no room for wæs before fag' (Zupitza).

836. MS. defective: hr[ōf], Grundtvig⁷⁷⁹ [an emendation often attributed to Rask, but Grundtvig does not say so]. The reading hr[ōf] is confirmed by l. 926. There is no contradiction with l. 983, if we suppose that the arm is placed outside the hall, reaches over the door, and towers to the roof. For such a use of under, not necessarily implying that the hand is within the house, cf. l. 211. [See T. Miller, 'The position of Grendel's arm in Heorot,' Anglia, xii. 396, etc.; and cf. Cosijn¹⁴.]

845. niða ofercumen. Unmetrical: cf. ll. 954, 2150. Holthausen emends niða genæged.

846. feorh-lāstas, 'tracks of failing life.' [Heyne: cf. Klaeber, Anglia, xxviii. 445.]

849. hāton. MS. hat on heolfre, and so Grein, Wülker. Grein, rightly read hat on as one word, hātan (unnecessarily altering on to an, for which see l. 788). The reading hāton is much easier than hāt on, and l. 1423 turns the probability in its favour. No weight can be attached to the spacing of words in the MS.

850. The MS. reading deog has been explained as 'dyed' (Grein) or 'concealed himself' (Heyne after Leo), but no verb dēagan with either meaning is recorded in O.E.

Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 138] heoro-drēore wēol dēað-fīege dēop 'the deadly abyss welled with gore'; Bugge⁸⁰, dēað-fīeges dēop 'the abyss of the death-doomed one.' Cosijn¹⁵, whilst supporting Sievers, suggests tentatively that the MS. may be right, and that dēog is a noun = dēag, 'dye.' Kemble, had already suggested dēag. Considerations of O.E. style favour our taking dēað-fīege dēog or dēop as parallel to brim weallende, etc.

However dēof, the Northern form for dēaf, from dūfan, 'dive,' an emendation of Zupitza [Archiv, lxxiv. 124-5] and, independently, of Trautmann¹⁷², has been accepted by all recent edd.

Fol. 149^a.

868. ġuma ġilp-hlæden. Certainly not 'bombastic groom,' as Earle: ġilp has not necessarily in O.E. any such evil signification: cf. ll. 640, 1749. Translate 'laden with glorious words'; or perhaps simply 'proud' or 'covered with glory' (as Klaeber⁴⁵⁶, who compares ġilp-ġeornest [Bede i. 34], translating gloriae cupidissimus).

870-1. word ōþer fand sōðe ġebunden, 'framed a new story founded upon fact' [Clark-Hall]. But it is possible, as Rieger³⁶⁰ and Bugge [Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 203] thought, that ll. 867-874 are all one sentence, and that these words form a parenthesis ('word followed word by the bond of truth,' Earle). Cf. Hávamál: orð mér af orði orðs leitaði, 'word from word found me word.'

Yet, though we may delete the stop in l. 871, we need not therefore, with Rieger and Bugge, alter secġ to secgan: for cyninges þeġn, ġuma ġilp-hlæden, and secġ would all be parallel, subject of onġan styrian: eft (l. 871) would go with hwīlum (l. 867), echoing the hwīlum of l. 864, just as in ll. 2107-11 hwīlum.....hwīlum...hwīlum eft. [Klaeber⁴⁵⁶.]

For styrian in the sense of 'treat of,' a parallel has been quoted from Byrhtferth's Handbōc: Ne ġelyst ūs þās þing leng styrian.

875. 'Concerning Sigemund, concerning his deeds of valour.' Grein's emendation Sigemunde[s] is the more probable in that the next word begins with s; but, since it is not absolutely necessary, I refrain.

Does fyrena relate to deeds of violence similar to those told of Sigemund in the Volsunga Saga, §§ 6-8?

Concerning Fitela, Sigemund's nephew, and companion in his outlawry, we learn much in the Old Norse sources. See Index of Persons.

gehlōd. Many editors normalise to gehlōd; gehlōd for gehlōd may be parallel to wēox for wōx; see Sievers, § 392, N. 5. — ? ȝ r l

The loading of the boat with the plunder also follows the dragon fight of Frotho, in Saxo Grammaticus, Bk. II.

Earle adopts Scherer's emendation hāt[e], 'with heat.' [So Trautmann¹⁷⁴.] The alteration is unnecessary.

900. Cosijn's emendation āron ðāh, 'with honours throve,' is adopted by Holthausen, Trautmann, and Earle [cf. Sarrazin in Engl. Stud., xxviii. 408]. For āron = ārum cf. scypon, l. 1154, and hæafdon, l. 1242, and, for the phrase āron ðāh, cf. weorð-myndum þāh, l. 8. Nevertheless I cannot bring myself to abandon the clear reading of the MS., which makes at least as good sense as in many another passage.

901. It has been usual to begin a new paragraph with siððan: 'After Heremod's warring time had slackened off, he'.....(Clark-Hall, Earle, etc.). The punctuation given above is strongly advocated by Klaeber⁴⁹⁷. So Gummere, who comments: 'Heremod, one is told, might have rivalled and surpassed Sigmund, but the former fell from grace, turned tyrant, and in fact was precisely what the aspiring hero should not be—quite the opposite, say, of this glorious Beowulf.' Sigmund is the greatest urecca since Heremod.

In l. 902 hē must refer to Heremod [not to Sigemund, as Müllenhoff¹¹⁹, Rieger³⁹⁹ and others have taken it]. Heremod's story is continued; just as in the parallel passage, l. 1197, etc., syððan Hāma ætwæg, the story of Hama is continued in ll. 1200-1. In each case the poet drags in allusions rather forcibly. But that the connection between Heremod and Sigemund is not fortuitous, or the work of our poet, is shown by their being also mentioned together in the Old Norse. See Index of Persons: Heremod.

902. eafod, Grimm [Andreas u. Elene, 101]: MS. eafod, retained by Wülker; cf. l. 534. On the other hand see ll. 602, 2349.

eotenum. The word eoten has occurred several times in contexts where 'monster,' 'giant' was applicable. Here for the first time such meaning seems very doubtful, and we must assume either (1) that from 'giant' the generalized sense of 'enemy' has come into force [Rieger³⁹⁹: Holthausen] or (2) that the word here is a personal name distinct from the common noun, perhaps signifying 'Jutes.' [See Schücking for references.]

905. Note the false concord. Many edd. unnecessarily alter.

908, etc. The sið (perhaps = 'going into exile') of Heremod is a disappointment to the wise, who had hoped that he would be a credit to his country.

909. 'Put their hope in him (Heremod) as a remedy against their evils' (bealwa tō). For other instances of tō following the noun it governs, see Glossary.

913, 915. Hē, l. 913, is Beowulf, 'the kinsman of Higelac': but hine, l. 915, is Heremod.

915. ȝefæȝra, 'more pleasing,' comparative of an otherwise unrecorded

O.E. gefæg or gefaga, which can be postulated with some likelihood from the analogy of O.H.G. gīfag(o): M.H.G. gevage. [Cf. Sievers in Z.f.d.Ph. xxi. 356; Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 440.]

916. The story is resumed, with a repetition of incidents which, to the older critics, seemed the result of interpolation. Müllenhoff¹²⁰ compares ll. 916, etc. with 864, etc.; 917-8 with 837; 918 with 838; and 920 with 840. 'Fallow' seems more appropriate to horses than roads (cf. l. 865), and Cosijn¹²¹ would accordingly emend to fealcum.

924. medo-stigge, see note to l. 1085.

926. stapole. The obvious meaning is 'column' (cf. l. 2718), and so Heyne took the word here: 'he stood beside the central (wooden) pillar of Heorot.' Heyne was thinking no doubt of the 'Branstock,' the central oak which plays its part in the story of the Volsung hall. Schücking and others still adhere to this interpretation, or to a parallel one which would make the stapol correspond to the 'high seat pillars' of Icelandic halls [Sarrazin, Anglia, xix. 370].

But (1) 'beside,' though possible (cf. l. 1117), is not the most obvious meaning of on, (2) we have no evidence for any great middle pillar or high seat pillars in Heorot, and, above all, (3) this would necessitate our supposing that Grendel's hand had been placed among the rafters, but it seems from l. 983 to have been outside the hall.

Miller [Anglia, xii. 398] therefore interpreted stapol as the steps leading up to the door or the landing at the top of them, his authorities being an O.E. gloss, and the Mid. Eng. use of the word: þe steire of fiftene stoples. In his annotated hand-copy of Beowulf, Miller further quotes instances from the O.E. translation of Bede of stapol = 'footstep,' 'step,' and notes the parallel of the Odyssey [iii. 404]: Nestor seated on the 'smooth stones' before his door. The same interpretation has been arrived at independently by Earle¹²².

Rask's emendation on stapole = 'foundation,' 'base,' has been revived by Bugge⁹⁰ and Trautmann, but is unnecessary: and unsatisfactory too, for 'he stood on the floor or ground' seems but a feeble remark.

930. grynnu has been variously interpreted as 'snares' (= O.E. grin) or 'sorrows' (= O.E. gyrn). The latter interpretation is probably correct, for grin, 'snare,' is concrete, meaning 'halter' or 'net': the abstract sense, 'capturing,' given to it here by Earle, can hardly be demonstrated.

936. ġehwylcum. This very slight change [Kemble₂] from MS. ġehwylcne, though necessary, has been overlooked by most commentators. Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xlii. 326] argues strongly in its favour: 'a far-reaching woe unto every councillor' is supported by the comparison of l. 170, etc. Schücking in his last edition [1913] also adopts ġehwylcum; so Holthausen₃.

If we retain the MS. reading we must interpret it to mean that the court had been scattered by Grendel's attacks, which is clearly not the case (cf. l. 171, and passim). And apart from this the passage presents serious difficulties.

Unless wēa wīd-scofen is construed as a nominative absolute, 'fear having driven far and wide' [Grein, Schücking, 1910], hæfde must be understood [Bugge⁹⁰] or supplied [Trautmann and Holthausen₂—text], 'woe (had) scattered each councillor.' Trautmann and Holthausen₂ further adopt the emendation [of Grein₂], wīdscofen, which they interpret 'driven away.'

Holthausen₂, in a note, suggested wēan wīde scufon, 'woes scattered each of the councillors': so Sedgfield₂: already in 1820 Grundtvig²⁸¹ came very near this: wēan wīdscufon. Similarly Sedgfield₁, wēa wīde scēaf.

942, etc. Perhaps a biblical reminiscence. (cf. Luke 11.27).

947. secġ[a]. The alteration is necessary here, and in l. 1759, for metrical reasons. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 312.]

949. [n]ænigra, Grein₁: MS. ænigre. Grein afterwards abandoned this emendation; Grein₂ nænigre. [Cf. Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 203.]

954. No gap in MS. The metre demands [mid] before dædum, and this is supplied by Holthausen₂; so Sedgfield₁. Holthausen₂, dædum gefremed[ne]. [dōm] is supplied by Kemble₂.

962. frætewum. Grendel bore no armour; but the familiar formula, 'the foe in his trappings,' is used, probably not with any such grimly ironical reference as Trautmann¹⁷⁶ sees, to some fetters with which Beowulf hoped to deck him.

983. 'Looked up over' or 'in the direction of the high roof, and saw....'
 [Cf. Klaeber²⁸⁶.] See l. 836, note.

985. This line was first correctly divided from the preceding line by Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 138], who further proposed the emendation:

stiðra nægla stýle gelicost.

The details of Sievers' reading had been anticipated by earlier editors [Ettmüller, Thorpe]. His reconstruction is satisfactory, and is now generally adopted [e.g. by Holthausen, Trautmann, and with modification, stið-nægla gehwylc, 'each of his sharp nails,' by Sedgefield]. But as the reading of the MS. seems possible, it is here retained in the text [as also by Schücking].

986. hilde-rinces: MS. hilde hilde rinces, the first hilde being the last word on the page, the second the first word overleaf. In such cases it seems needless to call attention to the alteration by italics in the text.

spora is elsewhere a weak masc.; Rieger³⁸⁰ would read speru, 'spears'; so Holthausen, spelling hand-speoru (u-umlaut).

987. egl (more usually egle) is well authenticated in the sense of 'awn,' 'beard of barley': but nowhere else do we find it in the derived sense of 'talon,' 'claw.' Accordingly many take the word here as the adj. egle, 'hateful,' 'grievous' (Goth. agls, 'shameful,' aglus, 'difficult'), agreeing with speru or sporu, and either suppose the u of eglu to be elided, or else restore it: egl, unheoru, Rieger³⁸¹, Schücking, Holthausen: eglu, Trautmann. For both words cf. ail in New English Dictionary.

988. him must refer to Grendel, whom everyone said no sword might injure—unless [with Sievers, P.B.B. ix. 139, Holthausen, and Sedgefield] we read þe for þæt (MS. þ) in l. 989. In that case it refers to Beowulf, who, having torn off Grendel's claw, might be expected to be proof against anything.

Sievers and Holthausen further alter onberan wolde (l. 990) to āberan mihte.

991. Many emendations have been made to avoid the awkward construction hāten hreþe; Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 50, following Grundtvig²⁸⁷], hæatimbred, referring to Heort; Trautmann, handum hreþe; Sedgefield, hāton hreþre, 'with fervid zeal' or hāt on hreþre, 'zeal in hearts'; [cf. also Trautmann¹⁷⁸, Kluge¹⁸⁹]. Holthausen¹,² assumed a gap in the MS.

1000. MS. þe: emended by Ettmüller₂ and almost all editors to þā. It does not seem clear that this is necessary: for þe without antecedent can mean 'where,' 'when,' cf. l. 2468. [Cf. Schücking, Satzverknüpfung, 1904, pp. 7, 57-8.]

1004. gesēc(e)an, Kemble₂: MS. gesacan. If we keep the MS. reading we must render either 'gain by strife...' (cf. geslān), or, with Schücking and Bosworth-Toller, 'strive against the inevitable prepared place of the children of men.' Neither of these meanings gives very satisfactory sense: gesacan seems otherwise unrecorded, and is unmetrical [Sievers in P.B.B. x. 291].

Kemble's gesēcean has accordingly been generally accepted. 'Though a man would flee it, he must seek the grave' is one of those truisms which lend themselves to the hypothesis of a didactic interpolator. [Cf. Mullenhoff¹²¹.]

sāwl-berendra, bearna and grund-būendra are all parallel [Klaeber²⁴¹] and depend upon gearwe stōwe [Bugge²⁶⁸].

For another interpretation see Sedgefield.

Trautmann, in part following Ettmüller₂, reads, æghwylc sēcan sceal sāwl-berendra niðe genýdded..., 'each of living souls compelled by distress must seek....'

1008. swefeð æfter symle. Cf. l. 119. Cook [M.L.N. ix. 474] quotes many parallels for the metaphor of 'life's feast.'

1009. gānz. This form, which occurs here, in l. 1295 and in l. 1316, for the normal gāong, giong may perhaps be a dialectal peculiarity of a former copyist of this section of the poem. [Cf. Brandl¹⁰¹.]

1015. wāran. Ten Brink⁷³ and Klaeber [Anglia, xxviii. 442] suggested wæron: MS. þara. All recent editors have adopted this emendation, except Trautmann¹⁸⁰, who reads māgas þwære, 'the gentle kinsmen.' Earlier editors retained the MS. reading, and attempted to remedy the obscurity by devices of punctuation. Wyatt in 1894 read:

Bugon þā tō bence blæd-āgende, fyllfe gefægon; fægere geþægon medo-ful manig māgas þāra...

and commented "What is to hinder the antecedent of þāra being implied in blæd-āgende, in speaking of a court where everyone was doubtless related to everyone else, as in a Scotch clan?" With this interpretation the blæd-āgende, who take their places on the mead-bench, are the Danish nobility generally: their kinsmen, who empty many a cup, are Hrothgar and Hrothulf. But it may be objected (1) that the task of emptying the cups would not be confined to Hrothgar and Hrothulf; (2) that the point of the allusion is not that Hrothgar and Hrothulf are akin to the Danish nobility (blæd-āgende), but that they are akin to each other, and are, as yet, true to the ties which kinship imposes (cf. ll. 1164-5).

The alteration is a very slight one, 'paṇā' (i.e. wāran) might easily be misread 'paṇa' (i.e. þāra), and the gain in sense is very great. The poet has been speaking of rejoicing: then, with the tragic irony which he loves, he continues, beginning a new period, 'The kinsmen too were in the hall—not yet was wrong being plotted.' See Index of Persons: Hrothulf.

1020. bearn, Grundtvig²⁸²: MS. brand.

1022. hilde-cumbor. Ettmüller₂ hilde-, followed by Rieger³⁹¹, Holthausen, Trautmann and Schücking (1913): hilde-cumbor perhaps gives satisfactory sense, 'banner with a handle' [cf. Cosijn¹⁸], but it is very difficult to account for hilde instead of hilt. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 420.]

Cosijn¹⁸ justifies the punctuation, as given above. 'There is something of a pause before mære mādþum-sweord, the final gift, is mentioned. We might almost render 'and finally a glorious sword.'

1026. scēotendum, Kemble₃: MS. scotenum. Kemble's emendation has been generally followed, especially by recent editors. Grein₂, scoterum. Heyne₁₋₃ retained the MS. reading, and, when he abandoned it, Kluge [P.B.B. viii. 533] took up the defence, deriving from scota, 'shooter,' and quoting oxenum, nefenum, as examples of similar weak dat. pls. But the alteration is necessary on metrical grounds [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 312]: and see, too, ll. 703, 1154.

1028. fela. Kölbing would read frēan, on the ground that such costly gifts are naturally not given by 'many men,' but by 'kings of men' (Engl. Stud. xxii. 325).

1030-1. wala, emendation of Ettmüller, adopted by Grein: MS. heafod beorge wirum be wunden walan utan heold. If we leave the MS. reading unaltered there is a choice of difficulties. Either we must take walan as subject and hēafod-beorge as object, with a striking violation of grammatical concord in the verb hēold; or we must (with Heyne and Socin) take hēafod-beorge as a weak fem. noun in the nom. and walan as object, with considerable loss to the sense. The nom. pl. scūr-beorge (Ruin, 5) also tells against the latter view, which has no support from analogy. The emendation has accordingly of late been generally adopted. Sievers, Bugge²⁰⁹, Trautmann and Sedgefield prefer the more archaic form walu (Goth. walus, 'staff'). The change is slight, as in many scripts u and a can hardly be distinguished.

1032. fēla. Holthausen,² and Sedgefield [following Rieger, Lesebuch] normalize to fōla: unnecessarily. See Bülbring, 199 b.

lāf...meahton. So the MS. Since lāf is collective, it may quite conceivably be the subject of a plural verb meahton. But almost all editors feel bound to correct what they regard as a false concord. Earlier editors chose to emend lāf to lāfe, because lāf is not now in the MS.: our authorities for it being merely Thorkelii's two transcripts. But, from the position of the word, it must have been perfectly clear, when these transcripts were made, whether the reading was lāf or lāfe. Therefore to write lāfe to agree with meahton is practically as violent a departure from MS. authority as to write meahte to agree with lāf: and since the former change lauds us in metrical difficulties (cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 273-4), it is best, if we make any alteration, to write lāf...meahte [following Thorpe].

1033. scūr-heard. Cf. Judith, 79: scūrum heardne. Various interpretations are offered: 'tempered in water' (cf. 'the ice-brook's temper,' Othello, v. ii. 253); 'hard or sharp in the storm of battle,' 'cutting like a storm.' [Cf. M.L.N. vii. 193; viii. 61; xix. 234.] But I doubt if scūr does more than intensify: 'mighty hard.' Cf. Minot, x. 43: Full swith redy seruis sand þai þare a schowre, i.e. 'a great quantity, abundance.'

1037. under eoderas. The same expression is used in the Heliand (of the court of the High Priest, into which the 'earls' led Christ: thar lēddun ina...erlos undar ederos, 4943).

1048. lyhð. Metre demands two syllables: either ne lyhð or the older form lehið.

1051. -lāde, Kemble₁; MS. leade.

1056. Ettmüller takes wyrd as in apposition with God: so Sedgefield, who objects to the usual construction of wyrd as object of forstōde (see Glossary), because wyrd cannot be hindered or averted. But this seems open to dispute, both grammatically (since if, with Sedgefield, we render forstōde ‘help, defend,’ we should expect hīe not him) and theologically (since God is wyrda waldend, Exodus, 432; Andreas, 1056; Elene, 80).

1064. fore, ‘in the presence of’: cf. l. 1215, and Widsith, 55, 140, where the phrase is used, as here also, in connection with a minstrel’s song. ‘Healfdene’s war-leader,’ in whose presence the song is sung, should then be Hrothgar. Or possibly we may take hilde-wisan as dat. pl., referring to the old captains who had fought under Healfdene. The phrase would then be equivalent to for duguþe, ‘before the veterans’ (l. 2020). Trautmann suggests Healfdena. [Cf. also Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 449, note; Trautmann¹⁸³; Cosijn¹⁸⁻¹⁹.]

To interpret fore as ‘concerning’ [Grein, Jahrbuch f. rom. u. engl. Literatur, 1862, p. 269, note; Earle] is exceedingly forced, if not impossible: the hildewisa would then be Hnæf. Grein cites as a parallel Panther, 34, þe ic ær fore sægde, which he takes as ‘concerning which I spoke before.’ But this is extremely doubtful. [Cf. too Lübke in A.f.d.A. xix. 342.]

1068. Recent editors make the lay begin with l. 1069: Schücking [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 106] even with l. 1071. In both cases we must adopt the emendation of Trautmann¹⁸³ easeran for easerum: rendering 'made mention of the children of Finn, when the sudden attack fell upon them, a tale which was a hall-joy adown the mead-bench.'...It is less satisfactory from the point of view of style to make the lay begin, as in the text, with l. 1068; but it enables us to keep easerum, which we must take as instrumental: 'At the hands of the children of Finn...the hero of the Healfdene, Hnæf, was doomed to fall.' [See Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 443.]

The emendation Healfdenes [Grundtvig²⁸⁰, Kemble₂], usual in editions up to and including Wülker, is unnecessary and misleading, since Healfdene is presumably a tribal name. [See Bugge²⁸⁹ and Index of Persons.]

1070. MS. infr es wæle: 'r altered from some other letter' [perhaps], 'after it a letter erased, then es on an erasure: that fres is all that the scribe intended to write, is shown by a line connecting r and e.' [Zupitza.]

1072. Eotena. Most of the problems of the Finnsburh story depend upon one another, and therefore must be considered together. See Index of Persons, and Introduction to Beowulf. Only the more isolated problems are dealt with in the notes which follow.

1073. lind-, Kemble, for the alliteration: MS. hild.

1074. Apparently Hildeburh lost only one brother. It seems unnecessary to see, with Möller, a survival in brōðrum of an ancient dual construction, parallel to wit Scilling, 'Scilling and I' [V.E. 59]. Cf. note to l. 565.

1079. All editors follow Ettmüller, in altering hē to hēo, making þær hēo mæste hēold worolde wyune refer to Hildeburh. This is not necessary. Finn lost his thanes where he had had the greatest joy in the world, i.e. in and around his mead hall.

1081. fēaum. The original form must have been fēam; the u has been inserted on the analogy of other datives.

1083. gefeohstan. Klaeber [Anglia, xxviii. 443], followed by Holthausen₂, suggests gebēodan, 'offer fight' (cf. l. 603), on the ground that wiht gefeohtan, with a dat. of the hostile person, is not a permissible construction. Rieger (Lesebuch), Holthausen₁, 3, wif gefeohtan. See also Introduction to Beowulf: Finnsburh.

1085. hiȝ, the Frisians : him, Hengest's men.

The g of hiȝ simply marks that the i is long, precisely as in M.E. and other scripts ij=i. Other examples are hiȝ, ll. 1596, 1770; wiȝge=wige, 1656, 1770, 1783; siȝ=si, 1778; medostiȝge=medostige, 924; wiȝtig=witig, 1841 (wrongly 'corrected' by many editors into wittig); liȝge=lige, 727; Scedeniȝge=Scedenige, 1686. See Sievers, § 24, N., and for pronunciation of g, § 211, etc.; [also Cosijn in P.B.B. viii. 571].

1087. healfre. Unless, with Ettmüller, and Thorpe (followed by Trautmann, Holthausen, Sedgfield), we read healfne, we must take this as a gen. dependent upon ȝeweald, 'control of half the hall.'

1097. With elne unflitme, Guthlac, 923, elne unslāwe, has been compared: unflitme or unhlitme (l. 1129) is obviously an adv., but its form, meaning, and derivation are doubtful. It may mean 'indisputably,' from flitan, 'dispute,' or 'immovably,' from flōtan, 'float'; or, if unhlitme be the correct form, it may mean 'by evil lot' and be connected with hlytm (l. 3126). It is, of course, conceivable that both forms, unhlitme here and unflitme below, are correct, and represent different words. [Cf. Bugge³⁰, Trautmann¹⁸⁵, von Grienberger in Z.f.ö.G. 1905, 748-9.]

1101. ȝemāenden. This may mean 'nor should they ever break the treaty,' and be parallel in meaning to wære ne bræce. No such verb ȝemānan 'to violate an oath' is recorded, but the phrase māne āþ 'a perjured oath' (cf. mān, wickedness, and 'mansworn' in the Heart of Midlothian) is very common. (So Grein, Bosworth-Toller, etc.)

More probably, however, this is either the verb mānan 'to mention' or mānan 'to bemoan,' and we may render (1) 'they (i.e. people in general, and particularly the Frisians) should not mention it although the Danes were following the slayer of their lord,' i.e. the Danes are not to be taunted [Heinzel in A.f.d.A. xv. 192], or (2) 'they (the Danes) should not bemoan, although....' If we adopt (2) we must (since it is Finn's oath we are considering) render þæt 'upon condition that,' and þonne 'then on the other hand.' [Cf. Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 444.]

1102. bana must mean 'slayer,' not merely 'foe,' as Heinzel takes it [A.f.d.A. xv. 192]. It does not follow that Finn slew Hnæf with his own hand. The achievements of the retainers are attributed to the chief, as Tacitus tells us.

1104. frēcanan, Thorpe: MS. frēenan.

1106. Unless we are to understand some word like 'decide'—a rather violent proceeding—something must, as Sievers supposes, be missing here; or perhaps the necessary infinitive to scolde is concealed in the word syððan. Holthausen suggests syððan, 'restrain,' or syððan, 'confirm': Trautmann, and, independently, Sedgefield, sehtan, 'settle': Klaeber [J.E.G. Ph. viii. 255] sēman, 'reconcile,' or sēðan, 'declare the truth,' 'prove,' 'settle.'

1107. Åð. The emendation ād, 'the pyre' [Grundtvig²⁰³], has had its supporters in recent times. As Klaeber points out [J.E.G. Ph. viii. 256], it is more natural that the gold should be fetched from the hoard in order to deck the funeral pile of Hnæf than for any other purpose.

icȝe. The meaning 'costly' or 'massive' which has been suggested for this word is, of course, pure guess-work. It has been proposed to emend i[n]icȝe-gold, on the analogy of incȝe-lāfe, l. 2577, where see note [Singer in P.B.B. xii. 213; so already Rieger, Lesebuch]; or itȝe, 'bright,' not found in O.E., but cf. Icel. itr, 'glorious' [Holthausen₂; but cf. also Anglia, Beiblatt, xiii. 364]; or æce (a word found once on a runic inscription and supposed to mean 'one's own,' hence, 'domestic wealth') [Klaeber in J.E.G. Ph. viii. 256]; or to write ondicȝe as one word = 'exciting envy' [von Grienberger in Anglia, xxvii. 331; but cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 421]; or ondicȝe 'openly,' not elsewhere recorded, but cf. andȝeges, l. 1935, and Goth. andȝigjō, 'openly' [Bugge²⁰, Sedgefield,]. Holthausen, takes icȝe = idge 'eager.'

1114-7. The emendations here, mostly quite uncertain, are too numerous to record. Holthausen's ēame on eaxle is very probable: Hildeburh commanded her sons to be placed on the pyre 'by their uncle's (Hnæf's) side.' The tragedy of Finnsburh lies in the slaughter among kinsfolk. The relation of uncle to sister's son was the most sacred of Germanic ties (see below, l. 1186, note), and that the poet should emphasize this is natural. sunu is probably an Anglian pl. which the W.S. transcriber has omitted to alter. [Cf. Cosijn in P.B.B. viii. 569.]

1118. Grundtvig²⁸⁴ and Rieger³⁹⁵ emend to gūð-rēc. Skeat supports this reading by l. 3144, and Elene 795, rēc āstigan, and compares gūð-rēc with the compound wæl-fȳr in the next line. But there is no necessity for any change. āstāh = 'ascended' (i.e. 'was placed on') the pyre. The same expression is found in O.N. (áðr á bál stigi, of Balder's funeral). [Cf. Bugge in Tidsskr. viii, 51.]

1120. for hlāwe, 'in front of the mound.' It has been objected that this would not yet have been raised, and emendations have been suggested. [Cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix, 463.] But no change is necessary. Bodies were frequently burnt at the burial place, beside mounds which had been previously raised. See Introduction to Beowulf: Archaeology: Burials.

1125. Finn's army breaks up and his warriors return home [cf. Klaeber in J.E.G.Ph. vi, 193].

nēosian. Metre favours nēosan, which is the more usual form in Beowulf: cf. l. 115 (note), ll. 125, 1786, 1791, etc. [and Sievers, P.B.B. x, 233].

1128-9. The reading in the text is that of Kemble_{2,3}. MS. mid finnel unhlitme; Heyne, mid Finne [ealles] unhlitme (= 'unitedly'); [cf. Rieger³⁹⁷ and Trautmann¹⁸⁷].

1130. [ne] added by Grundtvig²⁸⁴. Grein read ne in place of hē. Cf. l. 648.

1134-6. Cosijn²⁰ emends dēð to dōað, followed by Schücking, who with Boer [Z.f.d.A. xlvii, 138] interprets 'as men do at the present day,' alluding to Hengest's waiting for the return of spring. Much the same meaning is produced by Sedgfield's emendation, þām for þā: 'until a second year came to dwellings (i.e. to men) as it (the year) still does come to those who are continually watching the seasons.' But see Glossary: weotian. That sele means 'time' 'season' is pointed out by Cosijn¹⁹.

1141. Apparently þæt inne must be taken together (= þe...inne), 'in which he would show his remembrance of the children of the Eotenas' (cf. Kock, Eng. Rel. Pron., § 102). Sievers [P.B.B. xii. 193] would read þær...inne 'where, he knew, the heroes were.' Cf. Holthausen's note.

1142. worold-rædenne. How does Hengest 'not refuse the way of the world'? The current explanation has been that it means 'he died' [e.g. Grein: cf. Heinzel in A.f.d.A. x. 226].

Clark-Hall [M.L.N. xxv. 113] suggests 'he did not run counter to the way of the world,' i.e. he fell into temptation, and broke his oath to Finn. [Cf. Klaeber, Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 136.]

Those who suppose that Hengest entered Finn's service with treacherous intent (Bugge, Earle, etc.) favour the emendation worod-rædenne (not elsewhere found: taken as signifying 'allegiance' from weorod, 'retinue').

Schilcking puts comma after gemunde, and renders swā... 'in such wise that,...' i.e., without breaking his allegiance.

1143. hilde-lēoma is probably the name of the sword which Hunlafing places in Hengest's bosom. See Introduction to Beowulf: Finnsburh.

1150. wēana dǣl, 'their manifold woes'; dǣl signifying 'a large part,' as in Mod. Eng. 'a deal of trouble.' [Cf. Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 228.]

ne meahste...hreþre. This is generally interpreted as referring to Finn: e.g. by Clark-Hall: 'His flickering spirit could not keep its footing in his breast'; that is 'he died.' For wǣfre of a spirit about to depart, cf. l. 2420. But it is more in accordance with O.E. style that ll. 1150-1 should be parallel to ll. 1149-50. Hence Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 295], following Ettmüller, 'the spirit (of the attacking party, Guthlaf and Oslaf) could no longer restrain itself.'

1151. roden, 'reddened,' 'stained by the life-blood of foes,' Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 64, 295]: MS. hroden 'covered.' Bugge's emendation [supported by Sievers, in P.B.B. ix. 139, xxxvi. 407 and Klaeber, in Anglia, xxviii. 445] is made for metrical reasons (cf. l. 2916), to prevent the superfluous double alliteration in the second half line, and is almost certainly correct: he compares Andreas, 1005, deað-wang rudon.

1152. fēorum, 'bodies': cf. note to l. 1210.

Ettmüller₂ suggested þū nū [friðu] hafast, and the reading friðu or freoðu has been widely accepted. But metrically it is unsatisfactory [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 248; but see also xii. 196]. Also the alliteration should run on n not f.

ll. 60, 1510, 1883, 2307. Beowulf is meant, who has been adopted by Hrothgar (ll. 946 etc.) [cf. Klaeber²⁴⁴]. The letter should be compared in which Theodoric the Great adopts a king of the Eruli as his son in arms, sending him gifts of horses, swords, shields, and other war-trappings, and instructing him in the duties of his new relationship. [Cassiodorus, Variae iv. 2.]

1178. mēdo. Both Thorkelin's transcripts, A and B, read medo: MS. defective at edge. Editors have usually normalized to mēda, but we have already had a gen. pl. in o (see l. 70). Such gen. pls. are most usually found in masc. and neut. nouns: but cf. þāra minra ondsuaro in Epist. Alexand. 423 [Anglia, iv. 155]; hýnðo in l. 475 is perhaps also a gen. pl.

1186-7. Holthausen compares Tacitus [Germania, xx.]: sorum filii idem apud avunculum qui apud patrem honor: and this close tie between the maternal uncle and his sister's sons is of course a feature of many primitive tribes (see note to ll. 1114-7, above). But Hrothulf is son, not of a sister, but of the brother Halga, himself a mighty sea-king: he has claims to the succession which the queen justly fears. See Index of Persons: Hrothulf.

1194. earm-rēade: so MS.; Grein, earm-[h]rēade. For the occasional absence of initial h, especially in the second element of compounds, see Sievers, § 217, Bülbring § 526.

1198. hord-mādm: MS. hord madmum. Almost all editors have emended to māððum [Grein,] or māðm [Grundtvig, 1861]. The emendation is here adopted (though the spelling mādm is retained) because (1) a dat. mādmum can only be construed with difficulty, (2) māðm is metrically superior, and (3) a scribe, having in his original the archaic form māðm or madm, and intending to modernize this to maððum, might very easily have miswritten madmum. [Cf. also Trautmann¹⁹².]

1199. þære, Ettmüller₂: MS. here. Apart from difficulties of meaning, a compound here-beorhtan would be impossible here for the alliteration; cf. note to l. 707.

1200. sinc-fæt. On the analogy of gold-fæt (Phoenix, 302) the meaning 'precious setting' has been proposed [Klaeber, J.E.G.Ph. vi. 194].

flēah, Leo, Grundtvig (1861), Cosijn [P.B.B. viii. 569], Bugge⁶⁹: MS. fealh. "Flēah gives an easier construction and is confirmed by the fact that, according to the saga, Hama in reality 'fled from the enmity of Eormenric.'" The emendation is accepted by recent editors. See Index of Persons: Hama.

1201. Two explanations of 'he chose the eternal counsel, welfare' have been suggested. (1) 'He went into the cloister,' as Hama does in the Thidreks saga. This, it is objected, is hardly a likely interpretation in so early a poem as Beowulf. The retirement of the hero to a monastery seems indeed to be a motive found most frequently in French Romance. Yet, since we know of early Anglo-Saxon chiefs, e.g. King Ethelred of Mercia and Eadberht of Northumbria, who did end their days in the cloister, it may have been a motive also in O.E. poetry. (2) The meaning 'he died' is suggested: similar euphemisms for death are common. Bugge⁷⁰ and Klaeber [Christ. Elementen, in Anglia, xxxv. 456] combine both meanings: 'he went into the monastery, and there ended piously.'

But in l. 1760, and in Exodus, 515, the phrase ēce rēdas seems rather to mean 'counsel such as will lead to eternal benefit,' without any connotation of either the monastery or the grave. Professor Priebisch suggests to me that the pious ēcne ræd, ēce rēdas has in both places in Beowulf been substituted by a monkish copyist for some other phrase. This seems very possible.

1206. wēan āhsode, 'he went in search of trouble.' [Cf. Klaeber in M.L.N. xvi. 30.]

1212. rēafedon, Ettmüller₂: MS. reafeden; the pl. indic. in en does occur in O.E. dialects, but so rarely as to make it probable that here it is only the late scribe's error.

1213. gūð-sceare. On the analogy of inwiðscear (l. 2478) it seems that the 'cutting' or 'shearing' implied by scear is that of the sword of the foe, not the metaphorical dividing of Fate. Translate then 'after the carnage' rather than [with Earle, Clark-Hall] 'by the fortune of war.'

1214. Cosijn²¹ would read Halsbēge onfēng Wealhðeo mapelode, 'Wealth-theow took the necklet and spake': he objects that 'noise' is out of place here: we should expect silence for the speech of Wealhtheow (cf. ll. 1698-9).

1223. MS. side corrected from wide.

1224. windgeard, weallas: MS. wind gearð weallas. The suggestion of Kemble, windge eardweallas, has been very generally adopted, and is still retained by Sedgefield. But such an instance of the alliteration being borne by the second element in a compound seems unprecedented. [Cf. Krackow in Archiv, cxi. 171.] So it is best either, with Schücking and Holthausen₂, to retain the MS. reading, interpreting 'the home of the winds, the cliffs' (cf. l. 229), or to emend with Holthausen_{1,2}, following Ettmüller₂, windge weallas, on the analogy of l. 572. ? allit.

1225. Most recent editors put a comma after æpeling, making it a vocative. It seems to me that such breaks in the half-line are to be avoided wherever possible. Cf. ll. 130, 2188, 2342. But see Klaeber²⁷.

1229. hol[d], Thorkelin, Kemble₂: MS. hol.

1234. geð-sceaft seems to be written for geāsceaft = gūsceaft*, another form of geſceaft, 'that which is shaped, creation, fate.' [Cf. Kluge in P.B.B. viii. ?

1242. hēafdon: on for um in dat. pl. Cf. l. 1154, and note to l. 900.

1247. The older edd. followed the MS., an wig gearwe: but ānwīz-gearwe, 'prepared for single combat,' or an[d]wīg-gearwe, 'prepared for attack,' involve the alliteration running on the vowel instead of on the w of wīg, and so make it easier to scan þæt hie oft wæron. [But cf. Klaeber⁴⁸⁸ and Schücking.]

1250. The manners depicted are those of Tacitus' Germania [cf. especially cap. xxii.].

1253. warode: MS., as well as Thorkelin's transcripts, A and B; "the parchment under wa is rather thin, and besides there is a blot on the two letters" (Zupitza). Hence the word has several times been misread farode.

1257. lange þrāze. The 'higher critics' point out that there is a discrepancy between this 'long time' and the shortness of the time which does, in fact, elapse before Grendel's mother executes her vengeance.

1260. sē might here refer to Grendel: but there is no reason for so interpreting it, since below (ll. 1392, 1394, 1497) the masc. pronoun is used of Grendel's mother: and even should we, with Thorpe, Grein, and Holthausen, emend to hæ[ʊ], sæ[ʊ], there remain passages like l. 1379, where Grendel's mother is called fela-sinnigne secg. The poet is inconsistent, thinking sometimes of the female sex, sometimes of the daemonic power, of the monster. Ten Brink⁹⁷, 110 saw in this confusion traces of an earlier version in which Beowulf fought under the water with two monsters, one female, and one male—Grendel's mother and Grendel.

1261. Cāin, Grundtvig²⁰¹, Kemble₁, etc.: MS. camp.

1266. See note to l. 1234.

1271. Kemble₃, etc., ġim-fæste: an unnecessary emendation. For the change of n to m before labials, cf. hlímbed, l. 3034, and see Sievers, § 188.

1278. sunu dēað: MS. sunu feod. Ettmüller, conjectured sunu dēað; dēað, written dēoð by a Northern scribe, might easily be confused with ðeod; probably the mistake originally arose through the wrong d being crossed by a scribe.

Gen. sunu for W.S. sunu is also Northern, cf. l. 344.

1280. sōna. Holthausen reads sō[c]na, 'a recurrence of attacks.'

1317. Some editors alter to the normal form hand-scale, cf. l. 1963. There is no other certain instance of the spelling scale (sceal=scolu in the Lament of the Fallen Angels, 268, is doubtful). The interchange of a and o is, however, not unprecedented [cf. parallels quoted by Kluge in Kuhn's Z.f.v.S. xxvi. 101, note: rador and rodor, etc.].

1318. nēƷde, Grein: Thorkelin's transcripts A and B, hnēƷde; now de gone. The h is a mere parasitic prefix. Wordum nēƷgan (nēƷgan) occurs in Elene, 287, 559; Exodus, 23, etc.

1331. wæl-Ʒæst. See note to l. 102.

hwæder: MS. hwæfer. Ten Brink⁹⁸ [cf. Möller, V.E., 136] saw in hwæfer, 'which of the two,' a confirmation of his view that there had been a version representing Beowulf fighting under the water with both Grendel and his mother, and that what Hrothgar here states is that he does not know which of the two is the assailant [cf. Schücking₁]. But unless we are prepared, with Ten Brink, to regard ll. 1330-1 as an isolated fragment of such a version, out of harmony with its present context, we must read not 'I know not which' but 'whither': since it appears from the context that Hrothgar has no doubt as to the personality of the assailant, but does not know her exact retreat (cf. ll. 1333, 1339).

We may therefore (1) retain hwæfer, attributing to it the meaning of hucider [Heyne₁, Holthausen], for which no precedent can be found; (2) emend to hwæder, a form of hucider, of which examples are elsewhere found, see Bosworth-Toller [Grein, Heyne₂, Cosijn²¹⁻³, Sedgfield, Schücking₂, etc.]; or (3) emend to hucider [Sweet₁, Grein-Wülker, etc.]. The via media (2) seems preferable.

1333. The emendation of Kemble, gefægnod, 'made glad,' has been widely accepted: fyll would be from fyll, 'feast,' rather than fyll, 'fall,' 'death' [of Æschere]: cf. ll. 562, 1014.

1342. sinc-ȝyfa should signify 'a ruling (not necessarily independent) chief': Æschere may have been, like Wulfgar, a tributary prince. Or perhaps, with Holthausen, we can take the word as a fem. abstract noun: 'after the giving of treasure' by Hrothgar: joyful occasions when the absence of Æschere would be remembered.

1362. standeð, Thorkelin's correction: MS. standeð.

1363. Many unsuccessful attempts were made to explain hrinde till Morris, editing the Blickling Homilies, found there, in a passage (p. 209) which he supposed to be imitated from these lines in Beowulf, the expression hrimige bearwas, 'trees covered with frost.' The restoration of hrimige in the text here was generally accepted.

But the English Dialect Dictionary drew attention to the fact that the word rind, meaning 'hoar-frost,' was still current in the North of England; hrinde is then presumably correct, and is a shortened form of hrindede*, meaning 'covered with frost,' as was pointed out independently by Mrs Wright [Engl. Stud. xxx. 341] and by Skeat. Hrinde would be connected with hrim, 'hoar-frost,' as sund with swinman: a new example for the transition from md to nd [cf. Holthausen in I.F. xiv. 339].

1372. hȳdan, supplied by Kemble. No gap in MS., but a mark like a colon shows that the scribe realized that something had been omitted.

1379. MS. fela sinnigne: fela is best omitted, as otherwise it should take the alliteration.

1382. It is strange that whilst recent editors frequently restore into the text ancient forms which the later scribes refused to admit, yet here, when the scribe, by a curious oversight, seems to have copied the early 8th century form wundini, 'with twisted gold,' most editors refuse to accept it, and modernize to wundnum.

Wundini is instrumental, parallel to binumini and similar forms in the early Glosses. [Cf. Sievers, Der ags. Instrumental, in P.B.B. viii. 324, etc.] That a 10th or 11th century scribe should have written an 8th century form here is strange, but that he did so must be clear to anyone who will look at the MS.: the d is now covered, but the next letters are either mi or ini, certainly not um. (This was noted by Zupitza, and before him by Holder; Thorkelin's transcript A has rundmi; B, wundini.) The scribe in any case would hardly have copied the old form except through momentary inadvertence. But surely to suppose, with Bugge⁹³, that he wrote this mi or ini by error for num is less reasonable than to suppose that he wrote it because ini (often not distinguishable from mi) was in the MS. which he was copying.

In that case Beowulf must have been already written down in the 8th century and our MS. must be derived (no doubt with many intermediate stages) from this early MS. In any case it is surely no duty of an editor to remove from the text an interesting old form, from which important conclusions can possibly be drawn.

1391. gang: the second g has been added above the line in the MS.

helm can mean 'protection,' 'refuge,' 'covering' [cf. Schröder in Anglia, xiii. 335], but is in that case usually followed by a gen., as in helm Scyldīnya, etc. Hence the old emendation holm, 'sea,' is defended by Cosijn²³. An example of helm without the gen. dependent on it appears in one of the Hymns [Grein₁, ii. 294; Grein-Wülker, ii. 280] helme gedȝyled.

1395. Heyne, ðys dōȝor, acc. of duration; so also Schücking. But it seems better to read ðȝs dōȝor, 'on this day' (instrumental). [See Sievers, § 289, and P.B.B. x. 312.]

1401. gende. Ettmüller, emended to gen[g]de, and has been followed by the editors. The emendation is probably correct (cf. l. 1412), but gende

1404. [þær hēo] was suggested by Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 140] to supply the metrical deficiency. It has been generally adopted. [Other possible stop-gaps are enumerated by Klaeber, J.E.G.Ph. vi. 195.]

1405-6. mazo-þegna...þone sēlestan: Æschere.

1408. bearn presumably refers to Hrothgar or Beowulf. Yet it may be pl.; for sg. verb with pl. noun, Klaeber²⁰⁰ compares ll. 904, 2164, 2718.

Some classical parallels for the scenery of the episode of Grendel's mother are discussed by Cook (M.L.N. xvii. 418).

1410. This line occurs also in Exodus, 58.

1414. fīeringa. As with semninga (l. 644, q.v.) the meaning must not be pressed.

1418. winum Scyldinga. The expression is more usual in the sg., referring to the king alone (ll. 30, 148, 170, etc.), but that it can also be used of the more distinguished retainers seems to follow from l. 2567. See also note to l. 1342 [and cf. Klaeber in J.E.G.Ph. vi. 195].

1423. hātan. Cf. l. 849.

1424. MS. defective at edge. Thorkelin's transcript B gives f...; f[yrð]- is an emendation of Bouterwek [1859: Z.f.d.A., xi. 92].

¶1426. The syllable lic in words like sellic is probably sometimes long, sometimes short. Metrical considerations make it likely that it is here short. Cf. ll. 232, 641 [and Sievers in P.B.B. x. 504; xxix. 568].

1428. It seems more reasonable to suppose that the nickers 'look after,' or 'undertake,' journeys of their own fraught with trouble, than that they 'look at' those of others. See Glossary: (be)weotian.

1439. genǣged: Sweet, ge[h]nǣged. But see l. 2206.

1440. wæg-bora has been variously interpreted: 'bearer of the waves' [Grein, etc.], 'wave tosser' [cf. Holthausen in Anglia, Beiblatt xiv. 49], 'traveller through the waves' [Cosijn²⁴; also in M.L.N. ii. 7, 1887], 'offspring of the waves' [von Grienberger, P.B.B. xxxvi. 99: cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 431], or 'piercer of the waves,' from borian, 'to bore' [an old interpretation adopted recently by Sedgfield; but cf. Sievers, Anglia, xiv. 135].

The emendation wæg-fara, 'the wave-farer,' has been suggested [Trautmann, followed by Holthausen, 2]: wæg-fara is not recorded, but wæg-faru is. The word wæg-dēor, tentatively suggested by Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 463], occurs in Crist, 988.

1447. eorres. Non-W.S. form, corresponding to W.S. ierres, yrres.

1449. menzan may possibly mean 'mingle with, visit,' as usually interpreted: but 'mingle together, stir up' seems a more likely rendering, in view of the common use of gemenged = 'disturbed' (cf. ll. 848, 1593). [Of. Klaeber in M.L.N. xvi. 16.]

1454. brond in the sense of 'sword' is found, though rarely, in O.E.: brandr with this meaning is common in O.N. Critics who object to the parallelism of brond and beado-mēcas have suggested brogdne beado-mēcas, 'brandished battle-knives' [cf. Cosijn²⁴: so, too, Trautmann, Holthausen, Sedgfield].

1456. ðyle Hrōðgāres: Unferth.

1457. hæft-mēce. The weapon used by Grettir's adversary in the Grettis saga is called a hepti-sax. See Introduction to Beowulf.

The emendation of Cosijn [P.B.B. viii. 571], āter-tārum for āter-tārum, 'poison drops,' has been supported by Andreas, 1333, earh āttre gemāl, 'the poison-stained arrow' [Cosijn²⁴], and by a close O.N. parallel often instanced [first by Bugge, Tidsskr. viii. 66], eldi vóro eggjar útan gýrvar, enn eitrdropom innan fjápar: 'the edges were tempered with fire and the blade between was painted with drops of venom,' Brot af Sig. 20, 3. But see note to l. 1489.

1471. mārðum: Thorkelin's transcripts A and B, mārdam; Thorpe, mārðum; Zupitza: 'mārðum: um at the end of the word is still distinct, and before um I think I see a considerable part of rð': um is still clear, but rð is not now visible, to me.

1474. For this use of se with the vocative, which does not occur elsewhere in Beowulf, cf. hæleþ min se lēofa, Rood, 72.

1481. hond-ȝesellum. As this word does not occur elsewhere, Holthausen follows Grundtvig (1861, p. 51) in reading hond-ȝesteallum.

1485. Hrǣdles. Many editors normalize to Hrēðles: unnecessarily; see notes to ll. 445 and 454.

1488. Unferð: MS. hunferð.

1489. wæg-sweord. The many emendations suggested are not satisfactory, nor necessary, for 'sword with wavy pattern' seems to explain the word adequately, although an exact parallel is nowhere found. [Reproductions of weapons, with wavy (and also twig-like—cf. l. 1459—) patterns will be found in Gustafson, Norges Oldtid, pp. 102-3.]

1495. hwil dægēs, 'a main while of the day' (Earle): not, as sometimes interpreted, 'a day.' [Cf. Earle's note and Müllenhoff¹²⁷.] For hwil, 'a long time,' cf. ll. 105, 152.

1497. sē, of Grendel's mother: contrast hēo in l. 1504. Cf. note to l. 1260.

1506. brim-wyl[f], Kemble; MS. brim wyl.

1508. þeah, Grein: MS. þæm. Grein's emendation makes good sense. The majority of editors follow Grundtvig (1861, p. 52), reading þæs, but are not agreed whether to take nō with hē þæs mōdiȝ wæs or not: and neither rendering, 'he was,' or 'he was not, brave enough to wield his weapons,' gives a very satisfactory sense. Schücking and Sedgfield, read þēr.

1510. swe[n]cte, Kemble; MS. swecte: the n, which probably in an older MS. was signified simply by a stroke over the e, has been omitted: cf. l. 1176.

1511. bræc, probably 'sought to pierce,' like wehte, 'tried to awake,' l. 2854. [Cf. Klaeber²⁶¹.]

1512. It is not clear whether āȝlācan is nom. pl., 'the adversaries annoyed him,' or sg. (gen. or acc.), 'they annoyed their adversary.'

1513. [in], Thorpe.

nīð-sele, 'hostile hall.' Grein, followed by Heyne and Bugge²⁶², reads nīð-sele, 'hall in the deep.'

Gummere, following Jellinek and Kraus [Z.f.d.A. xxxv. 273], denies that the course of the action is hopelessly confused: 'Beowulf, overwhelmed by the first onset of Grendel's mother, is dragged to her lair, and on the way is beset by monsters of every kind. Managing to extricate himself from the coil, he finds he is in a great arched hall, free of the water, and has only the mother of Grendel before him. He takes good heed of her, and prepares his attack.'

But the difficulty of this explanation is that nothing is said in Beowulf about the hero 'extricating himself from the coil.' The language of l. 1518 would rather lead us to suppose that the hero meets his adversary for the first time within the cave. This is certainly the case in the Grettis saga, and is probably the original form of the story.

1520. hond, Bousterwek [Z.f.d.A. xi. 92], Grein₁: MS. hord. Sweet, swenge hond, without explanation. The dat. swenge seems strange: we should expect the acc., and many editors accordingly alter to sweng here.

1522. ȝist. The 'stranger' is Beowulf.

1529. ān-ræd. Here, and in l. 1575, it does not seem certain whether we should read ānræd, 'resolute,' or (with Holthausen and Schücking) anræd = onræd, 'brave.'

1530. Hylāces. On metrical grounds it is to be presumed that the original Beowulf had the Northern form of the name, Hyglāc [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 463]. This has nearly everywhere been altered by the scribes to Hygelāc. We have here a survival of the older spelling: Hyglāc standing for Hyglāc as Wilaf for Wiglaf (l. 2852). [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁸.]

1534. dōn for dōan, disyllabic. Cf. gān (= gāan or gangan) below, l. 1644.

1537. [f]eaxe, Rieger: MS. earle. Rieger's emendation betters the alliteration, and has been adopted by Sweet, and by recent editors. Those who retain the reading gōda in l. 758 would however be justified in quoting that line as a parallel to ȝefēȝ þā be earle. To me feaxe appears also to give better sense: but this may be disputed. Mr Wyatt writes: 'William Morris agreed with me that it debased Beowulf's character, turning a wrestle into an Old Bailey brawl. Hair-pulling is a hag's weapon.'

1541. and-lēan, Rieger¹¹⁴: MS. hand lean. Rieger's emendation has been accepted by recent editors, to allow of the word alliterating with eft.

The same scribal blunder appears in l. 2094, where again the alliteration demands the vowel: ondlēan. Cf. also ll. 2929, 2972.

1543. oferwearp: if we retain the MS. reading, with the nominatives *stren*g*est* and *fē*p*e-cempa* referring to Beowulf, we must translate oferwearp, 'stumbled.' But no other instance is to be found of this intransitive use of oferwearpan. Hence the emendation of Ettmüller₂, *fē*p*e-cempan*: and of Cosijn²⁴, *wigena stren*g*el*: 'she overthrew the prince of warriors, the champion' (cf. l. 3115). The added n is the slightest of alterations (see note to *rē*s*wan*, l. 60), but even this is not essential, since *fē*p*e-cempa* might refer to Grendel's mother.

1545. sear, Ettmüller₂, followed by all recent editors except Schücking: MS. seaxe. The emendation is not absolutely necessitated by the accusatives brād, *brūn-ec*g, which follow, for such a false concord as an apposition in the acc. following a noun in the dat. can be paralleled. Cf. l. 2703 [and Klaeber²⁰⁹]. It is more conclusive that *ge*t*ēon* seems elsewhere always to take an acc.

1546. brād [ond] *brūn-ec*g, Heyne, on metrical and syntactical grounds: cf. Maldon, 163. Schücking shows that, whereas the conj. may be omitted when the two ads. are synonymous, or nearly so (e.g. l. 1074), it cannot be omitted when the ads., as here, signify distinct and independent qualities.

1550. Hæfde, optative: 'would have.'

1551. under gynne grund, 'under the earth.'

1556. Whether yðelice should be taken with *ge*s*cēd* or with āstōd has been much disputed, and does not seem to admit of final decision. The comparison of l. 478, *God *ra*p*e mæg, favours the punctuation of the text.

[Cf. Klaeber in Eng. Stud. xxxix. 431.]

1557. on searwum, 'among other arms' rather than 'during the struggle.'

1570. The light, mentioned in ll. 1516-17 (as also in the Grettis saga), flashes up when Beowulf slays the monster. But lēoma has been taken as 'the flashing sword' [cf. Meissner, Z.f.d.A. xlvii. 407], and, since the 'sword of light' is common in story, this seems not unlikely.

1575. ān-ræd. Holthausen, Schücking and Sievers [Z.f.d.Ph. xxi. 362] read an-ræd, 'with forward thought,' 'pushing,' 'brave.' Cf. note to l. 1529.

1585. We may take tō þæs þe as 'until,' referring back to l. 1572, etc.; or we may take it with forȝeald, though in the latter case the exact force of tō þæs þe is difficult to define: 'he had paid him recompense for that;... insomuch that he now beheld him...' [Earle]; 'he paid him back...to that degree that...' [Clark-Hall]; 'paid him back...where he saw him lying' [Schücking; cf. Satzverknüpfung, 58].

1589. hā refers to Grendel.

1590. The subject of becearf is Beowulf; hine refers to Grendel. Though Grendel, according to ll. 801-3, 987-90, cannot be wounded by the sword of Beowulf or his companions, there is no inconsistency here, since this is a magic sword. [Cf. Jellinek and Kraus in Z.f.d.A. xxxv. 278, etc.] The decapitation of a corpse is frequent in the Icelandic sagas: it prevents the ghost from 'walking' and doing mischief; and such a motive may, as Gering supposes, be present here also.

1591, etc. An attempt has been made to make the story run better by postulating a misplaced leaf, and suggesting that ll. 1591-1605 originally followed l. 1622. [See F. A. Blackburn in Mod. Phil. ix. 555-566.] But the story really runs quite well, and the order is the same as in the Grettis saga.

1599. ābroten, Kemble₃; MS. abreoten.

1602. sētan, Grein₃, following Grundtvig²⁰⁰ sēton; MS. secan. A very slight and quite certain correction.

1604. Cosijn [P.B.B. viii. 571] praises the 'common sense' of the English editors for having taken wiston as = wȳscton, 'wished.' So Kemble₃ wiscton; Sweet wȳacton. Recent editors make no alteration in the text, but regard wiston as = wȳscton. Cf. Sievers₃ § 405, N. 8. [Some parallel cases for the disappearance of the c are quoted in Engl. Stud. xxvii. 218: cf. also A.f.d.A. xxiv. 21.] That wiston is to be interpreted 'wished' is confirmed by the fact, pointed out by Klaeber⁴⁵⁸, that wȳscað and wēnað is a formula found in Guthlac, 47.

To interpret wiston as 'knew' would necessitate a blending of two constructions: wiston would require ne gesāwon: ne wēndon requires gesāwon only. Of course we might assume that the two constructions had been confused—confused syntax is common in Beowulf: or we might assume that ne had dropped out after the ne of selfne—'they knew, and did not merely expect, that they should not see their lord himself again.' But this gives, after all, only a feeble sense. For why, in that case, did they wait?

1610. wæl-rāpas. Grundtvig²⁹¹, not understanding wæl, conjectured wæg-rāpas, which would have the same meaning: 'wave-ropes, ice, icicles.' This was followed by many of the older editors, and was even adopted by Sweet (Reader). It is unnecessary, for wæl, 'a deep pool,' occurs not infrequently, the best-known instance being in the Cottonian Gnostic Verses, 39: leax sceal on wæle mid scēote scriðan, 'the salmon must go darting in the pool.' The word is also found in other Germanic dialects, in Scotch ('whyles in a wiel it dimpl't,' Burns, Halloween), and in the North of England.

1616. brōden for brogden. The application of this term to a coat of mail (ll. 552, 1548) shows that the meaning must be 'woven,' 'intertwined': and the analogy of wunden-mæl (l. 1531) or hring-mæl (ll. 1521, 1564, 2037) shows that this is applicable to a sword. It must refer to the damasked, intertwined patterns on the blade, or possibly to the adornment of the hilt. [Cf. Sievers, in Anglia, i. 580.]

1616-17. tō þæs goes with both hāt and ættren: 'so hot was that blood, and so venomous the strange goblin' (Earle).

1622. þas lēanan gesceaft, 'this transitory world.'

1624-5. To avoid a harsh construction, Bugge⁹⁵ would alter þāra to þære: Holthausen sǣ-lāce to sǣ-lāca.

1634. For cyning-balde Grein¹, followed by Holthausen^{1,2} and Sedgefield [so Cosijn²⁸], reads cyne-balde; the meaning is the same, 'royally bold': but the form is more easy to parallel: cf. cire-[obviously miswritten for cine-] bald, Andreas, 171.

1637. All recent editors seem agreed on the punctuation: yet fela-mōdigra might well go with fēower.

1649. þære idese, Wealthieow.

1650. Some editors read onsāwon, and make it govern wlite-sēon.

1656. Cosijn²⁸ [partly following Thorpe] suggests wig under wætere weorce ȝenēþde, 'with difficulty did I endure the warfare under the water.' Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 463] tentatively supports wig, retaining weorc.

1657-8. Grundtvig [1861, p. 152], followed by Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 52] and Sedgefield, takes wæs as 1st pers. and reads ȝūðe, 'I was almost deprived of my fighting power.’ But the change is unnecessary: the words mean ‘almost was my power of fighting ended.’ [See Cosijn²⁵, who compares Genesis, 53.]

1663. The subject of wisode is, of course, hē understood, referring to Waldend, 1661. Holthausen and Sedgfield, following Sievers, read oft wisode.

1666. hyrdas. Pl. for sg.: cf. note to l. 565. Those who hold that in the earliest version of the story both Grendel and his mother were slain in the cave under the water may possibly derive some small support from this pl. form here.

1675. on þā healfe, ‘from that quarter’ (from Grendel and his mother).

1677. gylden hilt. It has been suggested tentatively [Kluge in Engl. Stud. xxii. 145] that this is a proper noun—the name of the sword: the same name is borne by Rolf’s sword Gullinhjalti in the Saga of Rolf Kraki. But there is no question here of a complete sword, but only of the hilt: cf. ll. 1614, 1668. [See also Sarrazin in Engl. Stud. xxxv. 19: Lawrence in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. Amer. xxiv. 2, 242–4.]

1681. Müllenhoff¹³⁰ and Bugge reject ond as superfluous [so Schröder, Anglia, xiii. 336; Holthausen and Sedgfield]. It is certainly very unusual at the beginning of a sentence which is only a parallel expansion of what precedes [cf. Schücking in Satzverk. p. 83].

1686. Sceden-igge: MS. scedenigge in one word. It refers to Schonen (Skåne), now the southernmost province of Sweden, but at this date, and indeed much later, an integral part of Denmark: Sconia est pulcherrima visu Daniæ provincia—Adam of Bremen. It seems to be used here as a name for the whole Danish realm.

1688, etc. Müllenhoff¹³⁰ was doubtless right in seeing in these lines a reference to the flood, in which the race of giants and descendants of Cain was destroyed. Cf. Wisdom, xiv. 6, 'For in the old time also, when the proud giants perished, the hope of the world, governed by thy hand, escaped in a weak vessel.' Cf. ll. 113, etc., 1562. It is rather fanciful to suppose (as is often done) that there is any reference to that struggle between Gods and Giants which we find in Teutonic mythology.

How Grendel's kin lived through the deluge we need not enquire: surely they were sufficiently aquatic in their habits. Likewise it is too rationalistic to see any discrepancy (as does Müllenhoff¹³⁰) between ll. 1688-9 and ll. 1696-8. The sword bears the names of ancient giants, Grendel's fore-runners, of the time of the flood. Swords bearing inscriptions on hilt or blade, either in runic or Roman characters, are not uncommon. A good example is depicted in Clark-Hall (p. 231). Such writing of spells on swords is mentioned in Salomon and Saturn, 161, etc. and in the Elder Edda. Names may also betoken sometimes the owner, sometimes apparently the smith. The name of one smith, Ulfbern, is thus known from his swords. [For a representation of two of these, see Gustafson, Norges Oldtid, p. 102; cf. too Gering in Z.f.d.Ph. xxxviii. 138.]

1691. frēne gefērdon might mean 'they bore themselves overweeningly,' or 'they suffered direly.'

1694. No final explanation of scennum is forthcoming. We do not even know whether we should read on ðām, scennum, 'on it (the sword) by means of wire-work, filigree work,' or on ðām scennum, 'on the sword guard,' or 'on the metal plates' (with which the hilt was often covered). [This last suggestion is that of Cosijn, Taalkundige Bijdragen, i, 286, 1877. He compares Dutch scheen, 'an iron band.'

1697. irena. See note to l. 673.

1698. wyrm-fāh. Intertwined serpent figures were a favourite form of Germanic ornament.

✓ 1700. This 'sermon' of Hrothgar (ll. 1700-1768), in which the Christian influence is exceptionally clear (cf. ll. 1745-7 with Ephesians vi. 16), was naturally attributed by Müllenhoff¹³⁰ to his Interpolator B, whom he regarded as a person at once theologically minded, and yet learned in tradition. [For an eloquent defence of the passage, see Earle, pp. 166-7.]

1702. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 53] suggests þæt ðe eorl nære. But the change is unnecessary. In OE. the comparative sometimes appears in a context where, according to our ideas, no real comparison takes place. Cf. ll. 134, 2555 [and see Klaeber²⁵¹].

1707. freode, 'protection,' is supposed to be the reading of the MS. here. All recent editors read frēode, 'friendship' [Grundtvig²⁹²], which betters the sense. But I think there is no doubt that Thorkelin, Thorpe, and Wülker were right in reading the MS. itself as frēode. That the contrary view has latterly prevailed is due to Zupitza, who says: 'I think the MS. has freode, not freode; although the left half of the stroke in ð has entirely faded, yet the place where it was is discernible, and the right half of it is left.' But the alleged trace of the left half is due only to a crease in the parchment, and of the right half to a mere dot, apparently accidental.

1710. Ecgwela is unknown. He is presumably an ancient king of the Danes (Ār-Scyldingas), who are thus named the children, or perhaps retainers (cf. l. 1068), of their national hero. Müllenhoff⁵⁰ wished to alter to eafora, and thus to make Heremod the son of Ecgweſa: a change which, after all, leaves us little wiser about either. Cf. l. 901, etc.

1714-15. May refer, as Bugge³⁸ thought, to Heremod's lonely death.

1722. Bugge³⁶ [following Müllenhoff in A.f.d.A. iii. 182] interpreted lēod-bealo longsum as the 'eternal pain' which Heremod had to suffer for his evil deeds. But a comparison of l. 1946, where the word is used to signify the 'national evils' of a wicked queen, favours Clark-Hall's translation: 'he suffered misery for his violence, the long-continued trouble of his folk.'

1724. secganne. See note to l. 473.

1726. þurh sīdne sefan, 'God in his wisdom.'

1728. on lufan, apparently 'allows to wander in delight,' but there are difficulties both as to this interpretation and also as to the alliteration. Holthausen₂ conjectures on hyhte, Holthausen₃, on luston with much the same meaning; Sedgefield₁ adopts the conjecture on hēahlufan (cf. l. 1954), Sedgefield₂, on hlisan, 'in glory.' Grundtvig [1861, p. 59] had suggested on luste.

1733. Klaeber [Archiv, cxv. 180] takes his as referring to rice: 'the proud ruler can conceive no end to his rule.' The same result is achieved by Trantmann's conjecture sēlfa, 'prosperity,' for the rather otiose selfa.

1734. Thorkelin reads for his unsnyttrum, but for is not in his transcripts. Kemble omits, Thorpe retains, for. There would perhaps have been room for the word in the MS., but in view of the conflicting evidence it seems impossible to decide whether it ever stood there or no. Cf. Elene, 947.

1737. MS. defective at edge: sefa[n], Grundtvig³⁰², Kemble₁.

Grein₂, ne ȝesacu ōhwīer ecȝ-hete ēoweð, 'nor doth the adversary anywhere manifest deadly hate.' So Sedgefield, and, with slight variation, Holthausen.

1739. The MS. has a stop after con, the usual space with the number xxv, and then a large capital O. But it seems impossible to begin a fresh sentence with oð þæt, 'until,' as Earle does. Grundtvig [1861, p. 60] and Grein, make the break in the middle of l. 1739, Heyne after l. 1744.

1741. weard is apparently 'the conscience' [cf. Schücking, Satzverk. 121], hardly, as Sarrazin¹⁰³ suggests, 'the guardian angel.'

1746. him bebeorgan ne con is apparently a parenthesis and wōm wundor-bebodum parallel to biteran stræle. [Cf. Klaeber in Archiv, cviii. 369, and Holthausen in Anglia, Beiblatt, xiii. 364.]

1747. wōm=wōm.

1748. Zupitza: 'to imperfectly erased between he and lange.'

1750. fætte, Thorpe: MS. fædde.

1756. So in the O.N. Bjarkamál, as preserved by Saxo, the niggardly spirit of Roricus (Hrēðric) is contrasted with the generosity of Roluo (Hrōðulf) who succeeded to his throne, and distributed to his followers all the hoarded treasures of Roricus.

unmunlice. It is exceptional for un not to take the alliteration (in Beowulf only here and in l. 2000). [Cf. Schröder in Z.f.d.A. xliii. 377.]

1757. egeſan ne gýmeð echoes the idea of recklessness implied in unmunlice. There is no necessity for emendation.

1759. secg[a], Sievers [P.B.B. x. 312]: MS. secg, cf. l. 947.

1766-7. Earle and Clark-Hall translate 'glance of eyes will mar and darken all': an allusion to the evil eye. But the verbs seem to be intransitive: translate then 'the light of thine eyes shall fail.'

1767. semninga. Cf. l. 644.

1770. wigge belēac. It is not clear whether this means that Hrothgar protected his people 'from war' [Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 464] or 'in war,' 'by his warlike valour.'

The spelling ig=ī is particularly frequent in this part of the poem: hig=hi (1596); wigge=wige (1656, 1783); Scedenigge=Scedenige (1686); sig=si (1778); wigtig=weitig (1841). See note to l. 1085.

1774. edwenden, Grein: MS. ed wendan. Cf. ll. 280, 2188.

1776. Most editors read eald-gewinna. I have avoided such compounds except where clearly indicated by the absence of inflection in the adj. Cf. ll. 373, 945, 1781 (where no editor makes a compound of eald gewin) with ll. 853, 1381, 2778.

1781. ofer, 'after' (cf. l. 2394, note), or possibly 'in spite of' (cf. l. 2409). It seems unnecessary, with Holthausen, to alter to eald-gewinnan, on the analogy of l. 1776.

1783. Wülker, wig-geweorþad; Holthausen and Sedgefield, partly following Cosijn [P.B.B. viii. 571], who compares Elene, 150, wige [ge]weorþad. I have followed the MS., for which cf. Elene, 1195.

✓ 1792. unigmetes. Most edd. have followed Grundtvig²⁹⁸ in normalizing ig to ge. But for the spelling see Sievers₃ § 212, N. 1. It shows the beginning of the development of ge to i, which is commonest after un: cf. unilic=ungelic. Holthausen, on the other hand, wishes to write unigmete in ll. 2420, 2721, 2728.

1798. heaþo-liðende. See note to l. 1862.

1799. For hliuade=hlifade, see Sievers₃ § 194.

✓ 1803. There is no gap in the MS., but metre and sense both demand some supplement: scīma æfter sceadwe was suggested by Sievers [Anglia, xiv. 137]. It is satisfactory, and has been generally adopted.

Sedgefield proposes: scīma scyndan, 'the gleam hastening.'

The objection to both these last emendations is that they suppose two lacunae instead of one.

1808, etc. Grundtvig [1861, p. 62] suggested the change of sunu to sunā, and the addition of hine after heht: Müllenhoff¹³² the substitution of lānes for lēanes. With these alterations the meaning would be: se hearda

(Beowulf) orders Hrunting to be borne to Unferth, bids him take his sword, thanks him for the loan, and courteously speaks well of it.

But the text can be interpreted as it stands. We may render: 'Then the brave one (Beowulf) bade the son of Ecglafe bear Hrunting, bade him take his sword.' Or we may suppose that Beowulf has already returned the sword lent by Unferth. Then se hearda (Unferth) presents the sword to Beowulf, who courteously thanks him for the gift. The adj. hearda can well be applied to Unferth, whose spirit no one doubts (ll. 1166-7), though admittedly he is inferior to Beowulf, to whom the term hearda is even more appropriate (ll. 401, 1963). The change of subject (Unferth subject of heht, Beowulf of sægde) though harsh, can also be paralleled. That a parting gift should be given to Beowulf by so important an official as Unferth seems quite natural. The relations of Beowulf and Unferth would, with this interpretation, be curiously like those of Odysseus and Euryalus (Odyssey, viii. 408, etc.). [See Klaeber⁹⁹. Other interpretations have been suggested by herige, apparently from herian, ‘praise’: ‘I will honour thee’: but this sense of herian is hard to parallel: the comparison of weorðode in l. 2096 is hardly sufficient. The difficulty is, however, even greater if we take the verb as hergian, ‘harry,’ and interpret, with Leo and Schücking, ‘supply with an army,’ or, with Cosijn²⁷, ‘snatch away.’ If the symbol þ is sometimes used for þā (see note to l. 15) it might be so interpreted here: þā ic þē wel herige, i.e. ‘when I have so much to report in thy praise,’ Hygelac will gladly send help.

1833. wordum ond weorcum, Thorpe: MS. weordum 7 worcum. Such interchange of eo and o was encouraged by the fact that in L.W.S. weorc often became worc: cf. Sievers, § 72.

1837. gēþingeð, Grein₂, partially following Kemble₂: MS. gēþinged.

1840. Since him seems hardly sufficient to bear a full stress, Holthausen supposes a lacuna, which he fills thus:

Hrōðgār maþelode, [helm Scyldinga, eorl æðelum gōd] him on ondsware.

1841. wigtig. Kemble₂, following Thorpe and followed by most editors, altered to wittig. But no change is necessary: wigtig = witig. See notes to ll. 1085 and 1770.

1854. Grein (Sprachschatz, under swā) and Bugge⁹⁶, followed by most subsequent editors, leng swā sēl, ‘the longer the better’—a tempting emendation. But if one finds gross anomalies in accordance in the Beowulf, why should one look for a flawless syntax?

1857. gemāne, Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 140]: MS. ge mænum. The scribal error arises naturally from the three preceding datives.

1859-61. Holthausen regards wesan and geȝrēttan as optatives for wesen, etc., 'let there be'.... This compels us to take a pl. geȝrēttan with the sg. manig. Such syntax is possible, but it is surely simpler to take wesan and geȝrēttan as infinitives depending on sceal, sculon, supplied from l. 1855.

1862. heafu, Kluge¹⁹⁰: MS. heafu. Hēafu was retained by the older editors, who attributed to it the meaning 'sea' [from hēah: altum, mare, Grein; cf. also Cosijn, P.B.B. xxi. 10]. This would necessitate long ēa: which would give us a line, not indeed quite unprecedented, but of an exceedingly unusual type [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 235, 245]. In view of this difficulty, and of the fact that no certain instance of hēafu = 'sea' is forthcoming, it seems best to adopt the conjecture of Kluge¹⁹⁰, ofer heafu; especially as that phrase occurs later (l. 2477).

If we could substantiate a word hēafu meaning 'sea,' it would certainly help to explain the compounds heafu-liðende (Beowulf, 1798, 2955; Andreas, 426) and heafu-sigel (Riddles, lxxii. [lxxiii.] 19). We can explain these as 'warlike travellers,' etc., but it would be easier if we could take the first element in the compound as meaning 'sea.' For this, however, there seems insufficient evidence.

Sarrazin would retain ofer heafu, 'after the fight' (cf. ll. 1857-8).

his tears. The corner of the parchment is here broken away, and, on palæographical grounds alone, it is likely that a short word has been lost, though, when Thorkelin's transcripts were made, only seodða was to be seen, as now. Bugge's conjecture is therefore almost certain, and has been supported by Sievers [Anglia, xiv. 141] and adopted by Trautmann, Holthausen and Sedgefield.

gesēon, 'see each other.' For a parallel usage of gesēon see Andreas, 1012: also gedēlan in the sense of 'parting from each other' is found in Wulfstan. [Cf. Kluge¹⁹⁰; Pogatscher in Anglia, xxiii. 273, 299.]

1879-80. bearn, Grein: MS. beorn. The meaning must be 'a secret longing burnt.' Beorn is an unexampled form of the pret. of beornan [cf. Sievers, § 386, N. 2], so that it is necessary to make the slight change to either born [Thorpe and recent edd.], or bearn [Grein], with identical meaning: 'the longing burnt to his blood,' i.e. right into him. So Cosijn³³, comparing, for similar use of wið, l. 2673. [Cf. also Sievers, Zf.d.Ph. xxi. 363.] Heinzel [A.f.d.A. xv. 190] would interpret bearn as in l. 67 (from be-iernan, 'to run, occur'): but the alliteration is against this.

To avoid the unusual construction in the second half of this line Sedgefield would read Gewāt him Bēowulf þanan. Cf. l. 1601.

1883. āge[n]d-frēan, Kemble₃: MS. agedfrean.

1885. A colon is usually placed after gæhted, and Earle remarks that what follows is 'the gist of their talk as they went.' I take it to be a reflection of the scop.

1887. For sē, Grein, [followed by Holthausen] reads sēo, 'old age which has marred so many.' Cf. ll. 1344, 2685.

1889. We should expect hæg-stealda, not hæg-stealdra, and the reading of the text may well be only a misspelling resulting from the preceding mōdigra. It is conceivable, however, that the form is here used adjectivally.

The addition of [hēap], a conjecture of Grein, and Grundtvig [1861, p. 65], is metrically essential.

bāron. In this type of half-line (A) the second accented syllable is almost always short if preceded by a compound (e.g. l. 838, gūð-rinc monig). Sievers [P.B.B. x. 224] would accordingly alter to the infinitive here, and in this he is followed by Trautmann (beran) and Holthausen (beron=beran). As Sievers points out, it is possible that the MS. should be read beron, as there is a dot under the first part of the diphthong æ, which perhaps is intended to cancel it.

Rieger⁴⁰² suggested gewāt him on naca, 'the ship went on': on being then an adv., emphatic, and therefore capable of alliterating, as in l. 2523. The alteration is very slight, for elsewhere (ll. 375, 2769) the scribe adds a similar superfluous n. ✓

Bugge⁹⁷ supposed two half-lines to have been lost.

1913. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 141] would supply [þæt hē] on lande stōd, comparing l. 404. [So Holthausen and Sedgefield.]

1914. geara for gearu is probably not a scribal error: a for u in final unaccented syllables can be paralleled. [Cf. Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 194; Klaeber, Anglia, xxvii. 419.]

1915. lēofra manna may depend upon fūs or upon wlātode, perhaps upon both: 'looked for the beloved men, longing for them.'

1923. Trautmann and Holthausen₂, wunade, following Thorpe and Grein. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 141] regards this and the next line as oratio recta. But cf. the present tenses in ll. 1314, 1928, 2495.

Sievers would add hē after þær. [So Holthausen.]

1925. Kemble, brego-rōf, 'the king was a famous chieftain' [so Grundtvig 1861, p. 66], but the hyphen is unnecessary. Holthausen₂ suggests: brēc rōf cyning hēan healle, 'the brave king enjoyed his high hall': brēc being an Anglian form for W.S. brēc.

1926. Either we must interpret 'high were the halls' (an unusual use of the plural), or (as an instrumental-locative sg.) 'in the high hall'; von Grienberger and Schücking, hēahealle, 'in the royal hall'; Sedgefield, on hēahealle, with the same meaning; on hēan healle has also been suggested [Kluge, Holthausen₃].

1928. hæbbe. See note to l. 1923, above.

1931. Mōd þrýðe [ne] wæg, Schücking: 'She [Hygd], brave queen of the folk, had not the mood, the pride of Thryth': MS. þrýðo wæg. The alteration is essential, for þrýðo is hardly a possible form, whether we take it as a common or a proper noun: the u would be dropped after the long syllable, as in Osþrýþ, Cyneþrýþ [cf. J. M. Hart in M.L.N. xviii. 118; Holthausen¹¹⁸]. Yet þrýðo is perhaps conceivable as a diminutive of some form like þrýþ-gifu, as Eadu for Eadgifu [cf. Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 452]. Both scribes frequently omit ne: cf. ll. 44, 1129, 1130, 2006, 2911.

Moreover the emendation explains fremu folces cwēn, which seems not very applicable to Thryth: also it explains the otherwise unintelligibly abrupt transition from Hygd to Thryth. Schücking's emendation has been adopted by Holthausen, and is much the best explanation of a difficult passage.

Hygd and Thryth are contrasted, like Sigmund and Heremod.

The violent introduction of this episode from the Offa-cycle points probably to an Anglian origin for our poem. See Introduction to Beowulf, and Index of Persons: Thryth.

e before a vowel in ll. 338 and 442. But perhaps the true explanation of the forms frāfor in l. 698 and fīren here will be found in Sievers, § 251, N.

1933. þæt anticipates the clause þæt...starede (l. 1935).

1934. The MS. may be read either as sinfrēa, 'the great lord,' or as sin frēa, 'her lord.' It has been urged that metrically the first is preferable: yet instances enough can be found of the possessive bearing the alliteration. Cf. note to l. 262.

Thryth is the perilous maiden of legend, who slays her wooers, till the destined husband arrives. Her cruel acts are prior to her marriage, and therefore sinfrēa, 'the great lord,' i.e. her father, gives good sense. Yet sin frēa is possible—none save Offa, her destined husband, could gaze upon her as a wooer without paying the penalty. [See Cosijn in P.B.B. xix. 454; Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 449; and Introduction to Beowulf: Thryth.]

1935. hire an dægēs ēazum starede. (1) This has been interpreted 'gazed on her by the eyes of day' [Grein, etc.]. But hire an, 'upon her,' is difficult, for starian on takes the acc. (cf. ll. 996, 1485). (2) If we read an-dægēs, the rendering 'gazed upon her by day,' or 'the whole day,' has been proposed [Leo]: but here again the construction, starian hire, 'to gaze upon her,' is inexplicable. The substitution of hie for hire has therefore been proposed. (3) The MS. certainly divides an dægēs. But, since little importance can be attached to this spacing, Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 296], following a suggestion of P. A. Munch, supposed and-ēges = and-ēges = 'in the presence of' (cf. Goth. and-āugjō), governing hire, 'that gazed with his eyes in her presence.' Suchier [P.B.B. iv. 502] rendered 'eye to eye,' 'into her face,' apparently following Bugge's etymology.

1938. æfter mund-gripe, 'after the arrest' of the presumptuous gesið. [So Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 207; Suchier in P.B.B. iv. 502.] Sedgefield interprets mund-gripe as 'strangling,' but this surely would have rendered the subsequent use of the sword (l. 1939) superfluous.

1939. 'That the adorned sword might make it clear,' or 'decide it' [cf. Holthausen in Anglia, Beiblatt, x. 273] 'and make the death known': sceāden-mæl is undoubtedly a compound, 'a sword adorned with diverse or distinct patterns' (sceūdan, 'to divide' or 'decide'). [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 313: in xxxvi. 429 he compares wunden-mæl, l. 1531.] The older critics took sceāden as a distinct word, qualifying hit: 'might make manifest (scýran) the matter when it had been decided,' or 'that it should be decided.' [So Suchier in P.B.B. iv. 502, and (with unnecessary emendation, scýrian, after Thorpe's glossary) Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 207.] But these renderings are forced and unnecessary.

1941. efnanne. Cf. note to l. 473.

1942. Kemble₃, onsæce [so Rieger⁴⁰³, Schücking and Holthausen]. The emendation is supported by Juliana, 679, fēores onsōhte, 'deprived of life.'

1944. onhōhsnod[e], Thorpe: MS. on hohsnod: onhōhsnian does not occur elsewhere. Dietrich [Z.f.d.A. xi. 413-5] proposed a derivation from hōsc = hūs, 'contempt': 'Hemming's kinsman scorned this.' But the best suggestion is that of Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 302] who took onhōhsnian as 'hamstring' [cf. O.E. hōhsinu: Mod. Eng. hock, hough: M.H.G. (ent) hāhsenen]. Bugge interpreted the word in a figurative sense, 'stop' 'hinder.'

Hemminges, Kemble; MS. hem ninges; in l. 1961 the name is written heminges. A comparison of the many passages where this name (or its cognates) appears seems to show that the correct form is Hemming [cf. Müllenhoff¹⁵⁹; Sievers in P.B.B. x. 501; Binz in P.B.B. xx. 172]. The 'kinsman of Hemming' who 'put a stop to' Thryth's cruel dealings is presumably Offa.

1945. ððer sēdan, 'said yet another thing,' i.e. 'said further'; not 'said otherwise.' The words do not imply contradiction with what was said before. [Cf. Cosijn²³; Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 448.]

1956. If we retained the MS. reading þæs, we should have to take brego also as a gen., which is unparalleled, the word being elsewhere extant only in nom. voc. and acc. Hence almost all editors follow Thorpe in altering to þone.

1960. For the MS. geomor, which fails to alliterate, Thorpe read Eomær; so, simultaneously and independently, Bachlechner [Germ. i. 298] Eomær. Eomer, in the Mercian genealogies, is grandson of Offa (see Index of Persons). The emendation seems fairly certain, though a skilful attempt to defend geomor, as referring to Offa's dulness in his youth, has been made by Miss Rickert [Mod. Phil. ii. 54-8].

1968. The actual 'slayer of Ongentheow' was Eofor: but, according to Germanic custom, the retainer's achievement is attributed to the chief.

1975. Hraðe alliterates here with r. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 272.]

1978-80. Ambiguous. [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁶¹.] Does Beowulf greet his 'gracious lord,' or the lord his 'faithful [thane]'?

1981. heal-ꝛeced, Kemble₁; MS. þæt side ꝛeced. Zupitza: 'side added over the line in the same hand I think, but with another ink.' Unless two half lines have been omitted [as Holthausen supposes] the emendation is necessary for the alliteration.

The meaning of the mark in the MS. under the first e of ꝛeced is uncertain. Zupitza thinks it may be a mere flourish here, whilst it is used to convert e into æ in beſt (l. 2126). In fæðmiz (l. 2652) also it is ambiguous; the older form of the optative would have been fæðmizæ [cf. Sievers, § 361]. Under the æ of sæcce (l. 1989) it seems to be meaningless.

1983. Hænum: MS. hæ nū. Zupitza writes: 'between æ and n a letter (I think ð) erased.' There seems to me no doubt as to the erased letter having been ð.

Hæ(ð)num may be a proper name signifying the Geatas, or some tribe associated with them. So Bugge¹⁰, who interprets 'dwellers of the heath' (of Jutland) in accordance with his theory of the Geatas being Jutes. But the evidence for any name corresponding to Hæ(ð)nas in Jutland is not satisfactory. The Hæ(ð)nas would rather be identical with the O.N. Hei(ð)nir, the dwellers in Heiðmörk, Hedemarken, in central Scandinavia. Warriors from this district might well have been in the service of Hygelac; or the poet may be using loosely a familiar epic name. That those Hæðnas were known in O.E. tradition seems clear from Widsith, 81. The last transcriber of Beowulf, not understanding the name, and taking it for the adj. 'heathen,' may then (as Bugge supposes) have deleted the ð, not liking to apply such an epithet as 'heathen' to Hygelac's men.

Grein₁, followed by Sedgefield, conjectured hælum, i.e. dat. pl. of hæle (þ), 'man, hero.' But although the ð is often dropped in the nom. hæle for hæleþ, a dat. pl. hælum is not paralleled, and if we wish to interpret the passage so, it is probably best, with Holthausen, to alter to hæleðum, the only recognised form (cf. l. 2024).

1985. Grein₂ puts into parenthesis (hyne fyrwet bræc); but ll. 232, 2784, show that these words form a satisfactory parallel to fricgean, and can govern a following interrogative clause.

1989. MS. sæcce. See note to l. 1981.

1991. wið-. Thorkelin, Thorpe: MS. wið.

1994, etc. The 'discrepancy' with ll. 415, etc., 435, etc., is not one which need trouble us much.

1995. wæl-ġæst. See note to l. 102.

2002. [orleg-], Thorpe.

2006. MS. defective, here and in ll. 2007, 2009. Many editors (including recently Sedgefield) follow the reading of Grundtvig²³⁶: swā [ne] ġylpan þearf: ne certainly is demanded by the sense, but that ne was not the word missing before ġylpan is implied by Thorkelin's transcripts: A has swabe, B swal, which seems to show that a portion of a letter involving a long upright stroke could be read.

Against the reading of the text it may be urged that begielpān is otherwise unknown, and that it assumes an omission of ne where there is no gap in the MS. But the reading ne gylpan þearf involves difficulties at least as serious: for gylpan with an acc. can hardly be paralleled, and we should expect gylpan ne þearf (nē gylpan þearf would mean 'nor need he boast'). With difficulties thus on both sides there seems no justification for deserting the reading of Thorkelin's transcripts [cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 431].

2007. [ænig], Kemble₁.

ūht-hlem refers to the crash between Beowulf and Grendel rather than (as Gummere thinks) to the lamentation caused of old by Grendel (ll. 128-9) which is now no longer to be a cause of boasting to his kin: hlem signifies 'crash' rather than 'lamentation.'

2009. f[ācne] bifongen [so Schücking and Sedgefield] was first suggested by Bugge⁹⁷, and is supported by Juliana, 350, where the devil is so described.

Thorkelin's transcripts read: A fæ and a blank; B fer...; Kemble_{1,2} reads fær-bifongen [so Wülker]; Kemble₃, fen-bifongen; Grundtvig [1861, p. 69] fenne bifongen; fāsce bifongen, 'enveloped in flesh' [Trautmann, Holthausen] is good in itself, but seems incompatible with the (certainly very conflicting) evidence of Thorkelin's transcripts. These leave us in doubt what was the letter following f, but make it clear that it was not l.

2018. The MS. reading, bædde, must mean 'constrained, urged them to be merry.' But the conjecture of Klaeber⁴⁶¹ seems likely: bædde from biellan, 'encouraged, cheered' [so Holthausen_{3,3}, Schücking]. Cf. l. 1094.

2019. MS. defective at corner: Thorpe, [sealde]. Many editors have normalized to hio: but the spelling hie=hēo can be paralleled. See Sievers₃ § 334.

gēong. Note the exceptional indicative here, after ær.

2020. MS. defective: [d]uguðe, Grundtvig²⁸⁶.

2021. eorlum on ende. This is often interpreted 'to the earls at the end of the high table,' i.e. 'the nobles.' But the noblest did not sit at the end, but in the middle of the table. [Cf. Clark-Hall.] So the meaning must rather be 'from one end to the other.' Cosijn²⁹ would alter to on handa.

2023. MS. defective at edge. [næ]gled, Grein's emendation, is confirmed by the nægledē bēagas of the Husband's Message, l. 34.

2024. MS. defective at edge, here and in l. 2026: [is] supplied by Kluge. So all recent editors. That some such short word has been lost at the edge of the page is clear from the present condition of the MS. and also from Thorkelin's transcripts.

2026. [h]afað. MS. defective at edge: emendation of Kemble.

2028. wæl-fæhða dæl, 'the manifold murderous feuds.' Cf. ll. 1150, 1740, etc., and 2068 below.

2029. Oft ends a line in the MS., which is defective at the beginning of the next line, the s of seldan being gone. In this gap Heyne proposed to insert the negative: oft [nō] seldan hwær. For the tautology of 'often, not seldom' cf. l. 3019, and Psalms lxxiv. 4. [Other parallels quoted by Bugge, Tidsskr. viii. 54.]

Zupitza's view, however, with which I agree, is that there is not room enough for nō to have stood before seldan, though Kölbing and Wülker think there is. Oft seldan has been defended by Kock [Anglia, xxvii. 233] as meaning 'as a rule there is seldom a place where the spear rests, when some time has elapsed....' Kock compares l. 3062. [See also Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xlv. 125: he would interpret, 'As a rule it is only in rare instances and for a short time that the spear rests....']

Sedgefield suggests Oft sēlð (= sēlð) onhwearf æfter lēodhryre, 'often has fortune changed after the fall of a prince.' But this hardly gives a satisfactory sense. Fortune did not change. Ingeld was defeated, like his father before him. Better is the conjecture of Holthausen, Oft [bið] sēl and wær, 'often is there prosperity and peace....'

2032. Kemble, etc., read ðeodne. In favour of this it can be urged that ofþyncan always takes a dat. of the person, and that ðeoden is not a defensible dat. form. But ðeoden is the clear reading of the MS., and he would be a bold man who should correct all its grammatical anomalies. [Cf. Klaeber²⁵⁹.]

2033. þāra is emphatic, and hence can take the alliteration.

 þonne cwið æt bēore, sē ðe bēah [gesyhð, Fol. 175^a.

2035. bi werede, Grein₁; MS. biwenede. The alteration is exceedingly slight, since the difference between n and r in O.E. script is often imperceptible, and may well have been so here in the original from which our Beowulf MS. was copied; cf. urder for under, l. 2755.

Several interpretations of this passage are possible, (1) hē refers, not to Ingeld, but proleptically to the dryht-bearn Dena: 'when he [viz. the noble scion of the Danes] moves in the hall amid the chivalry [of the Heatho-beardan] then doth it displease Ingeld and all his men.'

The repeated þonne seems to demand this interpretation. The Heatho-beardan have consented to bury the feud, but when they see, then they can no longer control their fury.

But in spite of this, and of the slightness of the emendation bi werede, which it almost necessitates, most critics retain biwenede. We may then suppose that (2) hē refers to Ingeld, the ðēoden Heaðobeardna, and that the conjunction þæt has to be understood before dryht-bearn: it displeases Ingeld, 'when he goes with his lady into hall, that his high lords should entertain a noble scion of the Danes' [Clark-Hall, following Wyatt]. This interpretation compels us to assume a pl. subject with a sg. verb (duguða biwenede), but in subordinate clauses such false concords can be paralleled: cf. ll. 1051, 2130, 2164, 2251, etc. For the omission of þæt cf. l. 801 and note to l. 2206.

In both (1) and (2) the dryht-bearn Dena is a young Danish warrior escorting the queen. Some editors alter to dryht-beorn, 'noble warrior.'

(3) Sedgfield takes dryht-bearn Dena to mean the young queen herself: 'it displeases Ingeld when he treads the floor with his wife, that noble child of the Danes, attended by her chivalry.' With this interpretation it is, of course, to the duguð, and not to the dryht-bearn, that the mischief-causing weapons belong.

(4) Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 465] would take duguða biwenede as a parenthesis: 'the heroes are being feasted.' (For the omission of the verb 'to be' Klaeber compares ll. 811, 1559.)

2038-9. hie...hie: the Heatho-beard warriors.

2039. The MS. has a large capital O at the beginning of this line, such as one finds elsewhere only at the beginning of a new section (cf. l. 1740). But the number xxix [xxviii] is wanting, and the next break is at l. 2144, where the number is xxxi. There are signs of confusion and erasure in the numbering from the twenty-fourth section (l. 1651) up to this point.

2041. bēah is strange, for it is a sword, not an armlet, which is the cause of strife. If bēah can mean simply 'treasure,' it may be applied to a sword, like māþūm (ll. 2055, 1528). [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁰².]

Bugge⁸⁸ would read bā: the old warrior gazes upon both Freawaru and her escort.

Fol. 176^a.2064. āð-sweord, Thorkelin's correction: MS. að-sweorð.[syð]ðan, Kemble₁: MS. defective at edge.2067. Heaðobearna. Cf. note to l. 2037.

Some editors have been unwilling to follow Grundtvig and Holtzmann [Germ. viii. 496] in taking this as a proper name, and have seen in it a reference to Grendel's 'glove' (cf. l. 2085). But a comparison of ll. 2482-3 (Hæðcynne wearð...gūð onsæge), and the fact that place names postulating a proper name Hondscið are found in both English and German charters (Andscōheshām, Handschuchsheim) seems to place the matter beyond doubt. ✓

It is necessary, with Holtzmann and Rieger⁴⁰⁵, to alter the hilde of the MS. to hild. [Cf. also Bugge, in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 209.]

2079. magu, Kemble₂: MS. mæru magū (i.e. magum) þegne. But see ll. 293, 408, etc. The mistake is due to 'repetition,' magū being written, incorrectly, through the influence of mæru. In l. 158 we have the opposite error of 'anticipation.'

2085. gearo, Thorkelin's correction: MS. gear eo.

2093. reccenne. See note to l. 473.

MS. defective at edge here and in l. 2097. Thorkelin's transcript A has huiedam; hū i[c δ]ām is a conjecture of Grundtvig²⁹⁷.

2094. ond-lēan, Grein,; MS. hond lean. The alliteration demands ond-lēan, since in the first half-line the alliterating word is certainly yfla, not gehwylces. See note to l. 1541, where hand-lēan has been similarly miswritten.

2100. Cf. eorðan gefēoll, l. 2834, and næs gerād, l. 2898.

2137. All recent editors read hand gemæne, but cf. German handgemein werden, 'to fight hand to hand.'

2146. MS. defective in corner here and in next line. Thorkelin's transcripts A and B give ...is: Grundtvig²⁹⁷ and Kemble, conjecture [māðma]s.

2147. [mīn]ne, Kemble; [sīn]ne, the emendation of Grundtvig [1861, p. 73], gives inferior sense. With on [mīn]ne sylfes dōm cf. on hyra sylfra dōm (Maldon, 38), 'at my, their own choice.' Exactly parallel is the old Icelandic legal expression sjalfrdæmi, 'self-doom,' the right of one party to settle for himself the extent of the compensation he shall receive from the other. So, too, in the 'Cynewulf and Cyneheard' episode in the A. S. Chronicle, the pretender offers to the retainers of the fallen king hiera āgenne dōm, 'as much as they wished': and in Beowulf, 2964, Ongentheow had to abide Eafores ānne dōm, 'Eofor did as he chose with him.' [See Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 235.] Cf. the Old Saxon phrase an is selbēs dōm [Heliant, 4488, where Sievers' note should be compared].

2149-50. Does this mean 'From now on I look to you only for my reward: I have done with foreign service'?

2150. MS. lissa gelong is unmetrical [Sievers]: emendations suggested are lissa gelenge or gelongra: but a simpler remedy is to transpose the words [Holthausen, Litteraturblatt, xxi. 61] or to supply mīnra before lissa gelong [Klaeber, in J.E.G.Ph. viii. 257: so Holthausen₃].

hafo. For this old form of the 1st pers. sg. cf. ll. 2668, 3000.

But what is this boar ensign? A helmet, or an ensign with a boar-figure upon it? The last alternative is supported by l. 1021 [Klaeber⁴⁶²]. The eoforcumbul of Elene, 259, hardly helps us, being similarly ambiguous.

2157. The obvious interpretation is: 'that I should first give thee his (Hrothgar's) good wishes.' So Schröer [Anglia, xiii. 342], Clark-Hall, Sedgefield. Yet, according to the general rules of O.E. style, we should expect l. 2157 to be parallel to ll. 2158-9. Hence Klaeber⁴⁶² [followed by Holthausen] suggests that ēst may mean 'bequest,' 'transmission,' 'so that the meaning would ultimately come near to Grein's old rendering 'that I the pedigree thereof should report to thee' [Earle]." Note, however, that this old rendering, if right, was so by accident. For the older editors misread est as eft; and having thus turned a noun into an adv., they were compelled to find a new object by turning the adv. ærest into a noun, to which they gave the quite unprecedented meaning of 'origin,' 'pedigree.' The separation of his from the noun ēst with which it goes is unusual.

2186. The MS. has drihten wereda, which means 'Lord of Hosts' [cf. Rankin in J.E.G.Ph. viii. 405]. Drihten Wedera, 'lord of the Weder-Geatas,' the emendation of Cosijn³¹, seems exceedingly probable [so Holt-hausen and Sedgefield].

2205. hilde-frecan. Many editors follow Grundtvig [1861, p. 75] in altering to hildfrecan.

2207. The folio that begins here (179^a), with the word beowulfe, is the most defective and illegible in the MS. Moreover, it has been freshened up by a later hand, often inaccurately, so that most of what can be read cannot be depended upon (e.g. in l. 2209 the later hand seems to have changed wintra to wintru). Zupitza transliterates the readings of the later hand, and gives in footnotes what he can decipher of the original. I reproduce the more important of these notes: but in many cases I have not been able to make out as much of the first hand as Zupitza thought could be seen. All such cases I have noted: whenever Zupitza is quoted without comment it may be taken that I agree.

2209. Many editors follow Thorpe in altering ðā to þæt.

2210. ān altered to ōn by later hand. Cf. l. 100.

2211. rics[i]an, Kemble; 'Thorkelin's transcripts A and B ricsan: now gone in MS.

2212. MS. very indistinct; nothing in Thorkelin's transcripts A and B between hea and hord. Zupitza, hea[ðo]-hlæwe, and in a foot-note: 'what is left of the two letters after hea justifies us in reading them ðo.' Zupitza's reading is followed by Holthausen and Schücking. But it gives unsatisfactory sense: what is a 'war-mound'? 'A burial mound about which a fight is going to take place,' says Schücking: this however seems at best a far-fetched explanation.

Further, there is no evidence that the two missing letters were ðo: they look much more like um. And it is clear that the following word was not hlæwe, for the second letter of the word was not l. The word might be hūfe or hope. Sedgefield reads hēaum hūfe, 'on the high heath': but hūf is feminine; hūfe was also read by Sievers in 1870-1 [P.B.B. xxxvi. 418], so this is probably to be taken as the MS. reading. However to me it looks more like hēaum hope, 'on the high hollow.' The word hop survives in Northern English hope, 'a hollow among the hills,' as, for example, in Forsyth, Beauties of Scotland: 'The hills are everywhere intersected by small streams called burns. These, flowing in a deep bed, form glens or hollows, provincially called hopes.'

Although by the sea, the mound may have stood in such a hollow or hope: cf. the mention of the burn in ll. 2545-6.

2213. Later hand stearne.

2214–2220. Grein's attempt, in his Beowulf, to reconstruct the passage is too remote from the extant indications to need recording. That of Bugge^{99–100} is important:

- 2215 niðða nāt-hwylc, nēode tō ȝefēȝ

2214. þær on innan ȝionȝ niða nāt-hwylc can be made out fairly clearly from the MS. and Thorkelin, and there can be little doubt of the correctness of the emendation to niðða, made by Kluge.

But what follows forms one of the severest cruxes in Beowulf. Holthausen, in part following earlier editors, reads:

[nēadbys]ge feng
hæðnum horde; hond [āfeorde seleful] sincfāh: ne hē þæt syððan [ādrēȝ]...

'In dire need he (the fugitive) received the heathen hoard; his hand removed the jewelled goblet; nor did he (the dragon) endure it patiently.'

This may be accepted as giving the general sense correctly, and the words supplied by Holthausen fit exactly into the gaps indicated in Zupitza's transliteration. But a glance at the MS. shows Holthausen's restoration to be impossible: (1) immediately preceding gefeng was a letter involving a long upright stroke; i.e. either b, h, l, or þ: (2) there is not room for [āfeorde seleful]; the space allows, according to Sedgefield's reckoning, only 8 or 9 letters, according to mine 10 or 11, but certainly not 13 (as Zupitza thought) or 14: (3) [ādrēȝ] cannot be right, for here again the first letter was b, h, l, or þ.

The suggestion of Klaeber [Anglia, xxviii. 446], ne hē þæt syððan bemāþ, seems likely, 'nor did he (the dragon) afterwards conceal it,' i.e. he showed evident tokens of his anger.

Sedgefield reads sē [þe] n[ē]h ȝeþ[ra]ng in l. 2215, and does not attempt to fill the gap in l. 2216: sē þe nēh is probably right, but the space does not allow of ȝeþrang.

2217. Zupitza: 'fah originally fac, but h written over c.' Heyne-Schücking, fācne (cf. l. 2009).

2218. Grein and Heyne make two lines of this, and have been unaccountably followed by their modern editors, Wülker and Schücking. In compensation, however, they make one line of ll. 2228, 2229, so that their reckoning comes right again.

þ[ēah] ð[e hē] was made out with fair probability by Zupitza.

besyre[d wur]de partly read, partly conjectured, by Kluge.

2219. sio, Kluge. According to Thorkelin's transcripts, the MS. had sie. The e has now gone; sie is a possible dialectical form for sio (Sievers₃ § 337, N. 4), but, as the e was almost certainly in the later hand, which has here freshened everything up, we need not hesitate to alter it to o.

2220. bu-folc or by-folc seems to be the MS. reading, and has been adopted by Bugge and Sedgefield. Holthausen follows Kluge, burh-folc: but the faint traces of letters in the MS. certainly favour by or bu, not burh: and there is not room for the longer word. Bugge¹⁰⁰ compares the prose bifylc, 'neighbouring people, province': Sedgefield renders bū-folc, 'nation, people.'

gebolge[n], Grein₁.

2221. 'weoldum the later hand instead of wealdum, the a being still recognisable.' (Zupitza.)

The later hand reads wrym horda cræft, which makes no sense. Kaluza's wrym hord abrac, 'broke into the dragon's hoard,' has been adopted by Holthausen (q.v.), Schücking, and Sedgefield.

2223. Zupitza, þ[egn], and in a foot-note: 'the traces of three letters between þ and nat justify us in reading egn (þegn, Kemble.)' [So Holthausen and Schücking.] But the last three letters are now quite illegible, and even Thorpe, who made a careful collation of the MS. in 1830, three years before Kemble's first edition, leaves a blank. As þegn seems from the whole context to be an unlikely term for the feā-sceaftum men (l. 2285), I read þeow, following Grundtvig [1861, p. 76]. [So Sedgefield.]

2224. Later hand feoh.

2225. ærnes is not clear, but 'to judge from what is left' (Zupitza), and that is exceedingly little, it seems to be correct.

fealh, Grein₁: Thorkelin's transcripts A and B weall. 'Now only weal left, but w stands on an original f, which is still recognisable' [perhaps]; 'and what seemed to be another l in Thorkelin's time may have been the remnant of an original h.' (Zupitza.)

2227. Grein₂ [followed by Holthausen] suggests þær to fill the gap. But probably more than 3 letters are missing: Sedgefield thinks 4, Zupitza 5; it is difficult to say exactly, as the gap comes at the end of a line in the MS.

The indistinct letter after gyst seems to have been e. The traces of the third word allow us to read [with Grein] gryre. (Zupitza.)

2230. Zupitza reads, with some doubt, 'þa hine before se.' The extant traces seem to me to bear this out with fair certainty.

fær; Wülker reads this as fæs; Zupitza: 'fæs freshened up, but s seems to stand on an original r.' There can be little doubt that this is so.

2231. After the first line of the new folio, the illegibility is confined to the edges of the next three lines.

ȝeseah is Heyne's emendation, but I doubt if there is room either for that or for genōm, Holthausen_{2,3}. Yet the metre demands two syllables: funde might fit in.

2232. [hū]se, Zupitza's conjecture.

2237. 'Si the later hand, but i seems to stand on an original e.' (Zupitza.) I cannot see this.

'rihde the later hand, but wende the first.' (Zupitza.) Here again I cannot share this certainty as to the first hand.

Sedgfield was the first to note that the MS. reading ȳldan has been clumsily altered from ylcan. Both readings seem to be the work of the second hand. This is 'a genuine little find to rejoice at' [Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xlv. 122], as it gives us a simple and intelligible text:—the survivor 'expected the same fate as his friends,' viz. that his tenure of the hoard would be a transitory one.

2244. 'inon the later hand, but o stands on an original a.' (Zupitza.) Not clear to me.

2245. Zupitza, hard-wyrðne, and in a foot-note: 'w (or f?) and the stroke through d in wyrðne not freshened up.' The form hard occurs nowhere else in Beowulf. Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 431] suggested hord-wyrðne, 'worthy of being hoarded,' and this was independently adopted by Sedgfield (both adapting Schücking's hord, wyrðne dæl). The emendation to hord had already been made by Bouterwek [Z.f.d.A. xi. 98].

2246. 'fec later hand, but originally fea.' (Zupitza.)

2250. 'reorh bealc later hand, but the first r stands on an original f, and c on an original o.' (Zupitza.) Not clear to me.

fýra, Kemble₃ [fira]: MS. fyrena.

[lif] supplied by Kemble₃: [lēoht], Holthausen.

Holthausen supplies ic, as there is a gap in the MS. sufficient for two letters.

2253. MS. defective here and in ll. 2254, 2255, and 2268; fe[o]r[mie], the emendation of Grein₁, is supported by Zupitza, who shows that the remaining traces of the word in the MS. make fetige impossible. A trace of the tail of an r certainly seems to be visible. Cf. l. 2256.

2254. dug[uð], Kemble₃.

scōc, Grein₁: MS. seoc.

2255. hyr in [hyr]sted comes at the end of the line and is now lost. It is recorded by Kemble, after having been conjectured by Grundtvig²⁸⁰.

2259. irena: Sievers would emend to iren[n]a [P.B.B. x. 253]. Cf. note to l. 673.

2260. æfter beorne: æfter is here certainly temporal: 'after the death of the warrior.' The same interpretation is often given to æfter wīg-fruman in the next line. But the two phrases are, in spite of appearances, not parallel: and it is very likely that æfter wīg-fruman means 'behind,' 'following,' 'along with,' the warrior. [Cf. Klaeber in J.E.G.Ph. vi. 197.] This is certainly the meaning of hæledum be healse, 'by the heroes' side.'

2266. forð: Thorkelin's transcripts A and B, feorð; Zupitza reads it as forð. He says: 'There is a dot under e, which is besides very indistinct.' Underdotting is equivalent to erasure.

2268. hwe[arf]. Kemble gives the MS. reading as hweop, but the confusion of Thorkelin and the evidence of Thorpe make it very doubtful whether the last two letters were clear in Kemble's time; and hweop, which can only mean 'threatened,' makes no sense. It is possible either that hweop was miswritten for wēop, 'wept,' or that we should read hwearf, 'wandered.' Both suggestions were made by Grein: the first is followed by Holthausen₂ and Schücking, the second by Holthausen₃ and Sedgfield. It seems on the whole less violent to alter the op, which may be a mere guess of Kemble's, than the h, which stands clearly in the MS.

2275. MS. defective and illegible. Zupitza's emendation. Cf. Cottonian Gnostic Verses, 26: draca sceal on hlæwe [frōd, frætum wanc.

2276. [ho]r[d on] hrūsan was conjectured by Zupitza. on had been conjectured by Ettmüller₃, hrūsan read by Kemble₁.

2279. hrūsan, Thorkelin's correction: so Kemble, etc.: MS. hrusam.

2280. Most editors follow Grundtvig³⁰⁰, and alter to the normal form ābealh. Such normalizations would not be tolerated in a Middle English text: why should they be allowed in an Old English one? The spelling ch is interesting here; see Sievers₃ § 223, N. 1.

2281. Müllenhoff¹⁴¹ thinks that the lord (man-dryhten) to whom the treasure was carried, and who in return gave the fugitive his protection, must be Beowulf. This does not however seem certain. All we know is that the treasure ultimately came to Beowulf (l. 2404).

2283-4. The repetition of hord may perhaps be an error of the scribe. Holthausen, [followed by Sedgefield] suggests that the first hord is miswritten for hlæw, Bugge [Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 212] that the second hord is miswritten for dæl.

2287. wrōht wæs geniwad, 'a new, unheard of, strife arose.' Cf. use of nūce in l. 783. [See Klaeber⁴⁶³.]

2295. Cosijn³², followed by recent editors, reads sār. But cf. l. 2526.

2296. hlæw, Kemble₂. Thorkelin's transcripts A and B have hlæwum Grundtvig (ed. 1861, p. 79) hlæw nū.

ymbehwearf. The e of ymbe has probably been inserted by a scribe. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 258, and ll. 2618, 2691, 2734, Pinnsburg, 35.]

2297. ealne ūtan-weardne is unmetrical. Holthausen and Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 465], following Sievers [P.B.B. x. 306; Metrik, § 85], propose eal ūtanweard; Schücking, ealne ūtweardne. Cf. l. 2803.

2297-8. The MS. has: ne ðær ænig mon on þære wēstenne hwæðre hilde gefeh. This gives a sentence without a verb, and a line which fails to alliterate. The reading of the text is that of Schücking's edition [adopted by Holthausen₂, vol. II. p. 170]: næs is a conjecture of Cosijn³⁴. It makes sense and gives a metrical line with the least possible disturbance of the text. Grein reads ne [wæs] þær...; Heyne [wæs] on þære wēstenne. Rieger⁴⁰⁸ and Sedgefield assume two half-lines to be lost. Sedgefield₂ reconstructs the passage thus:

ealne ūtan ne wear[ð] ðær ænig mon on þære wēstenne [wiht gesýne].
Hwæðre hilde gefeh [.....]
bea[du]-weorces [georn];

þære, Thorkelin's transcript B. A has a blank: in the MS. itself nothing is now left but the lower part of the perpendicular stroke of þ. Normally wēsten is masc. or neut., and many editors accordingly alter þære to þām. Considering how corrupt the passage is, little weight can be attached to wēsten being treated here as fem.

Grein has hæðe, for the alliteration.

2305. se lāða, Bugge [Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 212], etc.: MS. fela ða.

2307. læ[n]g: MS. læġ. Grundtvig³⁰⁰ [and Kemble₂, following Thorpe's suggestion], leng. But by adopting the old form læng we can keep nearer to the MS. See Sievers, § 89, N. 5.

2312. gæst. See note to l. 102.

2325. hām. The MS., by an obvious scribal error, has him. Curiously enough Conybeare (p. 150) read the MS. as hām, but the credit of making the emendation goes to Grundtvig³⁰¹ and Kemble₁.

2332. The 'dark thoughts' are presumably a foreboding of evil, rather than any rebellion against divine decree, and their unwonted character (swā him geþýwe ne wæs) represents rather a lapse from Beowulf's customary optimism [Cosijn²⁴] than from his 'high standard of piety' [Earle].

2334. Arguments as to the home of the Geatas have been based upon interpretations of ēa-lond as 'island.' But it seems clear that ēa-lond need mean no more than 'water-land,' 'land that is bordered (not of necessity completely) by water,' as first interpreted by Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 68. For other examples, cf. Krapp in Mod. Phil. ii. 403 and N.E.D.: 'Norway is a great Ilond compassed about almost wyth the See'].

ūtan, 'from without,' marks the direction of the dragon's attack.

eorð-weard is parallel to lēoda fæsten and ēa-lond.

Sedgefield, reads ðon[n]e, comparing for position of ðonne, l. 3062; and for ðone written for ðonne, l. 70.

2336. leornode, 'studied, gave his mind to vengeance.' Cf. Cura Pastoralis, p. 435, l. 23, geleornað ðæt hē dēð ðæt yfel, 'gives his mind to evil.'

2338. eall-irenne (masc.) forms, of course, a false concord with wīg-bord (neut.). Hence many editors [Holthausen^{1,2}, Schücking, 1910] have adopted the emendation irenne scyld proposed by Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 56]. Bugge subsequently withdrew his suggestion, in favour of the less probable explanation that there was a form irenne standing to iren as ætterne to ætren [Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 213]. But syntax is often confused in Beowulf: scyld may have been in the author's mind when he wrote eall-irenne [cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 465]. Holthausen, reads:

*Heht him þā gewyrcean wigena hlēo [scyld]
eall-irenne...*

Mr Grattan suggests that irenne is the weak neuter; 'that thing all of iron.'

This shield all of iron is, of course, as fictitious as the shield with which Achilles was equipped for his greatest struggle.

2340. MS. defective at corner: helpan is Thorkelin's emendation.

2367. sioleða bigong = 'expanse of still waters,' if the conjecture of Bugge [Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 214] be correct, and siolod is to be connected with the Goth. anasilan, 'to sink to rest.' 2377. hine, Thorpe: MS. hi (= him).

2379. See Index of Persons: Onela, Eadgils.

2383. MS. ðe ðe, the first ðe at the end of a line, the second at the beginning of the next.

2384. With the punctuation given above, Him refers, of course, to Hygelac's son Heardred: 'that was his life's limit.' (For mearc in temporal sense cf. Genesis, 1719.) Sedgfield takes him þæt tō mearce wearð with the preceding lines, interprets him as referring to Onela, the helm Scylfinga, and mearc as meaning 'territory': 'Sweden had become his land,' i.e. Onela had succeeded Ohthere.

2385. for feorme. The MS. has orfeorme, 'forsaken,' which does not give very satisfactory sense. Grein's on feorme, 'at a banquet,' is an improvement. Better still is for feorme, 'on account of his hospitality.' This was suggested by Möller [V.E. 111], and has been adopted by most recent editors and translators.

2393. By supporting the exiled Eadgils against Onela, Beowulf obtains his revenge on the Swedes. [Cf. Bugge¹³, etc.] See note to l. 2603 and Index of Persons: Eadgils.

2394. Schücking adopts the emendation of Schröder [Z.f.d.A. xliii. 366-7] ofer sǣ-side, 'after a journey by water.' Sǣ side means the same as the wid wæter of l. 2473: the lakes which separate Swedes and Geatas.

2395. hē, Beowulf: cyniŋg, Onela.

2401. twelfa: MS. xii.

✓ 2409. wonŋ wisan. Not merely 'to show,' but 'to lead the way.' Cf. l. 208.

2421. Many editors follow Grundtvig (ed. 1861, p. 83) and read sēo. Wyrd is fem. elsewhere, but cf. ll. 1344, 1887, 2685.

2423. þon lange. Sedgfield suggests that þon may be miswritten for þon (= þonne), which would then be interpreted, as in l. 435, etc. 'therefore, and so.' Keeping þon, we must interpret 'it was not long from that time.'

2430. Holthausen, and Sedgfield read ȝeaf me Hrēdel cyning sinc ond symbel...

Hrēdel cyning alone is certainly a light line. Holthausen, s, avoids the difficulty by reading Hrēdel cyning ȝeaf as the half-line.

2432. ðwihte. Sievers [P.B.B. x. 256] would read wihte for metrical reasons [so Schücking and Holthausen].

2435. unȝedēfelice is hypermetrical, and is probably miswritten for unȝedēfe. [So Holthausen and Schücking: cf. Sievers, P.B.B. x. 234: Metrik, § 85.]

2438. Bugge¹⁰³, thinking frēa-wine 'lord' inapplicable, conjectured frēo-wine (= 'noble brother,' Earle), comparing Genesis 983, frēomīȝ ofslōh, brōþor sinne. Keeping frēa-wine: 'smote him who should have been his lord.'

2439. ofscēt = ofscēat.

2441. fyrenum in l. 1744 perhaps means 'maliciously,' 'treacherously': but here it has only an intensifying force, 'exceedingly': no malicious intent is attributed to Hæthcyn. [Cf. Klaeber¹⁰⁹.]

2442. Holthausen, in part following Grein, reads Hrēðle hyȝemēðo, 'a heart sorrow for Hrethel.'

2444. Swā, 'in such wise,' a comparison of Hrethel's woe to that which an old man might feel, if his son were hanged. Gering has seen in the grief of this man a reference to Ermanaric, who (in legend) hanged his son: but the likeness seems remote. Ermanaric was not credited with taking the death of his kin so much to heart.

2445. Cf. galgan ridan in the Fates of Men, 33, and the Scandinavian 'kenning' for the gallows, 'Odin's horse.'

2446. MS. wrece. Grein wreceð, followed by many editors, including Holthausen and Sedgefield. But the change is unnecessary. [Cf. Bugge in Tidsskr. viii. 56.]

2448. helpan. Kemble₂ emended to helpe. There is no other certain instance of the weak noun. Possibly the scribe wrote helpan for helpe, thinking of the infinitive. [Cf. Sievers in Z.f.d.Ph. xxi. 357.] Indeed it would be possible to take helpan and fremman as two parallel infinitives, 'cannot help him, or in any wise support him' (understanding hine), as suggested by Kock [Anglia, xxvii. 220-1]. But ænige = 'in any wise' lacks analogy. [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁶³ and Sedgefield's note.]

2453. For gen. sg. in -as see Sievers, § 237, N. 1. Cf. ll. 63, 2921.

2456. Holthausen's windge reste, 'windy resting place,' alters the form, but not the meaning.

swefað. Klaeber [Anglia, xxviii. 446] adopts Grein's emendation swefedð, and interprets ridend as 'the rider on the gallows' (cf. l. 2445); swefað might be a Northern singular: see Sievers, § 358, N. 2.

hatian, 'pursue with hatred.' [Cf. Klaeber in Archiv, cix. 305.]

2468. Holthausen^{1,2} adopts the reading of Rieger (Lesebuch), þe him swā sār belamp, 'which befel him so sorely': Schücking omits sio, on the ground that an article beginning with s is avoided before a substantive so beginning. Holthausen³, accordingly reads þe him ġio sār belamp.

2473. MS. defective at corner: [w]id, Grundtvig³⁰³. Thorkelin's transcript B has a blank, but A has rid: a mutilated O.E. w might easily be mistaken for r.

2475. For oððe = ond, see note to ll. 648-9.

Sedgefield's conjectures, seoððe (= siððan), or oð ðw[et], do not seem necessary. War broke out after Hrēthel died, and after Ongentheow's sons had grown to be valiant warriors.

him may be an 'ethic dative' referring to Ongentheow's sons [Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 57], in which case it need not be translated, or it might refer to the Geatas: 'valiant against them.'

Holthausen, following Sievers, spells Ongendēos.

2477. Hreosnabeorh is unknown. Sedgefield, following Bugge, reads Hrefna beorh (cf. ll. 2925, 2935). But the engagements and the localities seem to have been distinct; Hreosnabeorh in the land of the Geatas, Hrefna wudu in the land of the Swedes, as Bugge¹¹ admits.

2478. MS. ge ge fremedon. Cf. ll. 986 (see note), 2383.

2479. mæg-wine mīne, i.e. Hæthcyn and Hygelac.

2481. his. hit, the emendation of Grein¹ [adopted by Schücking and Sedgefield], is certainly an improvement.

2484-5. Rightly rendered by Bosworth-Toller: 'One kinsman with the edge of the sword brought home to the slayer the death of the other': but the kinsmen are not Eofor and Wulf, as there explained (since Wulf is not slain), but Hygelac and Hæthcyn. [See Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 232: Cosijn²³.]

The episode is narrated more fully later (ll. 2949-2998).

2486. Grein, niosade; but cf. ll. 1923, 1928, etc.

2488. No gap in MS: [hilde-]blāc, Holthausen's conjecture [Anglia, xxi. 366], is followed by recent editors. The word is not extant, but cf. wig-blāc, Exodus, 204.

Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 297] suggested hrēa-blāc, 'corpse-pale,' since the repetition hrēas hrēa- would have accounted for the scribal blunder; and Grein heoro-blāc; but both these stop-gaps are metrically objectionable [the first obviously; for the second cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 300].

2489. feorh-swenȝ. We should expect the gen. with oftēon (see l. 5). We also find the dat. (see l. 1520), and accordingly Holthausen, followed by Sedgefield, would write feorh-swenȝe here. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 307.] Yet the change is unnecessary, for the acc. construction is also found.

2490. The episode is ended: him refers to Beowulf's lord, Hygelac.

2495. For the present þurfe, cf. hæbbe (l. 1928).

2500. ær ond sið, 'early and late.'

2501-2. Beowulf praises his sword, which has done him good service, early and late, since the time when he slew Dæghrefn. But the following lines show that in this feat Beowulf did not use his sword. Hence some editors [e.g. Schücking and Sedgefield₂] separate the two sentences by a full stop after gelēste, and take syððan, not as a conj., but as an adv.

Yet the sword may have been taken by Beowulf from the dead Dæghrefn: in which case the connection is close enough between ll. 2499 and 2501. [So Rieger⁴⁴; Klaeber in Archiv, cxv. 181.]

2503. ðā frætwe, 'those famous spoils,' clearly the necklet of ll. 1195, etc., won by Beowulf at Heorot. This had naturally passed to his liege lord. (But note that in ll. 2172, etc., this necklet is said to have been given, not to Hygelac, but to Hygd.) Dæghrefn must be the slayer of Hygelac: as such he would, had he lived, have presented the spoils he had won to his chief. But Beowulf avenged his lord, though the body of Hygelac (Lib. Monst.) and his arms (l. 1211) remained with the Frankish foe.

Frēs-cyning[e], Grundtvig³⁰⁴, Kemble₁: MS. frescyning.

Who is the Frisian king? Does it refer to some tributary prince, or is it a title of the Frankish overlord? Since Dæghrefn is presumably a Frank (Hūga cempa) he would present the spoils to his own king, Theodoric the Frank, or to his son Theodobert, who was actually in command. Ll. 1210, 2921 also support the interpretation of Frēs-cyning as a reference to the Frankish overlord. But the writer of Beowulf may well have been using traditional names which he himself did not clearly understand.

2505. Compe (campe), Kemble₁: MS. cempan. If we keep the MS. reading, we shall have to interpret cempan=cempum, and render 'among the warriors' [von Grienberger, Schücking, 1908: cf. Engl. Stud. xlii. 110]. But in this sense of 'among' seems unprecedented [Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 409-10, as Schücking now admits].

2505-6. cumbles hyrde, æþeling, refer to Dæghrefn.

2509. Morgan [P.B.B. xxxiii. 105] and Holthausen suggest heard-sweord, for the metre.

2514. Kemble₂, māwðo, supported by Bugge¹⁰⁴, and all recent editors, on the analogy of ll. 2134, 2645. But the argument from analogy may be pushed too far, and it is even possible that fremman is intrans., as in l. 1003.

2520-1. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 141] suggests þæs āglācean gylpe, ‘against the boast of the adversary.’ Schröder [Anglia, xiii. 345] suggests ġūpe for gylpe, ‘come to grips with the adversary in war.’ I take gylpe = ‘with boast,’ i.e. ‘in such a manner as to fulfil my boast.’

2523. [o]reðes, Grein₁, āttres Kemble₃: MS. reðes 7 hattres. Cf. ll. 2557, 2839. There is a dot over the h of hattres, which Sievers [Z.f.d.Ph. xxi. 355] regards as intended by the scribe to signify that h is cancelled. I should rather regard the dot as accidental.

2525. The second half-line is metrically deficient: furðor is Klaeber’s emendation [Archiv, cxv. 181] adopted by Holthausen. Holthausen’s earlier suggestion, feohthe [Litteraturblatt für germ. u. rom. Philologie, 1900, p. 61], is adopted by Schücking. Bugge¹⁰⁴ had also suggested feohthe.

In view of the rarity of a ‘prelude’ of two syllables with this type of line [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 302] Bugge¹⁰⁴ would omit ofer, comparing Maldon, 247, flēon fōtes trym. [So Sedgefield²⁸⁸.]

Holthausen₃ reads ferflēon (= forflēon).

2528. þæt = ‘so that.’ Sievers’ emendation [P.B.B. ix. 141] þæs, ‘therefore,’ is unnecessary. [Cf. Klaeber⁴⁶³, Schücking, Satzverk., 25.] ‘The conj. þæt is found to denote the relation between two facts in the vaguest possible manner’ (Klaeber).

2529. Note that, where the pronoun follows the imperative of the verb, the normal inflection of the verb is dropped.

2533. MS. defective at edge: nefn[e], Grundtvig³⁰⁴.

2545. sto[n]dan, Thorpe: MS. stodan. Thorpe's emendation is confirmed by a passage in the Andreas, 1492, etc., where these lines seem to be imitated.

2547. ne meahte...dēop ȝedýȝan, 'could not endure the depths of the cave.' Grundtvig³⁰³ reads dēor; so Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 297], but this was with the belief that the MS. could so be read, whereas the reading is clearly dēop, not dēor. Dēor has, however, been adopted by Earle and Sedgefield: 'nigh to the hoard could not the hero unscorched any while survive.'

2556. frēode. Sedgefield reads freoðo.

2559. Biorn refers to Beowulf. Sedgefield reads born, and puts the stop after beorge, making l. 2559^a a continuation of ll. 2556-8: 'the earth resounded and burned under the hill.' For biorn, beorn=born, bearn he compares l. 1880.

2562. sēceanne. See note to l. 473.

Ær ȝebrēd, 'had already drawn his sword.'

2564. MS. un|glaw. 'A letter erased between l and a in glaw: that it was e is not quite certain' (Zupitza). As there is all the appearance of an uncompleted alteration, I have adopted the emendation of Bugge¹⁰⁴ (following Thorpe). Klæber [Anglia, xxix. 380] defends unȝlāw, which he takes to mean 'very sharp,' with un intensifying, as in unhār (l. 357). But this use of un appears to be very problematical.

2570. MS. gescipe. Heyne emended gescife, 'headlong,' basing his conjecture upon an O.E. gloss in a MS. of Aldhelm's de Virginitate, now at Brussels, in which per preceps is rendered niðerscife, with the further explanation niðersceotende in the margin. [Cf. Z.f.d.A. ix. 468 and scyfe in Bosworth-Toller.] Heyne's emendation has been adopted by Holthausen and Sedgfield.

2573. dōgore: Sievers, followed by Holthausen, would read dōgor (uninflected instrumental, cf. Sievers, § 289) which improves the metre.

2573, etc. 'For the first time (literally, the first day) he had to spend his time in a struggle devoid of victory.' [But cf. Klaeber⁴⁶⁴.]

2577. MS. incgelafe. The word incge is otherwise unrecorded (but cf. note to l. 1107). It has been conjectured that it means 'valuable' or 'weighty.' Thorpe conjectured Incges lāfe [so Holthausen¹, 2, abandoning an earlier conjecture, Anglia, Beiblatt, xiii. 78, and Sedgfield], believing the word 'to be a corruption of some proper name.' If Thorpe's reading is correct, Ing would presumably be identical with the primæval hero from whom the sea-tribes, the Ingaevones, were said to derive their name (see Index of Persons: Ingwine). Ing is recorded in the O.E. Runic Song, 67, as a hero of the East Danes. Some have identified Ing and Seaf.

Holthausen, Ing[win]e[s] lāfe, a tempting conjecture, 'with the sword which Hrothgar had given him.'

2579. his þearfe, probably 'need of it.'

2581. hrēoum. See note to fēaum, l. 1081.

2588. grund-wong was taken by the older editors to mean 'the earth': hence grund-wong ofgyfan, 'to die' [so Clark-Hall]. This interpretation of grund-wong has recently been defended by Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 466].

Since Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 298], it has been more usual to interpret grund-wong as the ground in front of the barrow [so Cosijn³⁵] or the floor of the dragon's den. Beowulf has hardly got so far as the floor: but a concrete, local interpretation is supported by l. 2770 (cf. too l. 1496). ✓

Beowulf has to retreat (ll. 2586-8): the poet alludes to the issue of the combat (ll. 2589-91): then returns to his description again.

2595. sē ðe ær folce wēold: Beowulf, 'who had long ruled over his folk.' [Cf. Cosijn³⁶; Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 216.]

2596. hand, Kemble; MS. heand.

2603. Wiglaf is called lēod Scyflinga because his father, Weoxstan (though apparently by origin a Geat), had once been a chief in the service of the Swedish (Scyfling) king Onela. Weoxstan may well have married into the family of his king, like Ecgtheow, Eofor, or Bothvar Bjarki: such a supposition would make the title lēod Scyflinga more appropriate to Wiglaf, and might perhaps explain his māgum (l. 2614, but see note there). Ælthre, whose name begins with a vowel, would then be a member of the Swedish royal family (since in Germanic heroic tradition princes of the same family commonly have names which alliterate together) rather than one of the Wægmundingas (whose names run on W).

When Eadgils and Eanmund rebel against their uncle Onela, and take refuge among the Geatas, Onela smites them (see ll. 2379-90). Weoxstan, serving under Onela, slays Eanmund, and, according to Germanic custom, presents the spoils of his slain foe to his king. But, contrary to custom, Onela does not accept them (for to do so would be publicly to approve the slaying of his own nephew); yet he rewards the slayer with the spoils, and hushes up the matter: 'Onela spake not of the feud, though Weoxstan had slain his (Onela's) brother's son' (i.e. Eanmund, son of Ohthere), ll. 2618-9.

Yet Weoxstan belongs to the Wægmundingas (l. 2607), a family of the Geatas to which Beowulf is related (l. 2814). Why he was serving with the national enemy, or why, in spite of this, his own people ultimately received him back, we do not know. [Cf. Chadwick, Origin of the English Nation, p. 173.] The re-grant (l. 2606) of Weoxstan's fief to Wiglaf must not be taken as signifying that the fief had been forfeited by Weoxstan: a formal re-grant is in every case necessitated by the death of the father. [See Widsith, 95-6, and cf. Chadwick, p. 169.]

his may refer to Weoxstan (see l. 2603, above) or, more probably, to Eanmund.

2615. The alliteration is improved if, with Rieger, followed by Holthausen, we read byrnan hringde.

2620. Hē, i.e. Weoxstan.

Grundtvig [1861, p. 89], followed by Holthausen, supplies þā before frætwe.

2623. We must understand Wēoxstān as subject to geaf.

2649. þenden hit hāt sý or þenden hāt sý are alternative suggestions of Kemble₃: hāt is supported by Bugge¹⁰⁶, who compares l. 2605, and is adopted by Earle and Sedgfield.

2652. MS. fæðmiē, optative sing. I take ē here to signify æ, which is the oldest form of the optative ending. [Cf. Sievers, § 361.] See note to l. 1981.

2657. Most editors make a compound eald-gewyrht, which they generally [Holthausen, Sedgefield, Earle] render ‘ancient custom,’ etc.

eald-gewyrhtum occurs in the Dream of the Rood, 100, where it means ‘deeds done of old,’ with thought of the deserts thereof resulting. ‘Ties through deeds done’ seems to be the meaning of gewyrht here.

✓ urum bām seems a strange way of expressing unc bām. Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 58; Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 216] supposes a gap. So Rieger⁴¹⁰ and Earle. Parallels can, however, be found: Cosijn quotes examples of nēniges ūres, ūres nānes, etc., for nēniges ūre, ūre nānes [P.B.B. viii. 573] and iowra selfra is found in Orosius [ed. Sweet, 48, 21] for iower selfra.

Sedgefield²²⁸ conjectures huru for urum: ‘surely sword and helmet...must be common to both.’

2660. beadu-scrūd, Ettmüller, (so Thorpe); MS. byrdu scrūd. The word byrdu, which is unknown, is defended by von Grienberger [P.B.B. xxxvi. 83] and byrdu-scrūd interpreted to mean ‘coat of mail.’ Yet it is possible that beadu has (not unnaturally) been written byrdu through the influence of the preceding byrne. Holthausen’s further alteration [following Cosijn³⁶], bord ond beadu-scrūd, does not seem essential, though it certainly improves the reading of the text, in which the shield is not mentioned, and the coat of mail enumerated twice.

Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 55 etc.] suggested býwdu scrūd, ‘adorned vestment’; býwan, to adorn, occurs in l. 2257.

2671. MS. defective, here and in ll. 2676, 2678. Though evidence points to niosian having stood in the MS. here, it must have been a mere scribal variant of the form niosan, which the metre supports, and which is also found in Beowulf. See note to ll. 115, 1125.

2673. rond[e]. Kemble₁: MS. rond. The emendation is metrically necessary; cf. l. 3027. Wið ronde = 'as far as to the rond.' [Cf. Klaeber in M.L.N. xx. 86.]

2678. MS. defective at edge: m[ǣrða]. Grundtvig³⁰⁶, Kemble₁.

2682. That a warrior should have been too strong for his sword seems to have been quite possible in the Germanic heroic age. It is told of Offa that he broke the swords offered him for his duel by simply brandishing them in the air [Saxo, Hist. Dan., Bk 11: ed. Holder, p. 115]. The Icelandic sagas, with their greater sobriety, tell of a hero, who, in his last fight, had to keep straightening out his sword under his foot [Laxdæla Saga, cap. 49].

2686. þonne. Bugge¹⁰⁵, followed by Holthausen, reads þone.

2687. wund[r]um, Thorpe: MS. wundū. A convincing emendation; cf. wundrum wrætllice, Phœnix, 63; wundrum hēah, Wanderer, 98.

2691. ymbefēnǵ. The e is probably a scribal insertion [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 260]: the line runs better when it is deleted.

2694. No gap in MS.: [gefrægn], Kemble₁. See ll. 2484, 2752, etc.

2697. It is not clear whether it was his own head or the dragon's which Wiglaf did not heed. [For the former interpretation see Cosijn³⁷; for the latter Bugge¹⁰⁵, who compares l. 2679.]

Wiglaf attacks what he knows to be the more vulnerable part of the dragon; both Frotho and Fridlevus in Saxo [Bk II., ed. Holder, p. 39; Bk VI., p. 181] learn a similar discrimination: the parallels between these dragon fights in Saxo and those in our text are close. Sigurd also attacked Fafnir from below, but in a more practical and less heroic manner.

2698. mæƷes, Kemble₂: MS. mægenes (so Grein-Wülker); cf. l. 2628, and foot-note. See also l. 2879.

2699. See note to l. 102.

2701. þæt ðæt. Sievers, objecting to this awkward collocation of þæt, proposed þā ðæt [P.B.B. ix. 141]. But Grundtvig had already suggested that the first þæt (which is written þ) should be read þā. See note to l. 15, where this problem of the interpretation of þ first meets us. Sedgfield reads þā; þæt can, however, be defended here. [Cf. Schücking, Satzverk., 25.]

2704. It seems best, in spite of strict grammatical concord, to take biter and beadu-scearp as referring to wæll-seaxe.

ellen. Cosijn³⁷ suggested ellor [so Holthausen_{1,2}; but Holthausen₃, ellen]: cf. ll. 55, 2254. The meaning would be 'drove his life elsewhere,' i.e. to Hell. With much the same meaning Kluge¹⁹² reads feorh ealne wræc, 'drove out all his life,' comparing Genesis, 1385.

2710. siðas[t], Grein₁: MS. siðas. Grundtvig³⁰⁷ suggested siþest. Yet it is possible to defend siðas here as gen. of sið, parallel to worldē geƷeorces:

sige-hwīl, Kemble₂: MS. sīgehwīle. After sige, hwīle might easily be written in error for hwīl. Grein₁, sīge-hwīla.

2714. The older editors read bealo-nið, so also Sedgefield₁; but the word comes at the end of the line, and evidence points to a letter having been lost. (Thorkelin's transcripts: A bealomð, B bealo niði: now only beal left.) Bealo-niðe is essential on metrical grounds [cf. Sievers in P.B.B. x. 269], and is probably to be regarded as the MS. reading.

2715. ȝionȝ, ‘went.’

2719. ēce. Holthausen would read ēcne = ēacne, ‘mighty.’

Ettmüller₂, Rieger⁴¹ [in an excellent note], Heyne, Holthausen, etc., read hēoldon. But no change is necessary. For the tense cf. ll. 1923, 1928, 2486; and for the sg. verb with pl. subject in a subordinate clause cf. l. 2164, and see the note to ll. 1408 and 2035. Further I do not see why eorð-reced should not be the subject: ‘How the earth-hall contained within itself the arches...’

2723. MS. defective: hel[m], Grein₁, etc., following Grimm.

2724. Beowulf speaks ofer benne, ‘over his wound,’ ‘wounded as he was,’ just as the warriors boast ofer ealowæge, ‘over their cups’ (l. 481). [Cf. Cosijn³⁷, and Klaeber, Archiv, civ. 287, where the passage is elaborately discussed. Corson's rendering, ‘beyond (i.e. concerning other things than) his wound,’ M.L.N., iii. 193, seems impossible.]

2725. wæl-blēate. Holthausen, following Grein [Sprachschatz], reads wæl-blāte, ‘deadly pale.’ Cf. Crist, 771, blāstast benna.

2727. wyynn[e], Thorkelin's correction: MS. defective.

2749. Rieger⁴¹¹⁻² saw in swegle a corruption of sigle, 'brooch,' comparing the parallel passage, l. 1157. Holthausen and Sedgefield¹ read pl. siglu; Klaeber²⁵⁰ defends the sg. form sigle, quoting parallels for such collocation of sg. and pl.

2755. under, Thorkelin's correction: MS. urder.

2757. Most editors normalise to fela or feola. But see Sievers, §§ 276, N. 5, and 150, 3; Bülbring § 236.

2759. ond. Trautmann, followed by Holthausen and Sedgefield, reads geond.

2760. stondan: Holthausen, following Ettmüller, reads stōdan.

2765. MS. defective at edge. grund[e], Grundtvig³⁰⁷, Kemble₁.

2766. No satisfactory explanation of oferhigian is forthcoming. The general drift is that gold gets the better of man, 'hide the gold whoso will.' But how? Because, in spite of all, the gold is discovered again? Or because, when found, it carries a curse with it? Ofer-higian may possibly be a compound of higian, 'to strive' (Mod. Eng. 'hie'), and so mean 'to over-reach.' An interpretation very widely accepted is 'to make proud, vain': hence 'deceive.' In this connection it has been proposed to connect oferhigian with hēah, 'high,' and with Goth. ufarhāuhids, 'puffed up, vain' [Bugge, in Tidsskr. viii. 60, 298; Klæber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 466]; or with oferhȳd (oferhygd), oferhȳdig, 'proud' [Kluge¹⁹², followed by Schücking, who spells oferhidgian, and others]. Against the last it is objected [Holthausen] that a derivative from the adj. oferhȳdig must preserve the accent on the first syllable, and so cannot alliterate with h. Sedgefield²⁹⁸ suggests oferhiucian (not elsewhere recorded, but assumed to mean 'deceive': hiwian means 'to assume a false appearance,' 'to feign'): Sedgefield₂, ofer hig[e] hjean, 'raise him above his (usual) mind, render presumptuous.'

2771. wræte, Thorpe, here and in l. 3060: MS. wæce in both places.

2775. hlādon: MS. hlodon. Grundtvig³⁰⁸ emended to hladan, but it is not necessary to alter the second a. For infin. in -on cf. ll. 308, etc., and see Sievers₃ § 363, N. 1.

2777. ær gescōd: MS. æрге scod. Kemble ær-gescōd, 'sheathed in brass.' This has the support of Thorpe and Grein, but lacks analogy; for the reading in the text cf. l. 1587, and ll. 1615, 2562, and 2973.

2778. Bill...eald-hlāfordes, the MS. reading, is understood by Bugge

1. [Tidsskr. viii. 300], Holthausen, and Schücking to mean the sword of Beowulf, by Müllenhoff¹⁵² the sword of the former possessor of the hoard.

It is obvious that ll. 2779-2782 refer to the dragon. Whether eald-hlāfordes be taken to mean Beowulf or the former owner will probably depend on the interpretation of l. 2777. If we read ær gescōd, we shall interpret 'the sword of the lord of old time [Beowulf] with iron edge had slain the guardian of the treasure.' If, with Kemble, we read bill ær-gescōd, this will be object of genōm in l. 2776, and we must accordingly delete the full stop.

Rieger⁴¹² and Cosijn³⁷ read eald-hlāforde (=the dragon) in apposition with þām. [This is adopted by Earle and Sedgfield.]

2791. wæteres. Kemble₃, etc. emended to wætere: but the instrumental gen. seems possible enough [Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 218; Cosijn³⁸]. Cf. gūð-geweorca, l. 1825.

2793. gīohðe, Thorpe (following Kemble₃, gehðo): MS. giogoðe. Cf. l. 3095.

2799. Instances of in, on= 'in exchange for,' are quoted by Klaeber [Anglia, xxvii. 258]: hē bebohte bearn wealdendes on seolfres sinc, Crist and Satan, 577.

2800. gēna. Thorpe, gē nū; and this emendation has been adopted by most recent editors. It does not appear necessary.

2803. Holthausen and Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 465], following Sievers, read beorht (see note to l. 2297), and similarly þæt for sē in the next line.

2814. forswēop, Kemble₂: MS. for speof (speof at the beginning of the next line).

2819. hræðre: MS. hwæðre, which might very easily have been miswritten for hræðre. Kemble emended hræðre.

2820. There is no number in the MS. after this line to indicate the beginning of a new section, but there is a space, and l. 2821 begins with a large capital. The next 'fitted' number (l. 2892) is xl.

2821. ȝuman, Grein₂: MS. gumū unfrodū, doubtless another instance of 'anticipation.' Cf. l. 158, where the MS. has banū folmū, and see note.

2828. Grein₁ emended to hine: so Schücking and Sedgefield, on the ground that in other instances forniman governs the acc. But see Klaeber [Engl. Stud. xlii. 323] who instances forȝripan with the dat., Beowulf, 2353; Genesis, 1275.

2829. Thorpe's emendation heaðo-scearpe, 'battle sharp,' has been followed by many editors, and, indeed, it seems very probable that scearpe might have been miswritten scearde, through the influence of the preceding hearde. Yet scearde can be defended [Schücking in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 110].

2834. eorðan ȝefēoll, 'fell to the earth.' Cf. ll. 2100, and 2898, næs ȝerād.

2836. on lande, 'in the world.'

lȝt is probably dat. after ðāh, 'has prospered with few.' Klaeber⁴⁶⁵ takes lȝt as nom., translating 'few have attained or achieved': for this meaning of ðēon he compares Cottonian Gnostic Verses, 44, ȝif hēo nelle on folce ȝefēon, 'if she will not attain among the people that...' and a number of examples from the O.E. version of Bede's History, etc. [cf. Anglia, xxvii. 282].

2844. æȝhwæðer, Kemble₃: MS. æȝhwæðre. Grein₁, æȝhwæðre (acc. pl.), ende (nom.). But cf. l. 3063; besides, æȝhwæðer is found nowhere else in the pl.

2852. It is possible that wlitan = wlitan (infin.), in which case only a comma should be placed after læg. [So Sedgfield.] Most editors have followed Thorkelin in normalizing to Wiglāf. See note to ll. 218 and 1530.

spēow, Thorkelin: MS. speop.

2857. The reading of the text would mean 'change aught ordained of God.' Most editors follow Thorpe in substituting willan for wiht [so Holthausen and Schücking]. Klaeber suggests weorold-endes wiht, 'anything of the end of his life'; i.e. 'he could not avert his death at all' [J.E.G.Ph. viii. 258].

2860. The strong form geongum after ðām is, of course, exceptional, and is probably only a scribal error for geongan. Holthausen and Schücking alter to geongan. See note to l. 158.

2863. sec[ġ], Thorkelin's correction: MS. sec.

2869. þryðlicost. From þryþ. Thorkelin²¹³ corrected to þryþlicost here, and this spelling with ð has been retained down to the present day. The scribe is sometimes careless in crossing his d's, but in the only other passage I know where the word occurs [Byrhtferth's Handboc, ed. Kluge in Anglia, viii. 302, l. 14] the same spelling with d occurs. Under the circumstances d for ð is quite a normal phonetic development (cf. Sievers, § 201, 3) and this spelling should surely be retained in the text.

2881. fyr unswiðor. This was defended by Rieger⁴¹³ as a conjectural emendation, and an exact scrutiny of the MS. shows it to be the actual reading, except for the negligible discrepancy in the division of the letters: fyrun (u altered from a) swiðor. Grein conjectured fyr ran swiðor. Since this is inconsistent with wæs þý sāmra (l. 2880) we should then have to make Beowulf, instead of the dragon, the subject of wæs. Some [e.g. Cosijn³⁸ and Sedgefield] take Beowulf, in any case, as the subject of wæs: but it seems better to make the dragon the subject. This is clearer if, with Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 142] and Holthausen, we alter ferhð-geniðlan to ferhð-geniðla, putting a comma after drep.

2883. þrāg, ‘time of terror.’ Cf. note to l. 87.

2884. Hū. This was altered by Kemble, to nū, and almost all editors have followed. Yet, as Holthausen tentatively suggests, hū makes good sense as introducing an exclamatory clause. Cf. Wanderer, 95: Hu sēo þrāg gewāt...!

2886. If lufen means ‘love,’ it certainly forms an unsatisfactory parallel to ēðelwyn. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxxvi. 427.]

2890. MS. dæd corrected from dæl.

2890-1. Does Wiglaf mean ‘you had better go and hang yourselves’? Tacitus [Germ. vi] mentions suicide as the last refuge from such disgrace: multique superstites bellorum infamiam laqueo finierunt. [Cf. Scherer, Kleinere Schriften, i. 490, for a comparison of this passage with other 2893. æg-clif, Kemble₂: MS. ecg clif. Kemble's emendation is supported by l. 577, and has been adopted by almost all later editors, it being urged that 'ecg is used only of weapons in O.E.' This however is far from being the case: ecg, 'verge, brink of high ground,' occurs very frequently in the —? charters. Nevertheless, since næs in l. 2898 makes it probable that the army was stationed on a sea-cliff, I adopt Kemble's emendation, though with hesitation.

2904. siex-bennum. Holthausen and Sedgfield spell sex-bennum [from ?
sear]. Cf. Sievers₃ § 108, 2.

2909. Kemble₂ and Kieger⁴¹³ read hige-mæðum, 'holds watch over the spirit-wearied, i.e. the dead.' This is not, in reality, a textual alteration, since in the Anglian original mæðum and mūðum would have coincided in form; but we should rather have expected hige-mæðra, agreeing with lēofes and lāðes. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 142; but cf. P.B.B. xxxvi. 419] and, tenta- ✓ tively, Bugge¹⁰⁸ would read hige-mæde, 'weary of soul,' qualifying Wiglaf, to whom similar epithets are applied, ll. 2852, 2863: hyge-mæde occurs in
 l. 2442, where, however, it seems to mean 'wearying the mind.' Bugge also suggests hige-mæðum, from a presumed hige-mæðu, 'weariness of spirit' [so Holthausen].

2916. MS. gehnægdon: genægdon, 'assailed,' Grein₁ and Bugge [Tidsskr. viii. 64] followed by Holthausen and Sedgfield: cf. l. 2206. This has the advantage of avoiding double alliteration in the second half-line: cf. l. 1151 and note.

2919. 'The prince gave no treasures to his retainers' (as he would have done had he been victorious). [So Bugge¹⁰⁶.]

2921. Grein₁, etc., Merewioinga, following Thorpe (*Grundtvig*³⁰⁹ had suggested mere-wicinga). But correction is unnecessary: Merewioingas is gen. sg., 'of the Merovingian king.' See note to l. 2453. [So Bugge in Tidsskr. viii. 300.]

2922. te is the unaccented subsidiary form of tō. Instances occur both in E.W.S. (Cura Pastoralis) and in early glosses. Cf. O.S. ti-, te-; O.H.G. zi, ze. See Bosworth-Toller, and Napier's O.E. Glosses.

2929. ondslyht, a correction of Grein₁: MS. hond slyht, here and in l. 2972. The change is necessary for the alliteration. Cf. l. 1541 (and note), and see Sievers, § 217, N. 1.

2930. ābrēot. Some editors follow Kemble, in normalizing to ābrēat.

But confusion of ēo and ēa is common in the non-W. S. dialects, and traces of it are abundant in Beowulf. Further, in this type of strong verb, ēo is found in place of ēa, even in W.S. See Sievers, § 384, N. 2.

brim-wisan refers to Hæthecyn, who must have carried off the wife of Ongentheow.

brȳd āheorde. The MS. has bryda heorde. No importance can be attached to the spacing of the MS.: yet the verb āheordan, 'to release from guardianship' (heord) is not elsewhere recorded, and is doubtful. Holthausen_{1,2} āfeorde, 'removed': so Sedgfield; Holthausen₃ follows Bugge¹⁰⁷, ahredde, 'saved.'

2940-1. Sedgfield, following Thorpe, reads grētan: but the change is unnecessary; gētan, 'to destroy,' is not uncommon in the compound āgētan. [For the etymology cf. I.F. xx. 327, where Holthausen adduces Lithuanian and Lettish cognates.]

The MS. has sum on galg treowu to gamene: Thorpe corrected sum[e] and supplied [fuglum], comparing Judith, 297, fuglum tō frōfre: Kemble, had emended to trēowu[m].

Bugge¹⁹⁷ [cf. Tidsskr. viii. 60], Holthausen, and Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 143] suppose a gap here of a line or more, and this is borne out by the fact that, even after making the three corrections in the text in ll. 2940-1, the construction is not very satisfactory.

2946. Sw[ē]ona, Thorkelin's correction: MS. swona.

2949. se gōða is Ongentheow. Bugge²⁷² proposed gomela (cf. l. 2968), because he thought so complimentary a word inapplicable to the Swedish king in the mouth of the Geat who is here speaking. An unnecessary scruple; cf. l. 2382 for praise of a Swedish king.

2951. It is difficult to say whether ufor means 'on higher ground' or 'further away.' [Cf. Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 236.]

2957-9. If we retain the MS. reading, we must interpret: 'Pursuit was offered to the Swedes and a captured banner [was] offered to Hygelac.' Thus many editors, and lately Schücking, who quotes parallels for the importance attached in Germanic times to the capture of the enemy's banner. [Cf. Cosijn³⁸.] This reading compels us to take boden with two widely different nouns, but l. 653 may be quoted as a parallel to this [Klaeber²⁴⁰]; and, though the construction is harsh, none of the emendations are sufficiently convincing to justify our deserting the MS.

Schröder [Anglia, xiii. 347] takes æht as 'treasure,' and alters lēodum to lēoda: 'the treasure of the Swedes and a banner were offered [as ransom] to Hygelac.' So, too, Sedgefield, but without altering the text: 'were offered by the people of the Swedes to Hygelac.' Bugge¹⁰⁷ [and in Tidsskr. viii. 61], following Kemble, and Thorpe, read Hygelāces, and explained: 'the banner of Hygelac was raised as a sign of pursuit.' But this also involves a forced construction: therefore if we read Hygelāces it is better to delete the semi-colon, and construe with Holthausen: 'the banners of Hygelac overran the fastness' [so Clark-Hall]. Sievers, sæcc Hygelāces, 'the battle of Hygelac,' parallel to æht.

Holthausen, ðht, 'pursuit,' for æht.

2994. þūsenda. According to Plummer [Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, II, 23] ✓ and Kluge [P.B.B. ix. 191], 'hides' must be understood. But an earldom of 100,000 hides would have been about the size of the whole land of the Geatas: Sussex contained only 7,000: see l. 2195. Again, how, in this case, are we to construe locenra bēaga? I should rather, with Rieger⁴¹⁸ and Schücking, understand some money denomination: 'the value of 100,000 sceattas in land and rings': a great, but not inconceivable, reward.

2995. The typical O.E. figure of understatement. It is not clear, however, whether him is sg. or pl., whether it is the generosity of Hygelac which is being celebrated (in which case ne ðorfte...middan-gearde must be taken as a parenthesis), or the valour of Eofor and Wulf.

3001. For the pl. lēoda see Wulfstan (ed. Napier), p. 106, l. 23 and Psalms lxxi. 10. [Cf. Sievers § 264 and Royster in M.L.N. xxiii. 122.]

3005. Müllenhoff¹⁶⁶ considered this line a careless repetition of l. 2052, and this is the easiest way out of the difficulty. Thorpe explained: 'It would appear that Beowulf, in consequence of the fall of Hrothgar's race [hæleða hryre] was called to rule also over the Danes (Scyldings).' Klaeber calls this an 'extraordinary assumption,' but we may note that, according to Saxo (Book III), the throne of Denmark was thus left vacant after the fall of Hrothulf, and was taken by a Swedish prince, who ruled jointly over both kingdoms. Since Saxo does not recognise any kingdom of the Geatas apart from the Swedes, this might reasonably be interpreted as a reminiscence of such a tradition as Thorpe assumes. The Geatic kingdom was at this date nearing its fall. It is accordingly exceedingly improbable that any such rule existed as a historic fact: for its existence in tradition cf. the empire attributed to king Arthur.

Most editors follow Grein₂ and alter to Scylfingas, and this can be taken (1) in apposition with hie in l. 3002, which is intolerably forced; (2) parallel with hord ond rice in l. 3004, in which case we can only suppose that the term Scylfingas could be applied equally, on the ground of common ancestry, to both Swedes and Geatas; compare l. 2603, where Wiglaf is called lēod Scylfinga; (3) l. 3005 might be taken as a parenthesis: 'After the fall of the heroes, the Scylfingas were bold'; or (4) it can be transposed to follow l. 3001 [Ettmüller₂: so Holthausen and Sedgefield].

But, since so little relief is gained by altering the text to Scylfingas, it is better to let Scildingas stand, unless we have the courage to make the satisfactory alteration to Sæ-Geatas [with Klaeber, whose discussion of the subject in J.E.G.Ph. viii. 258-9 should be consulted].

3007. Nū is, Kemble₂; MS. meis. Mē is is a possible reading: 'As for me,' 'as it seems to me.'

3014. [geboh]te: MS. defective, Grundtvig³¹¹ suggested bebohte. We may interpret gebohte as a pret. sing., with Beowulf understood as subject: or as pl. of the past part., agreeing with bēagas. [Cf. Lawrence in J.E.G.Ph. x. 638.]

3028. Grein₂, secȝ-hwata (i.e. 'sword-brave'), a quite unnecessary compound: se secȝ hwata is paralleled by se maga geonga (l. 2675). [Cf. Bugge, Tidskr. viii. 61.]

For secȝgende see Sievers, § 216, N. 1.

3035. According to Zupitza the MS. has ærrun ('u altered from a by erasure'). But I should read this as ærran, and attribute the partial obliteration to accident.

See Sievers, § 304, N. 3.

3038. 'But first they saw a stranger being there' [Clark-Hall]. Many attempts have been made to improve this sentence: [þ]ær hi þā ȝesēȝan, Sievers' emendation, is followed by Holthausen and Sedgfield. But, though somewhat awkwardly phrased, the meaning seems clear. [Cf. Klaeber in [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 427.] The fifty-foot-long dragon would naturally be the first thing to attract the gaze of those approaching.

3043-4. It is not clear whether lyft-wynne means 'joy in the air, pleasure of flying,' or is equivalent to wynsumne lyft, 'the joyous air,' abstract for concrete, like eard-lufan (l. 692). [For this last rendering cf. Cosijn³⁸.]

Equally it is uncertain whether we should construe nihtes hwilum as 'by night, at times' [cf. Bugge³⁷³] or 'in the time of night' [Cosijn³⁸].

3045. niosian. See note to l. 115.

The emendation ōme þurhetone, 'eaten through with rust' [Scheinert in P.B.B. xxx. 377], is one of those improvements of the MS. which are hardly legitimate.

3050. þūsend wintra. Müllenhoff draws attention to the discrepancy with l. 2278, according to which the time was 300 years. Krüger [P.B.B. ix. 577] tries to reconcile the passages by interpreting swā here 'as if,' 'as though.' But the discrepancy is immaterial. [Cf. Cosijn⁴⁰.]

3051. þonne, i.e. when the gold was laid in the earth [Bugge³⁷⁴].

3056. Bugge¹⁰⁹ [followed by Holthausen and Schücking] would read hæleþa for manna [so Morgan in P.B.B. xxxiii. 110], so as to get the alliterating syllable in the right place. The same improvement can be made more simply by transposing the words: hē is gehyld manna [Sedgfield₂].

Grein₂ reads hēlsmanna gehyld in apposition to hord; so Earle: 'to open the hoard, the sorcerers' hold.'

3058, etc., mean, apparently, that the issue was a bad one for the dragon. Bugge^{109, 275} attempts a re-arrangement of ll. 3051-76, and makes ll. 3058-60 refer to the fugitive who originally stole the treasure.

3060. wrēte, Thorpe: MS. wræce. Cf. l. 2771.

3061. fāra sumne means Beowulf, being 'one of a few' (cf. l. 1412), i.e. Beowulf with few companions. But, by the usual understatement, 'few' here probably means 'none.' Cosijn⁴⁰ compares Rood, 69, mæte weorode, interpreting 'with a small company,' as meaning 'quite alone.'

3062 ff. The meaning seems to be 'It is a subject for wonder [i.e. it is uncertain] where a man will end his life, when he may no longer dwell on this earth. Even so was it with Beowulf—he knew not...'; þonne in l. 3062 is parallel with þonne in l. 3064. [See Kock in Anglia, xxvii. 233; Sievers in P.B.B. ix. 143; Nader in Anglia, x. 544-5; Cosijn⁴⁰, who compares Alfred's Cura Pastoralis, Preface (ed. Sweet, p. 8), uncūð hā longe, 'it is uncertain how long.']

On the other hand we might take the swā in l. 3066 and swā in l. 3069 as correlative, with seolfa...sceolde forming a parenthesis. The meaning would then be: 'It happened unto Beowulf in such wise as the þeodnas mære had laid the spell.'

Sedgfield reads searo-niða, comparing for the adverbial gen. pl. ll. 845, 1439.

3068. þurh hwæt, 'by what.' This is explained in the following lines (3069-3073); Beowulf's death is really caused by the curse which, unknown to him, had been placed upon the gold by the great chiefs (þeodnas mære) who had it in olden time. [Cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 432.] So feared were these curses that forms of prayer are extant for purifying vasa reperta in locis antiquis. [See Rituale Eccl. Dunelmensis, Surtees Society, 97, etc., and Bouterwek in Z.f.d.A. xi. 109.] The curse on the Niblung hoard may be compared.

3073. strude, Grundtvig³¹¹: MS. strade. [Cf. Bugge³⁷⁴.] See ll. 581 and 3126: a and u are in many scripts hardly distinguishable.

3074-5. The MS. reading is difficult, but admits of interpretation, if we take næs as the adv. of negation (cf. l. 562): 'Not before had he (Beowulf) beheld more fully the gold-abounding grace of the Lord': i.e. this was the biggest prize of gold which God had ever granted to him. [So Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 62, etc.] The MS. is also tentatively defended by Cosijn⁴¹, but with a different explanation: 'he (Beowulf) had by no means in gold-greedy wise (gold-hwæte) accurately surveyed (gearwor gescēawod, cf. l. 2748) the owner's inheritance (the dragon's hoard).' [For ēst = 'inheritance,' cf. also Klaeber²⁶⁴.] This would mean that, although Wiglaf had shown him some of the spoils, Beowulf had not been able to survey the hoard closely. Müllenhoff [Z.f.d.A. xiv. 241] also retains the MS. reading.

Holthausen's objection that gold-hwæte must be wrong, because hwæt is only compounded with abstract nouns, seems invalid: blēd-hwæt, 'flower or fruit abounding' (Riddles, i. [ix.] 9), is an exact parallel, and Holthausen, returns to gold-hwæte as an adv.

Neither Bugge's rendering nor Cosijn's gives very good sense, but neither are any of the suggested emendations satisfactory. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 143] reads næs hē goldhwætes gearwor hæfde, etc., 'Beowulf had not experienced the favour of the gold-greedy owner (the dragon)'; Rieger⁴¹⁶ and Cosijn⁴¹, næs hē gold hwæðre gearwor hæfde [ofer] āgendes ēst ær gescēawod, 'Beowulf had never looked more eagerly upon gold which he had gained against the will of its owner'; ten Brink¹⁴⁵ and Wyatt, næs [i.e. ne wæs] hē gold-hwæt; gearwor hæfde... 'Beowulf was not avaricious; rather he had experienced the grace of the Lord' (and therefore was endowed with the virtues); Holthausen, Schücking, and Sedgefield read goldwhte or goldfrætwæ, 'never before had Beowulf gazed more eagerly upon gold adornments, the delight [or inheritance] of their owner'; or we might interpret the same reading, with Schücking [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 111], partly following Trautmann, 'rather would he [se secg of l. 3071] not have gazed upon the gold adornments...'

If the text is to be altered at all it would probably be best to read hie...hæfdon for hē...hæfde: 'in no wise had these avaricious lords known the grace of the Creator,' i.e. the authors of the spell were heathen. Cf. note to l. 3068 and ll. 175-188.

3078. ādrēogan, Kemble₁: MS. a dreoged.

3084. 'We could not dissuade him; he held (on) to his high fate,' or 'he held on (adv.) his high fate.' Grein and Toller give several instances of the intrans. use of healdan, and of on used adverbially. See also Mätzner's O.E. Dict., p. 405, col. 1; among other passages there quoted is: hald hardiliche o þat tu haues bigunnen, St. Kath., 676.

Reading hēoldon [Heyne-Schücking, Holder], we must render 'we have gotten a hard destiny,' or, perhaps, 'fate appointed from on high'; reading healdan [Kemble, etc.], 'leave him (the dragon) to fulfil his high destiny' [Earle, Sedgefield]; or we might read heoldon = healdan [Bugge in Z.f.d.Ph. iv. 220-2, q.v. for further suggestions].

gescēawod. Sarrazin [Engl. Stud. xxviii. 410] suggests gecēapod, 'purchased.'

3085. gifede, 'Fate,' rather than, with Bugge¹⁰⁹, 'that which enticed the king (i.e. the treasure) was granted (gifede) in manner too overpowering, i.e. at too great a price, bought too dear.'

3086. No gap in MS.: [þeod-cyning], Grein₂; Grundtvig¹¹¹ had suggested þeoden.

3094. wis ond gewittig, either 'the prudent and wise king' [Scheinert in P.B.B. xxx. 381, footnote] or 'still alert and conscious' [Klaeber in Anglia, xxix. 382]. This last interpretation is supported by the use of gewittig in Ælfrio's Homilies, e.g. II. p. 24, l. 12: hēo þærrihte wearð gewittig, 'she forthwith became of sound mind.'

3096. æfter wines dædum, 'in memory of the deeds of our king,' is defended by Cosijn⁴¹ against the conjecture of Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 300], æfter wine dædum, 'in memory of your dead king.'

3101. No gap in MS.: [siððe], Grundtvig¹¹², Kemble₂.

3102. Line defective both in sense and metre. Bugge¹⁰⁹ supplied [gimma], comparing ll. 1157, 2749.

3103-4. Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 144] suggests þær for þæt, with ic ēow wisige in parentheses; so too Holthausen. [But see Schücking, Satzverk. 26.]

Grundtvig¹¹³ normalized nēon to nēan, but unnecessarily. [See Sievers, § 150, 3, and Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 63.]

3113. folc-āgende may be nom. pl. [Cosijn⁴¹] or dat. sg. [Bugge¹⁰⁹].

3115. The introduction of a parenthesis between the verb fretan and its object strengel is certainly strange. Consequently many editors take weaxan, not as the intrans. verb ‘to grow,’ but as a trans. verb, meaning ‘to devour,’ parallel to fretan and, with it, governing strengel. Various cognates and derivations have been suggested. Cosijn connects with Lat. vesci, Earle and Sedgfield with wascan ‘to bathe, envelope,’ Holthausen with Goth. fra-wisan, ‘to spend, exhaust.’

3119. feðer-gearwum, Kemble₁, partly following an emendation of Thorkelin: MS. fæder gearwū.

3121. This folio, the last, is very badly mutilated. cyniges. Thorkelin corrected to cyni[n]ges. But cynig is a recognized form in the late 10th and 11th centuries.

3122. All recent editors read [tō]-somne, following Zupitza, who however admits: ‘now to entirely gone.’ But there seems to be no evidence that it existed even in Thorkelin’s time: its occurrence in Kemble₂ seems to be due to conjecture. In the absence of evidence in its favour, I read [æt]-somne with Grein₂; cf. l. 2847.

3124. hilde-rinc[a]. Style and metre necessitate this emendation, made independently by Ettmüller₂ and Sievers [P.B.B. ix. 144]: cf. l. 1412. [For a defence of the MS. reading, see Cosijn⁴¹.]

3126. ‘It was not decided by lot who should...’ means, by the usual under-statement, that all pressed to take part. [Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 432.]

3130. ofostlic[e]: MS. defective at edge, emended by Ettmüller₂.

3135. æþeling, Kemble₂: MS. æþelinge. Probably the original MS. had æþelinge [Bugge¹⁰⁹]. See Sievers₃ § 215.

3136. MS. hilde to. 'I am unable to decide whether there is an erasure of one letter after hilde or an original blank' (Zupitza): [rinc] is an emendation of Ettmüller₂; cf. ll. 1307 and 3124.

3139. helm[um], Grein: MS. helm.

Sedgfield reads helmum behēngon, to avoid the discrepancy between unwāclīcne (inflected) and behongen (uninflected).

3144. Hole in MS.: wud[u], Kemble₁.

3145. MS. swioðole; swioðole is Thorpe's conjecture, though he gave an impossible interpretation of it. See note to l. 782.

3147. hē refers to lēg (l. 3145).

3149. MS. torn at foot: cw[e]alm, Kemble₁.

3150, etc. All that can either be made out at present, or for which we have adequate evidence in Thorkelin's transcripts or elsewhere, is given in the text. It seems clear that the mutilated passage occupies six lines (not seven, as was unaccountably supposed by Heyne and Wülker, and still is by Schücking).

It must be remembered that this page has been almost entirely freshened up in a later hand, and, in part, erroneously. Thus in ll. 3150, 3155, though only [s]ia, hyðo can now be read, no doubt sio, hyndō were the original readings. Bugge's restoration is therefore not to be discredited merely because a letter does not agree with what is now visible in the MS.

The reconstruction of ll. 3150-55 made by Bugge¹¹⁰⁻¹¹ is, apart from the last half-line, not to be improved upon:

3150 swylce giðmor-gyð sio geð-mēowle
æfter Bēowulfe bunden-heorde sorg sorg-cearig, sǣde geneahhe, þæt hio hyre hearm-dagas hearde ondrēde wæl-fylla worn wigendes egesan

geð (l. 3150) had been conjectured by Ettmüller, and sio geo-meowle, partly conjectured, partly deciphered, by Zupitza, who pointed out that this reading was confirmed by the Latin gloss anus written above. Under an exceptionally good light, Zupitza had also read, or 'thought he had been able to read,' first metodes, and later [w]igendes (l. 3154). The b of bunden-heorde (l. 3151) was conjectured by Grein₂. All the remainder of this excellent restoration is due to Bugge.

But Bugge's last half-line, hēof on rice wealg, 'lamentation in a strange land,' is a wanton departure from the MS., and is certainly wrong. The MS. reading is clearly heofon rēce swealg, 'heaven swallowed the smoke' [swealg was conjectured by Ettmüller₂: on further examination it proved to be the MS. reading].

Bugge comments upon his reconstruction: 'For the whole passage cf. ll. 3016-20. Beowulf's aged widow (geð-mēowle) was perhaps Hygd; cf. ll. 2369 ff.'

A close parallel is provided by the Fates of Men, 46-7, 'the lady laments, seeing the flames consume her son.' [For the O.E. song of lament over the dead, cf. Schücking in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 1, etc.] Compare too the lament of Andromache over Hector [Iliad xxiv. 725-45], which has the same governing motive: the fear that, now the tribal hero is dead, nothing but captivity awaits the defenceless folk. See also ll. 2999, etc., 3016, etc.

3153. 'The first two letters after hearde look like on or an, the letter before de may have been e, as the stroke that generally connects e with a following letter is preserved' (Zupitza).

3157. Zupitza, leode hl :: on liðe, and in a foot-note: 'I am unable to make out hlæw after leode: the two last letters seem to me to be rather eo' [certainly]; hlæw is recorded by Kemble₁ as the MS. reading. See l. 3169. Thorpe, hlide.

Holthausen [followed by Schücking] reads, for the sake of the metre, hl[æw] on [h]liðe[s] nōsan.

wælg is Kemble's conjecture.

3169. So when Attila was buried (doubtless according to Gothic rites) mounted horsemen rode round the body as it lay in state. The account of the burial of Achilles (Odyssey, xxiv. 68-70) may also be compared: 'And many heroes of the Achaeans moved in armour around thy pyre as thou wast burning, both foot and horse.'

3170. twelfa may be a gen., attracted to ealra, but more probably it is miswritten for twelfe, 'twelve of the entire body' [Ettmüller₂. So Klaeber in M.L.N. xvi. 17, Holthausen, Schücking, Sedgefield. Cf. also Eichenkel in Anglia, xxvii. 5, 51].

APPENDIX

THE FIGHT AT FINNSBURG

George Hickes first printed the fragment of the Fight at Finnsburg in his Thesaurus (1705: vol. i. p. 192). He mentions that he had found it written on a single leaf in a MS. of 'Semi-Saxon' Homilies in the Lambeth Library. Repeated search has failed to discover this leaf, and we have nothing to depend on but Hickes' very inaccurate transcript [quoted as 'Hickes' in the notes below].

* * * [hor]nas byrnað nǣfre ?'
 Hlēoþrode ðā heaþo-geong cyniŋg:
 "Ne ðis ne dagað ēastan, ne hēr draca ne flēoƷeð, ne hēr ðisse healle hornas ne byrnað, 5 ac hēr forþ berað,
 fugelas singað,

1. The first three words belong to a watcher (possibly Hengest), who is answered by the 'war-young king' (Hnæf).

[hor]nas, supplied by Rieger, Lesebuch.

2. Trautmann and Holthausen would write, for the sake of the metre, ðā hlēoþrode.

heaþo-geong, Grundtvig's correction; Hickes, hearo geong.

3. ðis, 'this light': ēastan, Grundtvig: Hickes, eastun; a and u are easily and often confused, cf. l. 27 below and Beowulf, 158, 581, etc.

5-6. The two half-lines make sense individually, but do not combine. Hence it has been generally supposed that between them two half-lines have been lost, though there is no gap indicated by Hickes. Bugge [Tidskr. viii. 305, P.B.B. xii. 23], following in part a suggestion of Rieger [Lesebuch, cf. Z.f.d.A. xlviii. 9], proposed:

ac hēr forþ berað [fyrd-searu rincas, flæce flānbogan] fugelas singað,

'But here champions bear forward their battle array: the flickering birds of the bow [i.e. arrows] sing.'

Another suggestion is to make the two recorded half-lines fit each other either by altering hēr to fēr [=fēr], 'they bring forward the sudden assault' [Grein, so Heyne, and, though abandoned by Grein, the conjecture was long-lived], or berað to fērað, 'they, i.e. the foes, press forward' [Grundtvig, followed by Holthausen]. In this case the fugelas will be birds: either carrion birds [ten Brink, Pauls Grdr. ii. i. 545] or the birds of the morning [Klaeber in Anglia, xxviii. 447]; this last interpretation is supported by a parallel in the Bjarkamál, the opening call to arms of which has struck many students as resembling Finnsburh.

7. græg-hama, ‘the grey coat,’ may refer equally well to the wolf or to a coat of mail.

8. þes mōna, ‘the moon,’ is quite idiomatic. [Cf. Klaeber in Archiv, cxv. 181.]

9. waðol. Exact meaning unknown. Suggestions, ‘full (moon)’ [so Holthausen and Schücking]; ‘inconstant’ [Boer, Z.f.d.A. xlvii. 143]; ‘half covered’ [von Grienberger, P.B.B. xxxvi. 100]. The M.H.G. ‘wadel’ has often been quoted in illustration; but as this term is ambiguous, denoting sometimes the full, sometimes the new moon, it does not help much. Cf. Grimm’s Mythology, trans. Stallybrass, iii. 711.

12. [h]lenca[n]: landa, which Hickes gives, is unintelligible. The obvious correction habbað ēowre lūda [Bugge in Tidsskr. viii. 305], ‘seize your shields,’ is unsatisfactory from the point of view of alliteration, and habbað or hebbað ‘ēowre handa’ [Ettmüller, Grein, Heyne, Sedgfield], ‘raise your hands,’ does not give very satisfactory sense; hlencan was suggested, but not adopted, by Bugge [P.B.B. xii. 23], and has been adopted by Holthausen and Trautmann. Exodus, 215, etc., Moses bebæd eorlas...habban heora hlencan, hycgan on ellen, seems to be connected with the Finnsburg passage, and it seems probable therefore that hlencan should be restored here.

hicgeað is Grundtvig’s obviously successful correction of Hickes’ hie geað.

13. þindað on orde, ‘Ye who are in the front rank, show your temper’ [Rieger, Z.f.d.A. xlvi. 10; Klaeber, Engl. Stud. xxxix. 428]. Till Trautmann [B.B. vii. 41] this was erroneously read windað, and ‘corrected’ to winnad. Sedgfield retains windað.

14. Metrically this line seems rather overweighted, and it is likely enough that two lines have here been telescoped into one. Holthausen [in part following Trautmann] reads

 goldhladen [gum]-ðegn gyrde hine his swurde.

‘Then arose from his couch many a valiant and gold-bedeckedthane.’

17. Sigferth, prince of the Secgan (l. 25), is clearly identical with the Sæferth, prince of the Syegan, mentioned in Widsith, 31.

Eaha. Most editors emend to Eawa, a form for which there is more authority, as it occurs in the Mercian Genealogy.

18. durum. Pl. for sg.

Ordlaef: Ordlaef and Guthlaf are no doubt identical with the Guthlaf and Oslaf of Beowulf, 1148.

20. þā ȝȳt, as in Maldon, 273, serves to introduce a new incident in the chain of events. [Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 307.]

stȳrde, Ettmüller's emendation. Hickes, styrode; but the sense demands 'restrained' rather than 'incited.'

Guthere is apparently the speaker and Garulf the person who is being restrained. For it is Garulf who, neglecting the advice, falls.

Gārulfe, Trautmann: Gārulf, Hickes, followed by most recent editors. But stȳran should take a dat. of the person and the metre of the line is improved by reading Gārulfe. [Cf. Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 307.]

21-22. Hickes has he...bæran. We must alter either to hīe bæran [Grein, Heyne] or to hē...bære [Kemble]. The context emphatically favours the sg. because the advice to hold back from the attack can obviously be given to a special person for a special reason, but cannot be recommended generally. [Rieger in Z.f.d.A. xlviii. 11.]

forman sīþe, 'in the first brunt,' or perhaps 'in his first battle.' Guthere is probably, as Klaeber points out [Engl. Stud. xxxix. 307], the uncle of Garulf. It is essentially the part of the uncle, in heroic poetry, to watch over and advise the nephew. Guthlaf and Guthere would then be brothers.

The parallel examples quoted by Klaeber from the Waltarius and the Nibelungen Lied, where the uncle restrains the nephew, are not quite apposite, as in those cases the uncle has personal reasons for not wishing the nephew to join in the fight. Hygelac restraining Beowulf (ll. 1994, etc.) is more appropriate.

23, etc. nīþa heard refers to Sigeferth; hē...dēor-mōd hæleþ to Garulf.

24. eal: Trautmann, ealle, for metrical reasons, followed by Holthausen.

26. cweþ hē is hypermetrical, and doubtless the insertion of some copyist.

27. wreccea. Hickes, wrecen. Grundtvig emended t to c.

Fæla. There is no necessity, either here or in l. 35, to normalize, as many editors have done, to fela.

wēana. Conybeare's emendation. Hickes, weuna.

28. heardra, Kemble's emendation. Hickes, heordra.

29. swæper, probably 'thou canst have from me what thou wilt, good or evil,' rather than, as ten Brink thinks [Pauls Grdr. ii. i. 546], a bitter jest, 'thou canst have from me which thou wilt, either "woes" or "sharp contests."' "

30. on wealle, Ettmüller: Hickes, on healle. The alliteration demands the change.

31. cellod, Grein; bord, Kemble: Hickes, Celæs bord. A comparison with Maldon, 283, leaves little doubt as to the correctness of the restoration; the meaning of celled is a more difficult matter. Suggestions are: 'keel-shaped' [Grein]: 'vaulted' [Lat celatus, Kluge]; 'chilled, cold' [Jellinek in P.B.B. xv. 431]; 'leather-covered = cylloð' [Trautmann in B.B. vii. 46]: 'having a boss or beak, cele' [Bosworth-Toller].

Holthausen₂ proposed ce[or]læs, 'the man's, warrior's, shield,' the sg. used collectively: Holthausen₃, clāne.

32. bān-helm means either (1) 'bone-protector,' 'shield,' parallel to bord, or (2) bān-hūs, 'body,' object to brecan, the shield being used in the last resort as a weapon of offence, as it was by Hereward the Wake.

34. eorð-būendra, perhaps 'first of all the dwellers in that land,' i.e. of the natives, Eotenas or Frisians, who are attacking Hnæf and his men.

35. The Guthlaf here, father of one of the assailants, can hardly be identical with the Guthlaf of l. 18, who is one of the besieged. It is probably not a case of the tragic meeting of father and son on opposite sides, for, if so, more would surely have been made of it. It is possible that we are dealing with two heroes of the same name [Klaeber in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 308] or that Gūðlaf here is a corrupt reading [Trautmann, B.B. vii. 48].

36. Hwearf [f]lacra hræw hræfen, 'the quickly moving raven hovered over the corpses,' an emendation hazarded by Bugge [P.B.B. xii. 27: Conybeare had already conjectured hræw], for Hickes' Hwearflacra hrær. But, as Bugge recognized, the sense does not fit the metre. Grundtvig, followed by Grein₂, had suggested hwearflacra hræw, 'the corpses of the swift,' a phrase explaining ǵōdra fæla above. [So Sedgefield.] Jellinek suggests hwearf lādra hræas, 'a crowd of foemen fell' [P.B.B. xv. 431]; Holthausen, hwearf [b]lācra hræas, 'a company of pale [corpses] fell'; Trautmann, hræwblācra hwearf [noun] hræfen wundrode, 'the raven gazed in astonishment at the mass of the corpse-pale [slain].'

40, etc. Cf. Beowulf, 2633 ff.

41. nāfre, Grundtvig: Hickes, nefre.

swānas swētne medo, Grein, partly following Ettmüller: Hickes, swa noc hwitne medo.

43. This line, with the alliteration on the fourth accented syllable, is unmetrical. Hence Rieger and Grein postulated a gap of two half-lines, and suggested various stop-gaps which Möller finally improved into hiǵ fuhton fif dagas [forðǵerimed ond nihta oðer swylc] swā hyra...

and Trautmann

hiǵ fuhton fif dagas [ferhð-grimme hæled ond niht eal-swā: hyra...

- driht-gesiða, ac hig ðā duru hēoldon.
 45 Ðā Ʒewāt him wund hæleð on wæg Ʒangan, sæde þæt his byrne ābrocen wære, here-sceorp unhrōr, and ēac wæs his helm ðȳrl.
 Ðā hine sōna frægn folces hyrde, hū ðā wīgend hyra wunda Ʒenāeson,
 50 oððe hwæþer ðæra hyssa * * *

44. duru must be pl., and is very probably an error for dura. Similar miswritings of u for a occur in ll. 3 and 27.

46, etc. It seems impossible to decide who is the wounded champion or whether the king who enquires is Hnæf or Finn. Is it possible that the speaker is Hnæf, who enquires why the wīgend, the opposing warriors, seem to recover miraculously from the blows which his men give them? The position would then be identical with that in Heimskringla [ed. Jónsson, i. 449], when King Olaf Tryggvason 'looked forward on the ship and saw his men swinging their swords and smiting fast, but that the swords bit ill, and he shouted, "Is it because ye raise your swords so dully that I see they bite not?" A man answered, "Our swords are blunted and broken"....'

47. Hickes has here-sceorpum hrōr, 'the brave one in his battle array,' which can be construed as in apposition to wund hæleð. Thorpe, followed by Bugge and most editors, here-sceorp unhrōr, in apposition with byrne, an exceedingly probable emendation. The interpretation of unhrōr is, however, not clear. Is it 'not stirring' in the sense of 'firm,' 'trusty,' 'his byrnie was broken, his trusty war gear,' or is it 'not stirring,' 'inactive,' 'useless,' 'his byrnie was broken and his war gear useless'? So Hialto exclaims in the Bjarka mál, as translated by Saxo [Bk. II, p. 65],

*Iam dure acies et spicula scutum
 Frustratim secuere meum, partesque minutim
 Avulsas absumpsit edax per prelia ferrum...
 Rupti etenim clypei retinacula sola supersunt.*

48. Holthausen, transposes, for the metre; þā frægn hine sōna.

50. Rieger [Z.f.d.A. xlviii. 12] suggests that the struggle probably ended by the hall being fired, Hnæf and his sixty men being driven into the open, and Hnæf there slain by Finn. This is improbable, for in that case we may presume that they would have all been overwhelmed, whilst we gather from Beowulf, 1082-5, that after Hnæf's death they were able, under Hengest's leadership, to hold out against Finn successfully to the end.

GENEALOGICAL TABLES

The names of the corresponding characters in Scandinavian legend are added in italics; first the Icelandic forms, then the Latinized names as recorded by Saxo Grammaticus.

PERSONS AND PLACES

The student will find particulars of many of the persons and places mentioned in Beowulf in the following books (among others):

Chadwick, Origin of the English Nation, 1907.

Clark, Sidelights on Teutonic History during the Migration Period, 1911.

Chadwick, The Heroic Age, 1912.

The Introduction to the study of Beowulf, supplementary to the present volume, will include a discussion of the origin of the legends most prominent in Beowulf.

Many of the characters mentioned in Beowulf are also referred to in Widsith. The references are to my edition (Cambridge Press, 1912).

Abel, slain by Cain (q.v.), 108.

Ælfhere. Wiglaf is called 'kinsman of Ælfhere,' 2604.

Æschere, Hrothgar's counsellor and comrade in arms, slain and carried off by Grendel's dam in revenge for her son, 1288-1344, 2120-2130.

Ar-Scyldingas, 464, Honour-Scyldings, a name of the Danes; see Scyldingas.

Bēanstān, Breca's father, 524. Müllenhoff² has suggested that the first element in the name may be connected with O.N. bauni, 'dog-fish,' thus echoing the aquatic names of Breca (q.v.) and the Brondingas.

Beorht-Dene, 427, 609, Bright-Danes; see Dene.

Bēowulf the Dane (not the hero of the poem), 18, 53, an ancestor of the Danish king Hrothgar. Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 273, 291.

Bēowulf the Geat (the second scribe, who begins in the MS. in l. 1939, preserves the spelling 'Biowulf,' 1987, 1999, etc.), the hero of the poem, first mentioned as 'Hygelac's thane' in l. 194, first named in l. 343. He is the son of Ecgtheow (263, etc.); his mother's name is not given, but she was the daughter of Hrethel, king of the Geatas, and therefore sister of Hygelac (371-5). After his seventh year Beowulf was brought up at the court of his grandfather, Hrethel (2428-34). In his youth (like many other heroes of legend) he was despised as slothful (2183-9), but when he grew up his hand had the strength of thirty other men's (379, cf. 2361). He gained glory in a swimming match with Breca (506-581), voyaged to Heorot, the hall of Hrothgar, king of the Danes, and purged it from the ravages of Grendel and Grendel's mother (q.v.), with both of whom he wrestled successfully. It is as a 'hand-slayer' (2502) that he attains his chiefest fame (2684 ff.).

- see 283" -
Beowulf's name

He accompanied Hygelac in his fatal expedition against the Hetware, and saved his own life, after the fall of his king, by swimming (2359 ff.). He refused the throne, offered him by Hygelac's widow (2369 ff.); acted as guardian and protector to Hygelac's son Heardred (2377), and on the death of the latter became king of the Geatas, whom he ruled for fifty years (2209). Finally he slew, and was slain by, a fiery dragon (2210, etc.).

The setting against which Beowulf's exploits are depicted is historic: Hygelac was undoubtedly ruling the Geatas in the years following 500 A.D., and there is no reason to doubt that the other sovereigns mentioned are equally authentic. The contrast in tone between this historic setting and the fanciful character of Beowulf's chief exploits is obvious, and has led to the widely prevalent theory that our hero is a compound of a historic prince (Beowulf of the Geatas) and a mythical monster-quelling Beowa, who would be identical with the Beow, son of Seeldwea (Scyld), found in the Anglo-Saxon genealogies. The theory of double origin derives some support from the fact that our poem recognizes two Beowulfs, one the son of Scyld and the other the prince of the Geatas. Presumably the monster-slaying exploits have been transferred from the one to the other; but this theory does not admit of proof. For further details see Introduction to Beowulf: and for theories as to the etymology of the name Beowulf see (inter alia) Cosijn⁴²; Bugge in Tidskr. viii. 287; Binz in P.B.B. xx. 153, 159; Sarrazin in Engl. Stud. xlii. 19.

Breca, son of Beanstan (524), and a chief of the Brondingas (521). Unferth taunts Beowulf with his unsuccessful swimming-match with Breca. Beowulf asserts that he was the better swimmer, and could have out-paced Breca, but did not wish to do so (543).

Breca probably had a place in Old English legend, quite independently of Beowulf: he is mentioned as prince of the Brondingas, and a famous ruler, in Widsith, l. 25. The names are suggestive of a sea-story: brecan is used in O.E. of a ship dashing over the waves (Elene, 244, Andreas, 223, 513), and branding has for centuries been in use among the sailors of the North Sea to signify 'breakers,' 'surge.' But we need not therefore regard Breca as a mythological abstraction of the sea, which Beowulf conquers. A swimming contest between young men is a favourite episode in Germanic story. Cf. Bugge⁵¹.

Brondingas, 521, see Breca.

Brōsinga mene (Icel. Brisinga men), the famous Brising necklace. The collar given to Beowulf is compared with it (l. 1197 ff.). Incidentally we are told that Hama carried off the Brōsinga mene from Eormenric. In Scandinavian poetry the Brisinga men is the adornment of the goddess Freyja; but although Eormenric (q.v.) is a well-known figure in this Old Norse poetry, he is there in no way connected with the necklet. Elaborate theories have been invented, especially by Müllenhoff, to connect the Scandinavian references to the necklet with the English and German references to Eormenric, but these theories are necessarily hazardous. See Widsith, Introduction, p. 30, etc.

Cāin is the ancestor of Grendel (107 ff., 1261 ff.), as of monsters and giants generally: see Emerson, "Legends of Cain, especially in Old and Middle English," in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. Amer. 1906, xxi. 831, particularly § vi., on "Cain's descendants." Such a theological view of Grendel is not an isolated one, limited to the two passages where Cain's name occurs, but runs through the whole earlier portion of the poem. Contrast the dread (but not hellish) fire drake. For further notes on Cain's kin, cf. Bugge⁸¹⁻²; Kittredge, P.B.B. xiii. 210.

Dæghrefn (dat. 2501), a warrior of the Hugas, seems to have killed Hygelac (cf. 1207-14 with 2503-4). Beowulf was his 'hand-slayer' (2501-8).

Dene (gen. Dena 242, Deniga 271, Denia 2125), the Danes, the subjects of Hrothgar. Their head-place is Heorot (q.v.), and their territory includes what is now the southern extremity of Sweden (Skaane), which is, indeed, the only portion of their kingdom specifically mentioned by name in our poem (Scede-landum, 19; Sceden-ig, 1686). They are called by various names: Beorht-Dene, Gār-Dene, Hring-Dene, in allusion to their warlike character; Ēast-Dene, Norð-Dene, Sūð-Dene, West-Dene, in allusion to their wide distribution; Scyldingas, Ingvine, and Hrēðmen, all of which see.

Eadgils, son of Ohthere.

What is told of the brothers Eadgils and Eanmund in the poem, as in the case of the other allusions and episodes, must have been originally intended for hearers who were supposed to know all about them. For us, the order and nature of the events referred to are often by no means clear. In this particular instance, however, it is not difficult to put together a complete story, as we have the Scandinavian accounts to help us.

Eanmund and Eadgils are banished from Sweden for rebellion against their uncle, king Onela (2379 ff.), and take refuge at the court of the Geat king, Heardred. The fact of their finding an asylum with his hereditary foes (see Ongentheow) causes Onela to invade the land of the Geatas (2202 ff.) and to slay Heardred (2384 ff.); but Beowulf succeeds to the throne (2389-90). Beowulf at a later time (2392) balances the feud by supporting Eadgils in the invasion of Sweden, in which Eadgils slays the king, his uncle Onela (2391 ff.), and takes the throne. This version of the story is confirmed by reference to the Norse accounts, in which Aðils (=Eadgils) slays Āli (=Onela) on the ice of Lake Wener (see l. 2396). Cf. Clark, Sidelights, 149, etc.; and Introduction to Beowulf.

Eafor (gen. 2964). See Eofor.

Eanmund, 2611, son of Ohthere; see Eadgils. Fighting, together with his brother Eadgils, against his uncle Onela, he was slain by Weohstan, who was at that time obviously a retainer of Onela. See note to l. 2603.

Earna-næs, 3031, Eagles'-ness, near the scene of Beowulf's fight with the dragon.

Ēast-Dene, 392, 616, East-Danes; see Dene.

Ecglāf, 499, father of Unferth.

Ecgbēow (Ecgbēo, 373; gen. Ecgbīoes, 1999), father of Beowulf the Geat; married the only daughter of Hrethel, king of the Geatas and father of Hygelac (373-5). Having slain Heatholaf, the Wylfing, Ecgtheow seeks protection at the court of Hrothgar in the early days of his kingship; Hrothgar accepts his fealty, and settles the feud by a money-payment (459 ff.).

Ecgwela, 1710 (see note), apparently an ancient king of the Danes.

Eofor (dat. Iofore, 2993, 2997), a warrior of the Geatas, son of Wonred and brother of Wulf. He comes to the aid of Wulf in his combat with Ongentheow, whom he slays. Hygelac liberally rewards both the brothers, and gives his only daughter to Eofor (2484 ff., 2961 ff.). [Weyhe, in Engl. Stud. xxxix. 14, etc., seeks to connect this episode with several Scandinavian tales presenting similar features.]

Eomær (MS. geomor), 1960, son of Offa and Thryth (q.v.).

Eormenric, 1201; see Brōsinga mene. The existence of Eormenric, king of the Goths, is certified by the contemporary evidence of Ammianus Marcellinus (xxi. 3, 1), who records how Ermenrichus (= O.E. Eormenric) warred victoriously against his neighbours, till the Huns broke in upon his extensive empire, after which he slew himself (about the year 375 A.D.). Eormenric was remembered in the traditions of all the Germanic peoples as the type of a tyrant: he was supposed to have slain his wife Swanhild and his nephews the Harlungen (O.E. Here-lingas), and to have persecuted and exiled a third nephew, Theodoric of Verona. This last evil deed is chronologically impossible, the supposed nephew not having been born till eighty years after the death of the supposed uncle. The story of the murder of Swanhild is based on a cruel vengeance which the king is stated to have executed upon the wife of a traitor who had escaped him (Jordanes, xxiv.). Of the origin of the tale of the murder of the Harlungen we know nothing. By a series of most hazardous conjectures it has been argued that it was through this murder that Eormenric became possessed of the Brōsinga mene, which Hama in turn stole from him.

How well-known Eormenric was in Old English tradition is proved from the references to him in Widsith and Deor. See Clark, Sidelights, 232, etc.; Widsith, Introduction, pp. 15-36.

Eotenas, 1072, 1088, 1141, 1145; see Finn.

Finn (Fin, 1096, 1146, 1152; gen. Finnes, 1068, etc.), king of the Frisians, in some way comes to blows with Hnæf, the brother of his wife Hildeburh. Hnæf is the son of Hoc and lord of the Hocingas (Widsith, l. 29), who are a Danish, or at least half-Danish, clan (and are therefore called Healf-Dene, q.v.). Hnæf is slain, but ultimately vengeance for his death is taken upon Finn.

The story has to be pieced together from the short fragment of the Lay of Finnsburg, and from the references in the Finn-Episode in Beowulf (1068-1159), which are allusive and obviously intended for people who knew the story quite well. Agreement has not been reached as to the relation of these two versions. According to Möller, Hnæf attacks Finn, in vengeance for an old quarrel, in which Finn had carried off his sister Hildeburh by force and slain his father Hoc. [For all this there is no evidence whatever.] Hnæf is slain, and peace made between Finn and Hengest, the successor of Hnæf and captain of the Danish survivors. But the Frisians, Möller assumes, break the truce and attack Hengest. This, according to him, is the night attack described in the Fragment.

Möller's view is open to at least half a dozen objections, of which the most serious are (1) that it forces us to suppose that the 'war-young king' who is attacked by night in the Fragment is Hengest, whilst the evidence would lead us to suppose it to be Hnæf; and (2) that it forces us to assume a stirring night attack to have taken place between ll. 1145 and 1146 of the Episode, although there is no mention of it there.

This theory is, therefore, now generally discredited, and most recent scholars follow in the main the view of Bugge: that Finn attacked Hnæf by night, and that this is the night attack narrated in the Fragment; and that it is also the struggle which is alluded to in the Episode as preceding those further events which the Episode then narrates more at length.

Bugge's theory, though much more satisfactory than that of Möller, involves a very serious difficulty: it forces us to suppose that the Danish survivors ultimately entered the service of the Frisian king, in spite of the fact that he had slain their lord by treachery. Such conduct would be contrary to all the ties of Germanic honour, and cannot be reconciled with the praise which, in the Fragment, is given to the bearing of the Danish thanes.

The responsibility for the attack is placed, in Beowulf, upon a people called the Eotenas, whom critics have identified either with the Frisians [so Bugge, etc.] or with the Danes [so Möller] according to the view taken as to the beginning of the fight. Neither identification is very satisfactory, and a better solution is, I think, to be found by supposing the Eotenas to be a distinct tribe, possibly identical with the Ēote or Țte, whom modern historians know as Jutes.

Archæological and historic evidence points to the Frisians having been a great nation, whilst the other tribes mentioned as taking part in the struggle—the Hōcingas or Healfdene, the Secgan, and the Eotenas—are small and obscure clans. For it is clear that the Hōcingas or Healfdene, though Danish, are not identical with the Danish nation proper, which was never ruled by kings named Hōc or Hnæf.

Finn, king of the Frisians, probably called a meeting of chieftains of subordinate clans subject to or allied with him, such as we read of in the Norse sagas. At this meeting a night attack was made upon Hnæf and the Hōcingas by Garulf, presumably prince of the Eotenas. It may be assumed that the supreme chief, Finn, had no share in this treachery, though he had to interfere in order to end the conflict, and to avenge his son, who had fallen in the struggle. It is quite possible that Finn slew Hnæf with his own hands, but this does not necessarily follow from his being called the 'slayer of Hnæf' (l. 1102) since the chief is responsible for the acts of his followers. So Hygelac is called 'slayer of Ongentheow' (l. 1968).

Such a succession of events would explain allusions in the poem not explicable on other hypotheses, and the action of the Danish survivors, in making peace with Finn, becomes less unintelligible if Finn had no hand in the original treachery, and interfered only to avenge a slain son. That, nevertheless, this peace should have been broken, and Finn in the end slain, is quite in accordance with the usual development of a Germanic feud. Compare the story of Ingeld, and other tales where the tragic interest lies not merely in the actual fighting, but in the struggle in the minds of the heroes, who have to harmonize the duty of revenge with other conflicting claims.

Finna, 580, the Finns. The sea washed Beowulf up on their land at the end of his swimming-match with Breca.

Fitela, 879, 889, nephew and comrade of the outlaw Sigemund (q.v.). Their adventures are told at length in the Icelandic Völsunga Saga. Völsung (= O.E. Wæls), the father of Sigmund and Signy, is treacherously slain, with his retinue, by the husband of Signy, on a visit. Sigmund alone escapes, and becomes an outlaw. Signy sends him as helper her son Sinfjötli (= Fitela), who is also Sigmund's own son. They take their vengeance, and Sigmund regains his father's throne. But Sinfjötli is at last slain through the wiles of Sigmund's wife, whose kin he has slain. Sigmund takes the corpse of Sinfjötli to the sea, and places it in a small boat to be ferried across a fiord: whereupon both the boat and the boatman, who is doubtless Odin, vanish.

Folcwalda, 1089, the father of Finn.

Froncan, 1210, see Froncan.

Frēawaru (acc. Freaware 2022), daughter of Hrothgar and Wealhtheow, and wife of Ingeld. See Ingeld.

Frēsan, 1093, 2915, see Frȳsan.

Frēa-cyning, 2503, the king of the [West] Frisians; see Frȳsan.

Frēs-lond (pl.), 2357, the land of the [West] Frisians; see Frȳsan.

Frēs-wæl, 1070, the Frisian field or place of battle, where Hnæf fell; see Finn.

Frōda, 2025, father of Ingeld (q.v.).

Froncan (gen. Francna 1210), the Franks. Hygelac was defeated and slain, in his historic invasion of the Netherlands, by a combined army of Frisians and Franks (1202 ff., 2910 ff.).

Frȳsan (gen. Frēsena 1093, Frȳana 1104, Frēsna 2915), the Frisians. The Frisians are alluded to in two connections, (1) as the people of Finn (q.v.; 1068 ff.), who are apparently the main body of the Frisians, dwelling east and north of what is now the Zuyder Zee; (2) as the [West] Frisians, who combined with the Franks against Hygelac (1202 ff., 2912 ff.). The land of the former is called 'Frȳs-land' in l. 1126, that of the latter 'Frēs-lond' (pl.) in l. 2357, 'Frēsna land' in l. 2915; but that this is a purely accidental distinction is clear from Widsith, where the e and y are reversed (ll. 27, 68).

Frȳs-land, 1126, the land of the Frisians. See Frȳsan.

Gār-Dene, 1, 601, 1856, 2494, Spear-Danes; see Dene.

Gārmund, 1962. Eomær is said to be 'nefa Gārmundes.' Garmund is presumably the Wærmund of the Mercian genealogy of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, in which Offa and Eomær also appear.

Gēat, 640, 1301, 1785, 1792, the Geat (i.e. Beowulf). Used in the gen. pl., Bēowulf Gēata, 'Beowulf of the Geatas,' 374, 1191, 1202, etc. [Cf. Sievers in P.B.B. xxix. 309-11.]

Gēatas (gen. Gēotena 443), the people to whom Beowulf belonged. They are also called Gūð-Gēatas, Ĥrēðlingas, Sæ-Gēatas, Weder-Gēatas, and Wederas. Evidence both etymological and historical is in favour of the identification of the Geatas with the inhabitants of what is now Southern Sweden, south of the great lakes (the Swedish Götar, O.N. Gautar). We have references in Greek writers to these Gautoi as an independent nation in the second century, and again in the sixth; and though at a later date they were absorbed in Sweden, the title of the king of Sweden, rex Sveorum Gothorumque, commemorates to the present day the old distinction.

Another theory (the warmest advocates of which have been Fahlbeck, Bugge, and Schütte) identifies the Geatas with the Jutes. But the arguments in favour of this view are not conclusive.

Cf. Bugge¹, etc.; ten Brink¹⁹⁴, etc.; Schück, Folknamnet Geatas, Upsala, 1907; Schütte in J.E.G.Ph. xi. 574, etc.; Introduction to Beowulf.

Gēat-mecgas (dat. Gēat-mægum 491, gen. Gēat-mecga 829), Geat men, referring to the fourteen Geatas (207) who accompanied Beowulf to Heorot.

Gifðas (2494), probably the Gepidae, a people closely akin to the Goths, and originally their neighbours, dwelling near the mouth of the Vistula. They migrated south in the third century, and founded a kingdom in what is now S.E. Hungary, which was overthrown by the Langobardi in the sixth century. After this the Gepidae disappear from history, though their mention here and in Widsith (l. 60) points to the name having survived in tradition.

Grendel (gen. Grendles 127, 195, 2002, etc., Grendeles 2006, 2118, 2139, 2353; dat. Grendle 666, 930, 1577, 2521, etc.), the famous monster, slain by Beowulf. He is of the kindred of Cain (1265 ff.). His father is unknown (1355).

Grendles mōdor (Grendeles mōdor 2118, 2139), Grendel's dam, the slaying of whom is Beowulf's second great exploit. She is sometimes spoken of as a male, sometimes as a female; cf. ll. 1260, 1379, 1392, 1394, 1497, 2136 with 1292 ff., 1339, 1504 ff., 1541 ff.

Gūð-Gēatas, 1538, War-Geatas; see Gēatas.

Gūðlāf, 1148, a Danish warrior under Hnæf and Hengest. Since it was customary to give brothers names in which the same element occurred, it is probable, on a priori grounds alone, that the Ordlaf who is associated with Guthlaf (F. 18) is his brother, and that Hunlaf, who would be the father of Hunlafing, is a third brother. This is confirmed by the discovery of Chadwick, that, in the Latin summary of the Skjöl- dunga Saga, a Danish king named Leifus is mentioned, who had seven sons, three of whom were called Hunleifus, Oddleifus, and Gunnleifus, names which correspond exactly to Hunlaf, Ordlaf, and Guthlaf.

Gūð-Scilfingas, 2927, War-Scylfings; see Scylfingas.

Hæreð, 1929, 1981, the father of Hygd, Hygelac's wife. [Cf. Binz, P.B.B. xx. 162.]

Hæðcyn (Hæðcen 2925, dat. Hæðcynne 2482), second son of Hrethel, king of the Geatas. He accidentally kills his elder brother Herebeald with an arrow during his father's lifetime (2435 ff.); succeeds to the throne at his father's death, but falls in battle at Ravenswood fighting against the Swedish king Ongentheow (2923 ff.).

Hæ(ð)nas. See note to l. 1983.

Halga, 61, 'the good' (til), younger brother of Hrothgar. He is the father of Hrothulf (1017, etc.), for he corresponds to the Scandinavian Helgi, the father of Rolf Kraki (= Hrothulf).

Hama, 1198; see Brōsinga mene. Hama is the Heime of continental German tradition, the comrade of Wittich (O.E. Wudga, Widia), with whom he is also associated in Old English story (Widsith, ll. 124, 130). In German, just as in Old English legend, Hama harries and robs the tyrant Eormenric (Ermrich, Erminrek).

Cf. Bugge⁹⁹, Widsith, Introduction, pp. 48-57.

Healfdene, 57, king of the Danes, son of Beowulf the Scylding. As father of Hrothgar and Halga (= Hroarr and Helgi), he is known to us from Scandinavian sources.

Healf-Dene, Half-Danes, the tribe to which Hnæf belongs; see l. 1069. The name may perhaps signify a tribe akin to the Danes, but independent, or half independent, of the central Danish power at Leire (Heorot).

Heardrēd, son of Hygelac and Hygd. While still under age (2370) he succeeds his father as king of the Geatas, so that Beowulf for a time acts as his counsellor and protector (2377). He is slain by the Swedes under Onela (2200 ff., 2379 ff.).

Heaðo-Beardan (2032, etc.), the tribe to which Ingeld (q.v.) belongs. They have been identified with the Langobardi, the tribe from whom the Lombards are descended; and with the Heruli, who are known to have been at feud with the Danes. But evidence for either identification is insufficient, though early kinship with the Langobardi is probable enough. Cf. Widsith, ed. Chambers, pp. 205-6.

Heaðolāf, 460, a warrior of the Wylfings, slain by Ecgtheow, the father of Beowulf.

Heaðo-Rēamas, 519, the people on whose shores Breca is cast after his swimming-match with Beowulf. The name is given more correctly in Widsith (l. 63) as Heaðo-Rēamas: they are the Old Norse Raumar, and have given their name to Romerike in Southern Norway, near the modern Christiania.

Heaðo-Scilfingas (gen. sg. Heaðo-Scilfingas 63), 2205, Battle-Scylfings; see Scylfingas.

Helmingas, 620. Hrothgar's queen, Wealhtheow, is 'a woman of the

- Helmings,' but we have no satisfactory information as to the clan. [Cf. Binz, P.B.B. xx. 177.]
- Hemming, 1944*, 1961*. 'Kinsman of Hemming' describes both Offa (q.v.) and his son Eomær.
- Hengest, 1083, 1091, 1096, 1127, took command of the Danes after Hnæf's fall; see Finn.
- Heorogār (Heregār 467, Hiorogār 2158), 61, eldest son of Healfdene, and elder brother of Hrothgar (468). His arms are given by Hrothgar to Beowulf, and Beowulf gives them to Hygelac (2155 ff.).
- Heorot (Heort 78, dat. Heorute 766, Hiorte 2099), the hall Heorot or Hart, which Hrothgar built (67 ff.). The site of Heorot can almost certainly be identified with Leire in Seeland, which, according to Scandinavian tradition, was the capital of the kings whose names correspond to Hrothgar and Hrothulf.
- Heoroweard, 2161, son of Heorogar; see Hrothulf.
- Herebeald, 2434, 2463, eldest son of the Geat king Hrethel, accidentally killed with an arrow by his brother Hæthcyn (2435 ff.).
- Heremōd, 901, 1709, a Danish king, is twice introduced as a kind of stock example of a bad and cruel king. In the end he is betrayed into the hands of his foes (903). He would seem to have preceded Scyld, and it must have been after his fall that the Danes suffered owing to lack of a lord (cf. l. 15). See Chadwick, Origin, 148 ff., 272 f., 291 ff.; Bugge³⁷, etc.
- Hereric, 2206. Heardred is called 'Hererices nefa.' Probably Hereric was the brother of Hygd; the tie with the uncle on the mother's side was always peculiarly close.
- Here-Scyldingas, 1108, the Army-Scyldings; see Scyldingas.
- Hetware, 2363, 2916, the Hattuarii, the tribe against whom Hygelac made the raid in which he met his death. They were a Frankish people, and seem, in classical times, when they are first mentioned as submitting to Tiberius, to have been dwelling between the Rhine and the present Zuyder Zee. Subsequently they spread higher up the Rhine, to the neighbourhood of the modern Cleves, and it was no doubt here that Hygelac attacked the 'Attoarios,' as they are called in the account of this attack given in the Liber Historiæ Francorum (see Hygelac).
- Hildeburh, 1071, 1114, daughter of Hoc (1076), and wife of Finn; see Finn.
- Hnæf, 1069, 1114, fell in the fight with Finn on the 'Frēa-wæl' (1070); see Finn.
- Hōc, father of Hildeburh (1076); see Finn.
- Hondsclo, 2076, the one of Beowulf's fourteen comrades, in his expedition to the Danish kingdom, whom Grendel devoured before attacking Beowulf (740 ff., 2076 ff.).
- Hrefna-wudu, 2925, Ravenswood, where Ongentheow slew Hæthcyn. Also called
- Hrefnes-holt, 2935. See above.
- Hreosna-beorh, 2477, the scene of the marauding invasions of Geatland made by Onela and Ohthere after the death of Hrethel.
- Hrēðel (gen. weak form Hrēðlan 454, gen. Hrēðles 1485), king of the Geatas; he was 'nefa' to Swerting (1203), father of Hygelac, and grandfather of Beowulf (373 ff.), to whom he left his coat of mail (454). He died of grief at the loss of his eldest son Herebeald (2435 ff.), who was accidentally shot by his own brother Hæthcyn.

Hrēðling, son of Hrethel; applied in l. 1923 to Hygelac, and in l. 2925 to Hæthcyn.

Hrēðlingas, 2960, the people of Hrethel, the Geatas; see Gēatas.

Hrēð-men, 445, a name of the Danes; see Dene.

Hrēðric, 1189, 1836*, son of Hrothgar.

Hring-Dene, 116, 1279, Ring-Danes; see Dene.

Hrones-næs, 2805, 3136, 'Whale's Ness.' Beowulf, in his dying speech, names this place as the site of the barrow which is to hold his ashes and perpetuate his name.

Hrōðgar, 61, etc., king of the Danes, and builder of Heorot. The Scandinavian records (Saga of Rolf Kraki, Saxo Grammaticus) know him as 'Hroarr' or 'Roe.'

Hrōðmund, 1189, son of Hrothgar.

Hrōðulf, 1017, 1181, the son of Hrothgar's younger brother Halga (q.v.). He lived at the Danish court. Wealhtheow expresses the hope that he will be good to their children in return for their kindness to him, if he survives Hrothgar (1180 ff.). It would seem that this hope was not destined to be fulfilled (1164-5). We know from Scandinavian sources that Roluo (Hrothulf) deposed and slew Røricus (Hrethric) and that finally his hall was burnt over his head and he himself slain by Hiarwarus (Heorowearð).

Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 146, etc.; Widsith, Introduction, pp. 81, etc.; Introduction to Beowulf; Clark, Sidelights, 63, etc.

Hrunting, 1457, 1490, 1659, 1807, the sword of Unferth (q.v.), which he lends to Beowulf for his fight with Grendel's mother. {Hrunting}

Hūgas, 2502, 2914. A name for the Franks current in Germanic epic poetry.

Cf. the Quedlinburg Annals, "olim omnes Franci Hugones vocabantur a suo quodam duce Hugone" (Monumenta Germ., folio, SS. III. 31).

Hunferð, see Unferð.

Hūnlāfing, 1143, the son of Hunlaf. Hunlaf is almost certainly a brother of Guthlaf and Ordlaf, and therefore a warrior on the Danish side. When the son of Hunlaf places a sword in Hengest's bosom, this signifies that Hengest enters his service. It may be that Hunlaf was slain by Finn's men in the fighting at Finnsburg, and that, by doing allegiance to his son, Hengest undertakes to help to avenge him, and thus to break his oath to Finn and the Eotenas.

Hygd, 1926, 2172, 2369, daughter of Hæreth (1929), wife of Hygelac (q.v.), and mother of Heardred; see 1926 ff., and Hygelac.

Hygelāc (usually spelt Higelāc, 435, etc.; Hygelāc 2151, etc.; gen. Hygelāces 2386, 2943, Higelāces 194, etc., Hylāces 1530; dat. Hygelāce 2169, Higelāce 452, etc.), the reigning king of the Geatas during the greater part of the action of the poem. He is the third son of Hrethel, and uncle to Beowulf; see genealogical tables.

When his brother Hæthcyn was defeated and slain by Ongentheow at Ravenswood (2924), Hygelac came quickly in pursuit (2943) and put Ongentheow to flight (2949); but though, as the leader of the attack, he is called 'Ongentheow's banesman' (1968), the actual slayer was Eofor (q.v.), whom Hygelac rewards with the hand of his only daughter (2977 ff.). At the later time of Beowulf's return from his expedition against Grendel, Hygelac, who is still young (1831), is married to Hygd, who is herself 'very young' and has not long been queen (1926-8); she would seem then to have been his second wife.

Hygelac came by his death in his historical invasion of the Netherlands, which is four times referred to in the poem (1202 ff., 2354 ff., 2501 ff., 2913 ff.), and occurred between 512 and 520 A.D. We have an account of this raid of 'Chlochilaicus' (sic) in the History of Gregory of Tours, who wrote in the same century in which it took place; and in the anonymous Liber Historiæ Francorum, which, though much later, preserves original features which are wanting in the earlier account.

Cf. Clark, Sidelights, 42, etc.; and Introduction to Beowulf.

Ingeld, 2064, son of Froda (2025), and prince of the Heathobeardan. Beowulf tells Hygelac that Hrothgar's daughter Freawaru is promised in marriage to Ingeld, and that the Danish king hopes thereby to terminate the feud between the two peoples (2024 ff.). Beowulf goes on to foretell that these hopes will prove vain (2067-9). That this was actually the case we learn from Widsith, ll. 45-49, which tells how Ingeld made an unsuccessful attack upon Hrothwulf and Hrothgar at Heorot:

“ Hrōpwulf and Hrōðgār hēoldon lengest sibbe ætsomne suhtorfædran, sibþan hȳ forwraecon Wicinga cynn and Ingeldes ord forbigan, forhēowan æt Heorote Heaðobeardna prym.”

The story of Ingeld (Ingellus) is also told by Saxo Grammaticus, though with some essential variations.

Cf. Clark, Sidelights, 103, etc.; Widsith, Introduction, pp. 79-81.

Ingwine is used in Beowulf, 1044, 1319, as synonymous with 'Danes.' It is obviously connected with the term 'Ingævones,' which, according to Tacitus, was the name of those Germanic peoples who dwelt proximi Oceano. Ing, the eponymous hero from whom the Ingwine claimed to derive their name, is referred to in the Runic Poem, 67-8: 'Ing was first seen among the East Danish folk.'

Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 209, 287-90, 295-6.

Iofor, 2993, 2997; see Eofor.

Merewioing (gen. Merewioingas 2921), the Merwing or Merovingian king of the Franks.

Nægling, 2680, the name of the sword which Beowulf used in his encounter with the dragon.

Norð-Dene, 783, North-Danes; see Dene.

Offa, 1949, 1957, king of the Angles ('Offa wēold Ongle,' Widsith, l. 35). The reference to Offa as a descendant of Garmund and ancestor of Eomær [MS. geomor] identifies him with Offa son of Wærmund, whose name occurs in the Mercian pedigree twelve generations above that of Offa II, the historic king of Mercia. Offa the First must, if this pedigree is accurate, have ruled over the Angles towards the end of the fourth century, whilst they were still dwelling on the Continent; and there is very little doubt that he actually did so. His warlike exploits are alluded to in Widsith (ll. 35-44), and much later we have a detailed account of them in the Danish History of Saxo Grammaticus, and in the Life of Offa I, written at St Albans (both documents belonging to about the year 1200).

The Beowulf poet gives no details of these warlike exploits, but speaks at some length of Thryth, the fierce queen of Offa. In the Lives of the Two Offas, Thryth has been confused with Cynethryth, the historic wife of Offa II, and the story of the fierce wife is attributed in an altered form to the later king. There is little doubt, however, that the tale really belongs to Offa I, and that Thryth is a type of the perilous maiden, known to Germanic and classical story, who causes her wooers to be slain, till at length she meets with her destined lover.

See Suchier in P.B.B. iv. 500; Chadwick, Origin, 118-145; Widsith, Introduction, pp. 84-92; Introduction to Beowulf; and especially Rickert in Mod. Phil. ii. 29-76, 321-376.

Önthere (gen. Öhteres 2380, 2394, 2612, Öhteres 2928, 2932), son of the Swedish king Ongentheow, and father of Eanmund and Eadgils.

Onela, 2616, 2932, brother of Ohthere, and king of Sweden at the time of the rebellion of Eanmund and Eadgils. He invades the land of the Geatas, and slays Heardred (2387). At a later time Beowulf avenges his late king by supporting Eadgils in an invasion of Sweden, in which Onela is slain (2391 ff.). See Eadgils.

Ongenþeow (nom. Ongenþeow 2486, Ongenþio 2924, 2951, Ongenþiow 2961; gen. Ongenþeowes 2475, Ongenþoes 1968, Ongenþioes 2387; dat. Ongenþio 2986), king of the Swedes, and father of Onela and Ohthere. The early strife between the Swedes and the Geatas, in which he plays the leading part, is told in ll. 2472 ff., and more fully in ll. 2910-98. In retaliation for the marauding invasions of Onela and Ohthere (2475), Hætheyn invades Sweden, and captures Ongentheow's queen. Ongentheow then invades the land of her captor, whom he slays, and rescues his wife; but in his hour of triumph he is attacked in his turn by Hygelac near Ravenswood, and falls by the hand of Eofor (q.v.).

Ordláf, a Danish warrior engaged against the Frisians (Finnsburg, 18). In the Finnesburh episode in Beowulf (1148) he is called Oslaf, but that Ordlaf is the more correct form is clear from the Danish form of the name in the Skjöldunga Saga—Oddleif. See Guðláf.

Ösláf, 1148; see Ordláf.

Sæ-Gēatas, 1850, 1986, Sea-Geatas; see Gēatas.

Scede-land (pl.), 19, = Sceden-ig (q.v.).

Sceden-ig (dat. Sceden-igge 1686; O. Norse Skāney), the most southern portion of the Scandinavian peninsula. See note to l. 1686.

Scēfing, 4; see Scyld.

Scyld Scēfing, 4, 19, 26, the mythical founder of the Danish Scylding dynasty. He comes as a child across the sea, and, after a glorious reign, his body is sent back in a funeral ship over the ocean. His mysterious advent rather precludes the idea of his parentage being known. We may then interpret Scyld Scēfing not as 'son of Sceaf' but as 'Scyld with the sheaf,' for according to one version the child was found in the boat with his head resting on a sheaf of corn. Or we may suppose that the story was originally told of Sceaf, and has been transferred to Scyld. The names of both Scyld and Sceaf occur in the West Saxon genealogy, and two Anglo-Latin historians, Ethelwerd and William of Malmesbury, tell the tale, but make the hero Sceaf, not Scyld.

See Chadwick, Origin, 274-285; Widsith, Introduction, pp. 117-121; Introduction to Beowulf.

Scylding (Scilding 2105), 1792, the Scylding, i.e. Hrothgar.

Scyldingas (Scyldungas 2052; gen. Scildunga 2101, Scyldunga 2159, Scyldinga 30, etc.), 58, etc., the Scyldings, descendants of Scyld (q.v.), the name of the reigning Danish dynasty, commonly extended to include the Danish people. They are also called Ar-Scyldingas, Here-Scyldingas, Sige-Scyldingas, and þeod-Scyldingas (q.v.). Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 284, and see Dene.

Scylding (Scilfing 2968), 2487, the Scylding, i.e. Ongentheow.

Scylfingas, 2381, the Scylfings, the name of the reigning Swedish dynasty, extended to the Swedish people in the same way as 'Scyldings' to the Danes. They are also called Gūð-Scylfingas, Heaðo-Scylfingas (q.v.). Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 250.

If the MS. reading of l. 2603 is correct, Beowulf's kinsman Wiglaf belongs to the family of the Scylfings as well as to that of the Wæg-mundings (2814). Wiglaf may have been related to the Swedish house through his mother; Wiglaf's father Weohstan had been in the service of the Swedish king, and may well have wedded a Swedish princess.

Sigemund, 875, 884, son of Wæls, and uncle of Fitela. In our poem Sigemund slays the dragon; in the Völsunga Saga and the Nibelungenlied, it is Sigemund's son, Sigurd or Siegfried, who does the deed. See ll. 874-900. Cf. Chadwick, Origin, 148, 299; Binz in P.B.B. xx. 191.

Sige-Scyldingas, 597, 2004, Victory-Scyldings, a name of the Danes; see Scyldingas.

Sūð-Dene, 463, 1996, South-Danes; see Dene.

Swēon, 2472, 2946*, 2958, 3001, the Swedes, called also 'Swēo-þeod,' and their country 'Swīo-rice.' They are ruled by the Scylding dynasty. Their home was in Sweden, north of the Geatas.

Swēo-þeod, 2922, = Swēon (q.v.).

Swerting, 1203. Hygelac is called his 'nefa.'

Swīo-rice, 2383, 2495, the land of the Swedes, modern Svea Rike; see Swēon.

þeod-Scyldingas, 1019, 'the mighty nation of the Scyldings,' a name of the Danes; see Scyldingas.

pryð, 1931, wife of the Angle king Offa (q.v.), is introduced in contrast to Hygd, in much the same way as Heremod is a foil to Beowulf. She is at first the type of cruelty. But by her marriage with Offa she is subdued and changed. See ll. 1931-62.

Unferð, 499, 580, 1165, 1488 (his name is always 'Hunferð' in the MS., but alliterates with vowels), son of Ecglað, and spokesman (1165, 1456) of Hrothgar, at whose feet he sits (500, 1166). He is of a jealous disposition (503-5), and is twice spoken of as the murderer of his own brothers (587, 1167). For his 'flyting' with Beowulf see ll. 506-606. He afterwards lends his sword Hrunting for Beowulf's encounter with Grendel's mother (1455), but it fails the hero at need (1522, 1659). The sword is returned to Unferth, and according to one interpretation finally given by Unferth to Beowulf (1807).

It has been conjectured that Unferth is the evil counsellor, through whose advice trouble arose between Hrothgar and Hrothulf (q.v.).

Wægmundings, 2607, 2814, Wægmundings, the family to which both Beowulf and Wiglaf belong; see Scyldingas.

Wæls, 897, father of Sigemund; see also Fitela.

Wælsing, 877, son of Wæls, i.e. Sigemund.

Wealhþeow, 612 (Wealhþeo, 664, 1162, 1215; dat. Wealhþeon, 629), of the family of the Helmings (620), Hrothgar's queen. Mention is made of her queenly hospitality to Beowulf (612 ff., 1188 ff., 1215 ff.).

Wederas (gen. Wedera 225, etc.; but the second scribe uses the contracted gen. 'Wedra' everywhere but in l. 2336; see ll. 2120, 2462, etc.), = Weder-Gēatas, a name of the Gēatas (q.v.).

Weder-Gēatas, 1492, 1612, 2379, 2551; see Wederas.

Weder-mearc, 298, Wedermark, apparently a name for the land of the Wederas or Weder-Gēatas, i.e. the Geatas.

Weland, 455 (the Vǫlundr of the Edda), the famous smith of Germanic legend, the maker of Beowulf's coat of mail. (See the Franks' casket in the British Museum, and cf. Wayland Smith's forge in Berkshire.) The best account of Weland will be found in Jiriczek, Die Deutsche Heldensage, 1898, pp. 1-54.

Wendlas, 348. Wulfgar (q.v.) is a 'chief of the Wendlas.' They are probably the inhabitants of Vendil, the modern Vendsyssel in the north of Jutland. We have evidence that the northern portion of Jutland was, at the time of Hrothgar, inhabited by a Danish folk: the Wendlas are therefore probably to be regarded as a Danish clan, subject to Hrothgar.

It is just possible, however, that the Wendlas are the Vandals of history, whose name was long remembered, though at this date they had migrated far south. If so, Wulfgar would be a wandering champion who has settled at the court of Hrothgar. [So Müllenhoff⁸⁹⁻⁹⁰, Bugge⁷.]

There was also a famous Vendil, north of Upsala, but it is not very probable that the Wendlas here referred to are connected with it. See Widsith, l. 59, and the note there given.

Wēohstān, 2613 (gen. Wēohstānes 2862, Wēoxstānes 2602, Wilistānes 2752, etc.), father of Wiglaf, and slayer of Eanmund (q.v.).

West-Dene, 383, 1578, West-Danes; see Dene.

Wiglāf, son of Weohstan. He is a kinsman of Beowulf (2813), a Wægmunding (2814), and a 'chief of the Scyflings' (2603). He was chosen with ten others (2401, 2847) to accompany Beowulf on his expedition against the dragon (2638 ff.), and he alone justified the choice. Taking shelter under Beowulf's shield (2675), he showed the utmost valour, and was the first to wound the dragon (2694 ff.). To him alone Beowulf made his dying speech, and gave his dying bequests (2809 ff.). He upbraids the coward thanes (2886), and gives orders for the burial of the hero in accordance with his dying instructions (2802, 3094 ad fin.).

Wiðergyld, 2051 (see note), the name of a Heathobear warrior.

Wonrēd, 2971, father of Wulf and Eofor (q.v.).

Wonrēding, 2965, son of Wonred, i.e. Wulf (q.v.).

Wulf, 2965, 2993, son of Wonred and brother of Eofor (q.v.). Wulf attacks Ongentheow and is disabled by him, but his brother Eofor comes to his aid and slays Ongentheow single-handed (2964 ff.).

Wulfgār, 348, 360, 390*, a chief of the Wendlas (q.v.); an official of Hrothgar's court, who is the first to greet the Geatas (331 ff.), and introduces them to Hrothgar.

Wylfingas (dat. Wylfingum 461, Wylfingum 471). Heatholaf, who was slain by Beowulf's father, was a warrior of this tribe. They are probably identical with the Wulfingas mentioned in Widsith, 29, and with the Wulfinge who in High German story are the faithful retainers of Theodoric of Verona (Dietrich von Bern). This last identification derives some support from the fact that in both cases members of the family form their names by compounds in heado: e.g. Heatholaf, Hadubrant.

Yrmenlāf, 1324, younger brother of Æschere (q.v.).

PLAN OF GLOSSARY

The order of words is strictly alphabetical, except in the case of compound verbs, which will be found under their simple verbs.

Past participles compounded with ge- are usually glossed under the simple verb (Sievers, § 366), but occasionally an infinitive also compounded with ge- is assumed.

ð and þ are treated as identical, and come after t.

Numerous cross references are given, especially for unusual forms, but not as a rule for mere flexional forms, such as parts of verbs, which a knowledge of grammar should suffice to trace.

All words are glossed under forms which actually occur in the poem, not under normalised forms. When divergent forms of the same word occur and cross references are not given, io (both initial and medial) should be sought under eo ,

y	„ i ,
a (before nasals)	„ o .

Dative and Instrumental are not distinguished, except when they have different forms, as in the singular of adjectives and of some pronouns.

Where the Modern English word is directly connected with the given Old English equivalent it is printed in small capitals. But the student must remember that in 'Beowulf' we normally find the word in its West Saxon form, which often differs from that Anglian form from which the modern word is derived. Where the Modern English word is descended from a related word, whether in O.E. or belonging to some other Germanic dialect, it is printed in small italic capitals. Such related words may naturally show umlaut changes or a different ablaut-grade.

Of course the Modern English etymological equivalent is often quite unsatisfactory as a translation. See Preface, p. xxxiv.

Gothic cognates have been given in cases where it appeared that they would be helpful, but not in cases where the Gothic parallel, without further details, might mislead a student (e.g. Goth. cuēns, O.E. cwēn). When doubtful whether or not to insert a Gothic cognate, I have quoted it if it occurs in parts of the Gothic Bible usually read by students, but have avoided exceptional words.

An Asterisk is placed after the reference in cases where the word is not found in the MS., but is conjecturally restored. ✱

A Study in Old English Heroic Legend

Demy 8vo. 10s net.

"This volume embodies a close and thorough examination of the Old English heroic poem. It deals with the German heroic age which was the environment of 'Widsith,' with its embryonic story material, the critical theories that have been expounded on it, its geography, language and metre. The actual and small text is placed towards the end."—Athenæum

THE MODERN LANGUAGE REVIEW

A Quarterly Journal devoted to the Study of Medieval and Modern Literature and Philology.

Edited by J. G. ROBERTSON, G. C. MACAULAY, and J. FITZMAURICE-KELLY.

The Modern Language Review is the only periodical published in Great Britain which is specially devoted to scholarship and research in Medieval and Modern languages and literature, and, as a necessary auxiliary to academic study, it claims the support of all those who are interested in these subjects. Attention is also called to the fact that English language and literature are receiving a very large share of space in the journal.

The annual subscription (for four numbers appearing in January, April, July and October) is 12s 6d net post free (payable in advance); single numbers, 4s net.
